FOREIGN POWERS BRING PRESSURE ON GEN. HUERTA

Great Britain, France and Japan Are Urging That the Huerta Regime Meet Demands of United States.

HUERTA GOVERNMENT IN DESPERATE STRAITS

No Money to Pay Running Expenses—Washington Expects Important Developments in Next 48 Hours.

Washington, August 23.—Great Britain, France and Japan are among the nations which have interposed their influence upon the Huerta administration in Mexico in support of the efforts of the United States to bring about a peaceful settlement of the revolution.

While administration officials were silent today regarding this phase of the situation there was a lively interest manifest in diplomatic circles here as to the probable effect of foreign pressure on the Huerta government.

It was learned that the Mexican authorities honed President Wilson would not read his message to congre next Tuesday, as he had planned, and showed a disposition to prolong the negotiations. Unless some tangible overtures, however, are received within 48 hours from the Huerta officials, indicating a desire to accept the fundamental proposals of the United States, the president will proclaim to congress and to the world the attitude of this government toward the southern republic.

The fact that diplomats from some of the very countries which not only have formally recognized Huerta, but whose bankers hitherto have floated loans for him, are using their influence on the Mexican administration is calculated to produce something definite shortly, official reports to the Washington administration show the Huerta regime to be in desperate financial straits with little prospect of getting funds anywhere to meet the running expenses of the government or pay its troops, already restive because of deferred payments.

Air of Tense Expectancy.

So important is this aspect of the situation regarded that an air of tense expectancy prevailed today in official circles where it was believed some pronouncement would be forthcoming from Mexico City before President Wilson finally determined to communicate his message to congress.

The insistence of the United States on a constitutional election and the elimination of Huerta was reiterated positively by administration officials—a position which Mr. Lind has been instructed to emphasize. Only concessions by the Huerta government, it is believed here, now would persuade President Wilson to hold up the presentation of his message.

The president finished the document today, read it over to Secretary Bryan and will discuss it Monday with members of the senate and house committees on foreign relations. In the meantime officials will await word from Mexico City as to a possible change of attitude.

The sending of a special envoy from Mexico to Washington further to discuss the situation with President Wilson is regarded here as a dilatory move. It is known that the Washington government has made it clear that such a procedure will not alter the views expressed in its first note. It is believed, however, that the Huerta officials now have abandoned the idea of sending an envoy and are seeking to develop a new basis for negotiation.

More Troops for the Border.

With only three American soldiers available for the protection of each mile of the Mexican border, certain knowledge that quantities of arms and ammunition are being smuggled across the line, consideration has been given in military circles to the dispatch of fresh troops.

The possibility that as a result of the trouble now developing in Mexico federal troops in Mexico the numerous constitutionalist bands may be tempted to cross into Texas and Arizona to escape capture has also been taken into consideration and though no orders have been issued, plans of the army have been fully developed to largely increase the maneuver division under General Carter.

The augmented force would thus be in a position to deploy in strength

Four Wives for Orr And All Are Living Says Sheriff Rector

Atlanta Bride Says She Is Convinced of His Innocence and Will Stick to Him to the End.

Three wives in South Carolina and one in Atlanta, all within the space of twelve months, is the record established by W. J. Orr, 11 Todd street, according to Sheriff Rector, of Greenville, S. C., who came to Atlanta Saturday to take Orr back to Greenville on a warrant charging him with bigamy.

Orr married Susie Beach, of Atlanta, last April after having been in the city only three weeks, and has been living with her at 11 Todd street since that time. He is an electrician and has been employed on the wiring of the new Y. M. C. A. building. It is alleged that Orr married Maude Galloway in Greenville about a year ago and deserted her after living with her only one week. The woman has a 3-month-old child, and learning that Orr was in Atlanta, had a warrant sworn out for him and Sheriff Rector immediately notified the Atlanta authorities, who placed Orr under arrest Saturday morning. It is also charged that Orr has two wives in other points in South Carolina.

The girl who married Orr in Atlanta was prostrated when at his arrest, stating that she knew absolutely nothing of any former marriages having been contracted by Orr. She refused to make any other statement, except to say that she is firmly convinced of Orr's innocence and that she will stick to him to the end.

When seen at the station house last night Orr would give out no statement, simply saying that he was innocent and that when he arrives in South Carolina he will have no difficulty in establishing same. He admitted knowing the Galloway girl, but would say nothing further. He will be taken back to South Carolina today.

PAPERS IN POCKET SAVE B. F. O'SHIELDS' LIFE

Following Quarrel, His Wife Fired Revolver at Him on Saturday Night.

Mrs. B. F. O'Shields, 50 Tennille street, fired a revolver at her husband Saturday night about 10 o'clock, following a family quarrel, the bullet penetrating through O'Shields' coat and being deflected from its course by some heavy papers in his inside pocket, which probably saved his life.

According to Mrs. O'Shields' story, she has been having trouble with her husband for some time, but recently an agreement was reached between the two and everything has passed off peaceably until Saturday night, when he returned to the house after a drinking spree and started to abuse her. After hot words had passed between them, she alleges that O'Shields became enraged and struck her several times with his fist. She told the police who were called in that she was compelled to fire in self-defense.

O'Shields, on the other hand, alleges that his wife shot at him without provocation, and wanted the police to arrest her for attempted murder. Call officers Gorman and Shumate accepted the woman's version of the story and took O'Shields to the station house charged with assault.

I. H. SMITH BITTEN FROM HEAD TO FOOT IN FIGHT WITH BLACK

Millwood, Augusta 23.—(Special.)—In a difficulty between I. H. Smith, a prominent turpentine and commissary man of Hinsonville, seven miles of the south, and John Lobo George, a negro, this morning, the latter attacked Smith and severely bit him from head to foot. The negro directly went home, and Smith, supposing that he was going after his gun, drove to Millwood, purchased a shotgun and a box of shells and returned to Hinsonville.

It is said the trouble arose over money matters, the negro owing Smith $90 for commissary supplies.

Smith says there is not a gun in that part of the country owned by a white man.

"DICE BOX" M'GUIRE INSTRUCTS THE COURT

Chicago, August 23.—"Dice Box" McGuire, more properly known as Eugene Grant, wanted in New York for the alleged theft of railway mileage books, gave a lesson to his trousers today, fixed Municipal Judge Graham with his eye and spoke through a mat of whiskers.

"Judge, they ain't no governor in New York and you know it. You ain't got no right to hold me and it's a doggone shame."

The court held "Dice Box," however, pending the arrival of requisition papers.

WRECKS MOTORCYCLE WHILE DODGING COLT

Ocilla, August 23.—(Special.)—While riding two miles from town on his motorcycle, R. V. Stone, a contractor, in trying to avoid running over a colt, wrecked the machine and was considerably bruised.

This is the third serious accident Mr. Stone has experienced with his motorcycle; at one time breaking three ribs an dthe other running into a tree.

THAW SQUABBLES WITH THE LAWYERS HIRED TO SAVE HIM

Never in Canada's History Has There Been Such a Legal Snarl Within Snarl Before the Courts.

JEROME IS EMPLOYED TO WORK AGAINST THAW

Thaw Is Loquacious, Erratic and Domineering, and His Attorneys Are Kept in Hot Water.

Sherbrooke, Quebec, August 23.—Harry K. Thaw, squabbling with the luminous leading lawyers retained to prevent his return to the Matteawan State Hospital for the Insane, from which he escaped last Sunday morning, tonight apparently was as much in ignorance of the next move in his case as the casual idler around the Sherbrooke jail.

For two hours his counsel conferred this afternoon debating whether they would produce Thaw in court on a writ of habeas corpus next Wednesday or abandon the writ, surrender him to the immigration authorities and countenance his deportation to Vermont, a procedure to which it was said here the immigration officers had agreed. The two-hour talk was preceded by a conference with Thaw as to his preference, but it resulted in no definite decision.

Thaw was loquacious, erratic, domineering, and it was decided to await the arrival here of Roger O'Mara, of Pittsburg, Thaw's detective-guardian. According to the understanding here, he will arrive tomorrow night.

Legal Snarl Within Snarl.

Never in the history of Quebec province or the Dominion of Canada has such a legal snarl within snarl been before the courts.

In brief, Thaw is held on a commitment charging him with being a fugitive from Matteawan, where "he was confined on a criminal charge." This is an error. Acquitted of Stanford White's murder on the ground of insanity, he was held there on no charge, but as a lunatic.

Both sides had admitted that the commitment is defective, and it was then planned that Thaw be released on the writ when arraigned. Why not, then, Thaw's lawyers were asked by immigration authorities, cancel as it were, all your objections to his being held, turn him over to us, have a hearing at Coaticook, where he was first locked up after crossing the border, and we will deport him to Vermont. It will then be up to New York state to extradite him.

But the agents of the immigration authorities here are subordinates, and Thaw's lawyers believe that the final decision in the matter of deportation will come from the minister of the interior, who at present is in Vancouver on a vacation. Facing such a predicament, it was said tonight that the habeas corpus hearing would be held Wednesday.

Another possibility was suggested. Thaw would come into court, plead not guilty to the present charge and demand trial. If this it was said, might not take place until the October term.

"How about it?" Thaw was asked.

"Wait and see," he cried.

Thaw Talks of Jerome.

O'Mara was thus literally the missing keystone in the Thaw forces tonight; and William T. Jerome, Thaw's old enemy and prosecutor, was the missing general of the New York forces. It was said here that Jerome retained by the New York attorney general's department would arrive Sunday.

Thaw did not appear particularly disturbed when told Jerome was hurrying here.

"So Willie's coming," he said. "For once in my life I have lawyers who have the same amount of ability, but I am able to confer with them. I have never had a lawyer except Delmas and maybe a couple of others who were over $25 a day."

A clique of Stanford White's friends have always pursued me and have pursued me up here. But their influence is not what it was. They are learning that New York is trying to treat Canada as a little principality. But I think it is wiser to have come to Canada than to enter Pennsylvania.

Well, I hope Jerome has a good time here. I have a lot of things on Jerome. I was going to spring them at White Plains in 1903, but decided not to. I'll spring them some time, though.

As he rambled on, Thaw had a stenographer taking down what he said. McGuire, on the word about Evelyn Thaw or the child she says is his.

Without O'Mara, Thaw's lawyers are sparring for time. With the arrival of Jerome those here from Duchess county and Albany will drop into the background. Franklin Kennedy, a deputy attorney general from Albany, and Samuel Jacobs, a Montreal lawyer, retained to represent the New York officials in court, went to Montreal on a secret mission this afternoon, returning tonight.

Sure to Get Thaw.

E. A. Conger, district attorney of Duchess county, said tonight that, of course, he and Kennedy would be superseded when Jerome comes.

"I don't believe all this talk about the agreement to deport Thaw to Newport, Vt.," said Conger. "While I understand the immigration agents here have been instructed to use their discretion in the matter, they are, in my opinion, nothing more than policemen and I think the decision is up to the minister of the interior. We will get

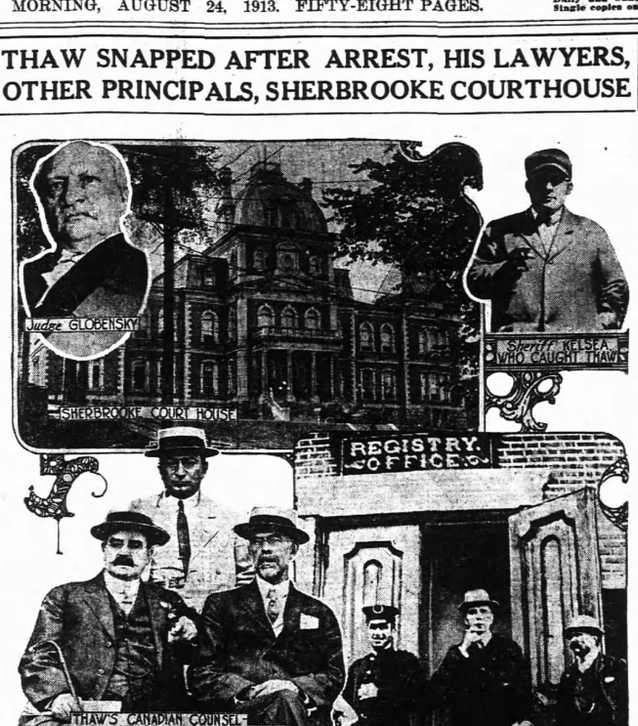
THAW SNAPPED AFTER ARREST, HIS LAWYERS, OTHER PRINCIPALS, SHERBROOKE COURTHOUSE



Harry K. Thaw is shown with the scene of his flight for freedom at Sherbrooke, Canada, and the principals in the action that takes place there. At the county courthouse at Sherbrooke he was arraigned on the return of a writ of habeas corpus granted by Supreme Court Judge Globensky, and he was defended by his Canadian counsel, Colonel H. R. Fraser K. C.; Dr. W. L. Shurtleff, K. C., and C. D. White, K. C. Sheriff B. H. Kelsea, of Colebrook, N. H., who recognized Thaw on the train and trailed him, bringing about his capture, is also shown. He claimed the $500 reward offered by Superintendent Kieb, of Matteawan. The picture of Thaw standing in front of the registry office at Coaticook was snapped hortly after his arrest. He is in charge of Chief of Police Bourassa, of Coaticook, the man in uniform at the left of Thaw.

MRS. LONGSTREET ATTACKS SMITH

In a Warm Communication, She Answers Statements Recently Made in Regard to Gainesville Postoffice.

Several days ago The Constitution published Senator Hoke Smith's version of the part he played in the appointment of Mrs. Ham as postmistress of Gainesville, Ga., over the protest of Congressman Bell, who recommended A. S. Hardy for the place and who was very active in his behalf.

Mrs. Helen D. Longstreet, the former postmistress referred to in Senator Smith's interview and who has figured conspicuously in recent developments in the contest, sends The Constitution the following statement from Washington in reply:

Mrs. Longstreet's Reply.

Editor Constitution: Inasmuch as you gave the version of the Gainesville postoffice case as told by Senator Smith and Congressman Bell, fairness requires that you print the story of the innocent victim of the manipulations of the Smith regime. I write these lines north of Mason and Dixon's line, unwillingly exiled by the Wilson-Smith administration.

In my long and desperate struggle to retain the commission of the Gainesville postoffice, I have found Senator Smith to be a profound hypocrite and a finished knave. He is against the corporations when it helps him to get an office to be against them. He is for the corporations when he thinks it will help him to keep the office he has his clutches on, to be for them. As I had believed in Hoke Smith.

It is true that the fight which was successfully made to oust me from the postal service of Georgia was made by the most corrupt and menacing corporation influences that have ever lifted hydra heads south of the Potomac. But "Big Business" never could have succeeded without the ardent co-operation of the junior senator from Georgia. He had Mrs. Ham appointed and then denied it; just as he betrayed Senator Bacon and robbed Georgia of the second highest place in the organization of the senate and denied responsibility. Senator Smith has a right, which no one will question, to carry the patronage of Georgia in his vest pocket, to dispose exclusively for the advancement of his own political ambitions if Georgians are willing. But he has no right to be a treacherous double-dealer while holding the commission of a sovereign state in this republic in the world's highest deliberative body.

Last fall, about the time Mrs. Ham sold her country home and moved into town just across the street from the Gainesville postoffice, Senator Smith promised her the office; meanwhile he was professing the most ardent friendship for me on having risen above the bitterness of the reconstruction period in opinion, nothing more than policemen and I think the decision is up to the minister of the interior. He will get

SHAMED GIRL'S STORY JAILS FIRST COUSIN

Homer Meroney Bound Over on Charges Brought by Miss Cora Washington.

Rome, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—Behind closed doors in a justice court today, Miss Cora Washington, a beautiful young woman of 20, daughter of one of Floyd county's prominent families, told, with bitter tears and burning blushes, a story that resulted in the binding over to the superior court of her first cousin, Homer Meroney, on a charge of seduction. The girl's father, J. D. Washington, a wealthy farmer of Reesburg, near Rome, is the prosecutor in the case.

Owing to the prominence of the parties involved, and their wide family connection, there is unusual interest in the case. Upon the witness stand Miss Washington told a pathetic story of the events which led to her downfall. She claims to have yielded to Meroney's advances only after promise of marriage. Their acquaintance had extended over many years, and during recent months Meroney had lived at the Washington home. She stated that the wedding date ha dbeen set for January, but before that time the defendant had disappeared. The child, a boy, was born in July. After his birth warrants were sworn out for Meroney, who was arrested in Columbus, Ga.

According to the testimony of Deputy Sheriff Smith, Meroney admitted that he and the girl were engaged, and said he was willing to marry her. In court, however, his attorneys brought out the fact that the defendant had been married several years ago to Miss Cora Winkle, of Polk county; that she had obtained a divorce from him, but that he had been denied the right to marry again. They advanced the plea that Miss Washington knew this state of affairs, and, therefore, could not have been deluded by promise of marriage.

Meroney was unable to raise the required bond, and is in Floyd county jail pending the convening of an adjourned term of Floyd superior court in October.

STOCKHOLDERS APPROVE NEW HAVEN BOND ISSUE

New Haven, Conn., August 23.—Howard Elliott's first meeting today with the stockholders of the New Haven railroad, of which he has just been chosen president, was a stormy session. It was a special meeting, called to authorize $67,552,400 in 6 per cent convertible debenture bonds to provide for the road's floating debt, and several of the stockholders had warm words to say regarding the financial management of the road.

It developed that the financing of the bond issue, in charge of J. P. Morgan & Co., would cost 2 per cent, and some of those present criticized this arrangement, declaring the issue should have been offered to stockholders first. Other speakers expressed surprise that the road had a floating debt and urged publicity in the financial affairs of the road.

The bond issue was finally approved by a vote of 900,000 shares to 6,000.

BANKERS PROPOSE RADICAL CHANGES IN CURRENCY BILL

Committee Named to Go to Washington for the Purpose of Securing Adoption of the Amendments.

ONLY ONE RESERVE BANK FAVORED BY BANKERS

Robert F. Maddox Member of Committee That Will Urge the Administration to Accept the Amendments.

Chicago, August 23.—Bankers from all parts of the country, at the close of a two days' conference, agreed on a number of important amendments to the Owen-Glass currency bill now pending in congress, and appointed a committee of seven to go to Washington and endeavor to have the changes incorporated in the measure. Members of the conference expressed the belief that the administration forces in Washington will be convinced by the arguments they will present and modify the bill so that it will be reasonably satisfactory to the banking and business interests of the country.

The amendments were presented to the conference by a committee on resolutions, and were adopted after long discussion by unanimous vote. The committee went through the currency bill section by section and recommended more than twenty changes.

The committee named by Chairman Hepburn, of New York, to go to Washington and present the recommendations of the conference to President Wilson and Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, included: James H. Forgan, Chicago, chairman; George W. Reynolde, Chicago; E. J. Hill, Norwalk, Conn.; R. F. Maddox, Atlanta; Sol Wexler, New Orleans; Joseph Chapman, Minneapolis, and Festus J. Wade, St. Louis. The committee will go to Washington in a few days to begin its work.

Text of the Resolutions.

The resolutions adopted at the conference read as follows:

"The currency commission of the American Bankers' association, charged with endeavoring to secure remedial banking legislation and regarding the banking measure now pending in congress as evidencing the earnest wish of the administration to give a wise law to the country, has profoundly desired to co-operate in every way. To this end, upon its invitation that the presidents of the forty-seven state

SOLICITOR DORSEY ADDRESSING JURY WHEN JUDGE ROAN ADJOURNED COURT

Whole Day Is Consumed in Speech of Chief Lawyer for Prosecution, Which Will Be Resumed on Monday When Case Will Go to Jury After Charge of Judge.

SLAIN GIRL'S MOTHER AND WIFE OF ACCUSED BREAK DOWN SOBBING

Solicitor Takes Up Alibi of Prisoner and Picks It to Pieces--Tells About Minola McKnight Affidavit and Defends Detective Department—No Doubt That Frank Dictated Murder Notes, He Declares.

Only the limitations of human endurance, taxed to its utmost, kept the Frank case from going to the jury Saturday afternoon.

It will not go to the jury before Monday afternoon.

At twenty minutes to 2 o'clock, after Solicitor Hugh Dorsey had been speaking at top speed for four hours and a half, Judge Roan ordered an adjournment of court until 9 o'clock Monday morning, at which time Mr. Dorsey will resume his speech—a speech which is destined to go down into history as one of the most wonderful efforts ever made at the Georgia bar. Mr. Dorsey had already spoken six hours and forty minutes when, lacking nourishment and rest, he was compelled to let the case go over until Monday morning, much as he desired to see it finished and in the hands of the jury.

Dorsey Is Making A Wonderful Speech.

When Hugh Dorsey was cut short Saturday by adjournment hour, he was given a tumultuous ovation by the crowd that stood on the street in front of the courthouse. He had made a matchless beginning. Of that there was no doubt.

But could he keep it up? That was the question. If there were any who doubted, their doubts were speedily dispelled Saturday when he took up the dark fabric of the crime and the crimson word guilty began to take shape and form under the skill of his logic and eloquence. The spell had not been broken by the hours that had intervened. Rested and refreshed by the night's sleep he once more plunged into the dark story and the searchlight of his reason illumined with made clear many spots which hitherto had been obscure. He patched and pieced and cut and shaped, and under the very eyes of the jury and spectators the state's case took wonderful and frightful form.

When Mr. Dorsey, thoroughly ex-

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

Travers' Golf Book. By Jerome D. Travers. Amateur champion of the United States, 1907, 1908 and 1912. In the preface Mr. Travers' makes the following statement: "Since the day I first won the championship of the United States, in 1907, I have been asked by scores of golfers to write a book relating to my experience and explaining my method of playing the different shots. This I have endeavored to do to the best of my ability in the following pages.

"I attribute my own success as an amateur golfer to the fact that I took up the game at an early age and devoted a great deal of time to it. In the first few pages of the text proper Mr. Travers giving an interesting account of his early experiences with the sport from which the following paragraphs are taken.

"I started playing golf on my father's country estate at Oyster Bay when I was 9 years old. I had watched my brother and my cousins play and the game made a strong appeal to my boyish fancy the very first time I saw them swing their clubs. I was too young even to think of practicing on real golf links and I naturally commenced knocking the balls about on the back lawn of my father's place.

"A windmill stood about 100 yards from the house and when I began playing on my 'home course' I was unable to drive a ball from the windmill to the house. Day after day I swung my mid-iron with all by might . . . but failure crowned every attempt.

"I spent the following winter at school and must have gained a great deal in strength because when spring came I teed up my first ball at the windmill and much to my own surprise covered the one hundred yards so successfully that I sailed it right through one of the dining room windows. I was naturally much elated over this evidence of progress, but when my father returned home that night he did not seem as enthusiastic about the feat as I was."

Mr. Travers then tells how he laid out a three-hole course on his front lawn and he hopes that John D. Rockefeller, who has done the same thing, had as much fun on his private course as he had on his.

While Mr. Travers' book is extremely interesting and clever with its amusing anecdotes, perhaps the most outside of these personal touches which is very instructive for the novice and very valuable to the experienced player and even the "duffer at the game." One of the most interesting chapters is "Why the Business Man Should Play Golf." Each of the various clubs is explained in detail and Mr. Travers posed for photographs showing him playing the different strokes, etc. Another important chapter which will be of interest to all goldfists is "The Etiquette of Golf." The book is beautifully bound in green and gold, with 48 illustrations. (The MacMillan company, New York city.)

JEROME D. TRAVERS.

In The August Century Marshall Whitlatch, a noted golfer, will explain why particularly brainy men often make a poor showing at that sport. They think so hard about hitting the ball in just the proper manner, he says, that their muscles are tensed and the free swing of the stroke is spoiled. His theory, suggested to him by the Montessori system, is that the player should train his mind as well as his muscles, feel out the correct position and aim in action in short, that good golf is all a matter of sub-conscious brain. The soundness of his theory is upheld by his recent scores in the Knickerbocker club contest at the Oakland course.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Century Co. announces the printing of "The Scarlet Rider," by Bertha Runkle. "The Woman in Black," by Edmund C. Bentley, which is proving very popular. Also Kipling and the thirty-second large edition of Kipling's attractive and interesting "Jungle Book." A new edition of "Lal" will be issued this fall in a rich binding of green and gold, with sixteen illustrations in full color by the English artists, Maurice and J. Dwart Boyd.

Among the fall publications of Yale University Press, announced for spring is "The Scarlet Rider," by Rev. Charles Burkhardt, entitled "The Pulpit and the Penny Press," and full of anecdotes drawn from actual experience. Also "Living Issues," by Rev. Charles Burkhardt.

Miss Elsie de Wolf, probably the most successful woman decorator in the country, has put into a book the chronicle of her experiences which will be called "The House in Good Taste," and will show introductions of forty-eight interiors decorated by Miss de Wolfe.

McBride, Nast & Co. announce new printings of "The Children of the Shadow," by Ernest A. Boller. "Under the Sky in California," by Charles Francis Saunders.

George H. Doran company reports to have a goodness for the letter "B." Two of the authors whose novels they have published this month begin their names with the "well known letter." J. E. Buckrose, author of "Because of Jane," and Harold Begbie, author of "Rising Tide." Also Canon Rawnsley, G. A. Birmingham and J. J. Bell.

Jesse Bowman Young, author of "The Battle of Gettysburg," received an enthusiastic welcome in Minneapolis on the occasion of the lecture on Gettysburg he recently delivered in that city. Major John Bigelow, of the Ninth Massachusetts battery, and the first Harvard graduate to enter the war, presided at the lecture.

Moffat, Yard & Co. will publish in book form this month the beautiful pictures in color illustrative of the "Seasons Land," which appeared in the July number of Scribner's Magazine.

"The New Dawn" is the title of the latest novel from the pen of Agnes C. Laut.

"The Quest of the Best" is announced for publication in September by the Thomas Y. Crowell company. President William de Witt Hyde, the author, is very much interested in boys, and this book will be a great help to workers along that line.

"John Barleycorn," by Jack London, will be published this month, and the author claims that this book is "his own story of his life."

"How to Become a Good Card Player" is another interesting book by Mrs. Meyer, who is well known as a teacher of cards. This book will soon be published by Paul Elder & Co., of San Francisco, who also have a novelty in preparation on popular card games, score slates for lily auction and 500, all to be included in a card case which will make it both an attractive and useful card set.

During the Wilson administration there may be an opportunity to observe the effect of a work of fiction on a governmental policy. It may be remembered that last fall H. W. Hiebsch published an anonymous novel, entitled "Philip Dru, Administrator." According to reliable authority this has been read by Woodrow Wilson, secretaries Bryan, Houston and McAdoo, that is to say, the president and at least three members of his cabinet. As the story deals with another civil war, the overthrow of the government and the reconstruction on a new basis, and as such a theme permits the author to touch on every activity of the state, its appeal to the personnel of our progressive regime will be readily understood. One reviewer surmised that Theodore Roosevelt wrote the book, while another suggested William J. Bryan as the author. Neither guess is correct, and it is doubtful if the writer's identity will be revealed. (B. W. Huebsch, publisher.)

MAGAZINE CLIPPINGS.

Theodore Roosevelt's main outdoor interest is not hunting, as some people think, but the observation of animal life. His life-histories of certain African animals, which will appear in Scribner's Magazine this fall, beginning with the lion in September, are to him more fascinating than the chase. They are the "manners and customs" of the lion written as historians write of people.

Thomas Nelson Page, who goes to Italy in September as ambassador, has lived for more than a decade in Washington city, and writes for the September Scribner his interesting account of "The Romantic Founding of Washington," detailing the many votes and intrigues that took place before George Washington, Jefferson and Hamilton finally succeeded in working out the plan for the present District of Columbia.

Margaretta Tuttle comes back to Ainslee's after an absence of several months with a clever novelette in the September issue, entitled "In Velvet Gown." Readers of the Nadine Carson stories can renew acquaintance if some of them in the opening of this story. Clothes also play an important part in it. September Ainslee's is full of interesting stories by clever writers.

Harper's magazine for September gives a splendid list of instructive and attractive articles and poems, among the stories Louise Closser Hale tells of going to a moving picture show in the little French quarter of La Paz and seeing an American scene in which a well-known American appeared. The scene was laid in New York.

In the September Metropolitan magazine Mary Heaton Vorse has a live and interesting article, entitled "The Women Armageddon," in which she tells about the recent convention of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance at Budapest. Another article worth reading on the same line is Rheta Childe Dorr's "Up to the Woman Co-Operative." Arnold Bennett's memoirs, Yakec, etc., have all furnished something well worth reading.

The September Smart Set heads the table of contents with a Brieux play, called "The School for Mothers-in-Law"—an odd theme, but here presented in a striking and vivid manner. "The Pictures," by May Sinclair. "The Resurrection and the Life," by Susan Glaspell, and the novelette by Reginald Wright Kauffman are well worth the number.

GREAT IMPROVEMENTS AT SHORTER COLLEGE

Rome, Ga., August 23.—Great improvements are being made at Shorter college during the vacation months. Workmen have been busy giving the walls of every room a beautiful coat of fresh paint, all bath rooms have been enamelled, and all floors, every one of which is of reinforced concrete, have been freshly painted.

The grounds are also receiving attention, a large out or door gymnasium, 150x300 feet, is probably the greatest thing that the college has ever done for its students. There will be room for four or five tennis courts, several basket ball games and sufficient space for all kinds of gymnastics, calisthenics, etc. Shorter believes in out-of-door exercise for its students, and is spending several thousand dollars on its athletic field, which will be the best in all the south. Electric lights will be arranged on the grounds, so that the girls may use the tennis courts and basket ball grounds in the evening.

The attendance for the next session at Shorter will be very large. The registration for next session is far in excess of that of any previous year, and it is predicted that many girls who apply late will be refused admission, because all rooms will e taken.

For State Organizer Plans Are Made by Georgia Congress

The finance committee of the Georgia Congress of Mothers was called together last week by the chairman, Mrs. W. H. Wiggs, 575 West Peachtree. The object was to devise ways and means to secure a fund to make possible the services of an organizer for the next school year.

The calender plan was formerly adopted as the method of this committee would use. It is thus that twelve ladies represent the months, each month secure four weeks and one week secure the seven days. The year, the months, the weeks and days each contribute $5.65. This plan seems very simple and would not be a hardship on any one, but if successful means the Georgia Congress of Mothers will be able to organize a parent-teacher neighborhood in connection with all the schools of Georgia. This would mean every mother, a member of this organization would be working intelligently with the teacher for the highest development of her child—the child of the community, the state.

Sentiment is in favor of these organizations the world over. There is almost a universal effort on foot to make of each school house a social center for instruction and amusement as well as creating a bond of unity between the citizens of that particular community. President Wilson and other prominent educators have endorsed this movement as one of most vital importance, both to home and school.

The Need for an Organizer.

To those who do not understand the need for an organizer it might be timely to explain. An organizer would consult the principals of the schools in each neighborhood and ascertain as far as possible the needs of that particular center and would form a club for the purpose of bringing the neighborhood together for the purpose of raising the standard of home life, promoting the welfare of the child and increasing the understanding and sympathy of those having the responsibility of children and by cooperating to make effectual all efforts towards educational, civic, social, hygienic and moral betterment in the neighborhood.

Relation of Home and School.

In classification of institutions the family is first. If any institution could stand alone it is the family—for in it are found all the elements for the satisfaction of an individual. Next in order to the school, the teacher, to whom society has assigned the task of education in all its details and asks of its schools that they assist each citizen to live its best life. It is here we find the most universal and direct agency for developing personal quality. It is the function of the teacher to study the nature of the human soul—to understand its interest, and method of development to realize its own inherent powers.

The mother has a universal genius. She is teacher of every known branch of learning. The teacher is placed in the same category, for she must train nature, man and the laws these reveal. The child has little power to discriminate and life will be to this young soul what is presented and wrought into its very fibre by habitual action. Can we mothers afford to do less than direct intelligent co-operation to our teachers and schools.

Any one may assist us in our extention of work by becoming a day. All communications should be sent Mrs Wiggs.

Educational Value of Movies

Some one has said that "As a nation we have not achieved that moderation which as a basis of sanity and normal living." The moving picture craze may well be cited as an example of the lack of moderation, but moderation is the most difficult word in the English language for us nervously energetic Americans to live up to, our capacity for going and the endurance evident in this high pressure under which we live is amazing to contemplate.

The moving picture appeals strongly to two very different classes of society, that which is straining for activity every minute at top speed and, those who after a hard day's labor feel the same nervous desire for amusement or relaxation. To the former the rapidity with which various subjects are disposed of at this form of amusement satisfies the nervous tension, and supplies entertainment without the slightest effort on the part of the individual. To the latter who finds that, with the inconvenience financially or otherwise they can indulge in this diversion, not individually but with the whole family. Hence the craze for the moving picture which furnishes entertainment for such a divers and large number of people day after day.

What began as a casual amusement, continues as almost a necessity and has by easy stages reached a point where, because of its excellence both intellectually and mechanically is a factory to be reckoned with in an educational way.

The majority of children do not like to read, but the majority who do read prefer light subject matter. While there is much of the latter thrown on the screen today, there is also much that is standard and serious work. For instance, what average child would read Dante's "Inferno"? Yet this was given very successfully and was discussed in an interesting manner by children who were really not students, even was the means of making this book a subject of investigation, and thus in several instances created a desire among a number of young children to know more of it and its author. In another instance, an overcrowded student was obliged in her English examination to write a synopsis of "The Tale of Two Cities;" this she did entirely from her memory of the moving picture she had seen. Of course, the latter instance hardly carries much weight in a truly educational sense, but is simply the record of a fact.

Admitting that all children read, the trouble has just commenced, for taste in simple matters, how if good subject, some subjects can be presented to the child in a convincing and interesting manner, as they are in moving pictures, it would seem a simple matter to cultivate a taste for good editions, that would be permanent. The educational aspect does not stop with the desire for a good plot, but teaches consistency of detail, this a play of the sixteenth century, will teach much that is interesting of the customs of the times in manners, dress, etc., as well as supplying a setting that may stimulate a desire to know more of its historical associations of architecture and other things introduced in the play. As for instance a small boy witnessing Bernhardt's "Queen Elizabeth," was so impressed with the setting that he immediately commenced intelligently study of the architecture of that period.

There seem untold advantages and possibilities in the moving picture educational public. Imagine what a glorious way to study history, and it is possible. Might that we strive to improve on the style of the pictures would, by being thrown upon a screen, with just enough notes to make it interesting as well as clear, remain longer in a child's mind and with much less trouble than the usual humdrum process from books.

FRENCH SOCIALISTS DRAW COLOR LINE

Paris, August 23.—The color line has appeared in the socialist party and has led to a very pretty fight to the great amusement of the populace. M. Lagrossillere, member of the chamber from Martinique, has quit the socialist party in a high state of indignation. His reasons for so doing seem satisfactory enough from his point of view. He discovered that the socialist party has the greatest contempt for constituents or members with the slightest dash of the tar brush. This was bad enough, but what was worse, at the last congress of the party a member cheerfully stated that it would be well for France to get rid of all her colonies and another member proposed that, in order to insure the final peace of Europe, France should exchange her black or yellow subjects for the Alsace-Lorraine provinces. "Just as if they were a parcel of goods." If this were done, naturally, M. Lagrossillier's occupation would be gone. Finally, when the colonial troops took part in the review on July 14 socialist papers thought fit to cover them with radicals and insults. For all these reasons, though remaining a socialist, the deputy for Martinique has left the unified socialist party.

PRIEST FIGURES OUT YEAR OF CHRIST'S DEATH

Rome, August 23.—(Special.)—Father Emanuelli, of the Monte Cassino, has made an astronomical study, trying to establish the exact year of the death of Christ. He found his work on the words of the Scripture, in which is stated that our Lord was put to death on a Friday, 15 Nisan. According to the calculations of Father Emanuelli only two years can be considered to answer these requirements, 30 and 33 A. D. As, however, for historical reason the year 33 seems to be out of the question. Father Emanuelli concluded that Christ was killed in the year 30.

PRIEST IS ARRESTED FOR ROBBING CHURCH

Rome, August 23.—An antiquary of Florence and a priest, who were recently arrested on a charge of stealing two terra-cottas by Della Robbia from the Church of the Morlians, have now confessed, implicating a certain Marchese Frannoni, who has also been arrested. The terra-cottas in question had been removed from the church and copies had been substituted. Both the originals have fortunately been recovered. The case is rather a disquieting one, since there exists a strong suspicion that this substitution of copies for the originals may take place more frequently than is known.

AUGUSTA'S SOCIAL SIDE

Augusta, August 23.—(Special Correspondence.)—The marriage of Miss Carolyn Nurnberger to Mr. Reed Wynn was witnessed by a large company of friends on Wednesday evening, at 8:30 o'clock, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pinckney L. Nurnberger in North Augusta.

Three parlors were tastefully decorated with palms and flowers, and a floral altar was improvised at the rear of the back parlor. The bridal party entered to the strains of the wedding march, the groom coming first with his best man and brother, Mr. Wooding Wynn. They were followed by a dainty little florer girl, Miss Florence Foye, after whom came the bride with her father. A buffet supper followed the ceremony and congratulations. Later the bride changed her wedding gown for a traveling suit and Mr. and Mrs. Wynn left for a honeymoon in the North Carolina mountains.

At 4 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon at the rectory of St. Paul's church, Rev. Geo. Sherwood Whitney officiating, Mr. Ernest Parker, of Graniteville, S. C., and Miss Gwendolyn Baker were married, and left immediately after the ceremony for a sojourn in the mountains of North Carolina. The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. Frank Baker and the groom is principal of the Trenton, S. C., high school.

Mrs. Hinton Baker has returned from a visit to Atlanta.

Mrs. W. H. Hendrix, of 1442 Filcox street, has her two sisters as her guests, Mrs. Jane Heiger, of Louisville, Ky., and Mrs. Emma Moore, of Ludlow, Ky.

Mrs. O. T. Adams is visiting Mrs. W. R. Ogburn, of Savannah.

Mrs. Archibald Baker has gone to visit relatives in Washington, Ga.

Mrs. Julian Morrison, of Norfolk, one of Augusta's attractive visiting brides, is a on a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Crawford at the home on Milledge Road, the Hill.

At Sacred Heart church at 10 o'clock Thursday morning Mr. Robert L. Gay and Miss Lena Burdick were married, Father Lonergan officiating. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Nellie Burdick, and the groom's brother, Mr. Aldine Gay, acted as best man. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Gay left for a visit to Wrightsville Beach.

Miss Essie Cohen has returned home from a delightful visit to Atlanta.

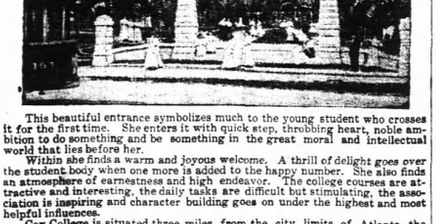
Marble Entrance to Cox College.



This beautiful entrance symbolizes much to the young student who crosses it for the first time. She enters it with quick step, throbbing heart, noble ambition to do something and be something in the great moral and intellectual world that lies before her.

Within she finds a warm and joyous welcome. A thrill of delight goes over the student body when one more is added to the happy number. She also finds an atmosphere of earnestness and high endeavor. The college courses are attractive and interesting, the daily tasks are difficult but stimulating, the association is inspiring and character building goes on under the highest and most helpful influences.

Cox College is situated three miles from the city limits of Atlanta, the busiest center of life and activity in the South. On the double tracks of the Atlanta and West Point railroad, it may be reached by day travel from any point in this or adjoining States, and also enjoys the privilege of the electric railroad from Atlanta with 10 minute schedule at five cent fare. When the students attend church services or any entertainment in a body they have the privilege of special cars which furnish ample accommodations, do not stop in transit and shorten schedules.

Cox College, long famous for its conservatory work, has a literary course of equal rank. The academy furnishes splendid preparation for college. To keep abreast of the times a stronger faculty has been secured for the coming session. Many improvements have been made this summer in order to handle a larger enrollment than usual.

There will be a joyous reunion among the former students and quite a commotion and welcome by the little city of College Park when school reopens September 10th for its seventy-first session.

Those who are interested in the higher education of women may obtain a beautiful catalogue and illustrations upon application to Cox College and Conservatory, College Park, Ga.—(Adv.)

Monday--a Display of New Wooltex Suits

In which you can see the most advanced style ideas in fabrics, colorings and embellishments.

There is a great range of choice of materials, many of the smartest styles being made up of smooth finished cloths, while others of equal style value have been developed from rough fabrics.

The materials include eponges, zibelines, diagonals, cloths, matelasse, poplins, whipcords, Bedford cords.

Great variety in color effects marks the season's display, and one is not confined to the dull and somber hues usually found in tailored suits. There are rich, beautiful mahogany, plum, wistaria, bronze green, taupe, russet, blues and leather.

Bright colors appear on some as a trimming on collar and cuffs.

Coats are Quite Long in Back

Cutaway style—long in the back and quite short in front, and the sharp slope gives a most graceful and becoming line to almost any figure.

There is a pronounced tendency toward more freedom in the lines of suits. Coat sleeves are larger, the skirts somewhat fuller than in recent years.

Notice, too, the skirts have the new knee drapery gathered into narrow plaits at each side of the skirt, giving the correct peg-top effect.

These new style notes are splendidly expressed in the showing of

Wooltex, a Very High Type of Suits for Women

Prices range from $25 to $65.

New for Autumn--Women's Afternoon and Evening Gowns

Already they are being chosen and fitted in our dress salons.

They are new and irresistible. So new that some of them have just gone into the little white cabinets, to be shown for the first time Monday. So irresistible that they, like others, will go as soon as they are shown.

Almost every style has a high girdle of some rich velvet. Many have the upper part of the bodice of transparent stuffs, marquisette or chiffon embroidered, and opening over lace and net chemisettes.

Sashes are plaited; some dresses have tunics or hip draperies, showing all that remains of the pannier which threatened two years ago.

It is interesting to see how the designers are dealing with draperies—the tiered skirt of combined lace and chiffon, or all lace, the girdles and what piquant little touches they add.

Colors, too, have something of autumn richness about them—while the light or white evening gowns have bright flashes of color in sash or girdle or garniture.

Prices are, $35 to $100.

First Early Peep at New Wool Dress Fabrics

Black a Leading Feature

"Wool" seems a misnomer when applied to these soft, silky, superb materials which are known as—

Moire Crepe Poplin in black; a beautiful fabric for dressy costumes; 42 inches wide; $2.25 yard.

Flake Poplin—Black—a light-weight, silky, superb fabric; 44 inches wide; $3.50 yard.

Beautiful Crepe Poplins, in the new leather or brass shade, Copenhagen, navy and cream; $1.75 yd.

Poplins, all fashionable shades; 42 inches wide; $1.50 yard.

New Linen Laces at 5c Yard

A new shipment of new Linen Laces in new and dainty patterns—narrow widths—has come to supply the demands for trimming infants' and children's clothes.

They will be put on a table for your choosing Monday—plenty of edges and insertions—all at 5c yard.

Allover Embroideries for Collars and Cuffs

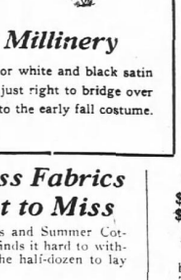
They are sheer Swiss, in the eyelet effects so popular for collar and cuff sets. The dark suit which must soon be donned will call for fresh sets daily. These embroideries are particularly dainty, and are priced at $1.00 yard.

New Fall Millinery

The All-Black Hat a Feature

An all-black Hat is always correct. It sets off the pale colors of the toilette and brings into harmony the more vivid ones.

It is both dressy and serviceable.



New Ideas Are Shown Here

Small, dressy Hats of black satin, soft crowns, butterfly bows, maline and jet trimmings; some have high, halo-like trimming around the crown.

In Lower-Priced Millinery

The new, small shapes of all-black or white and black satin for general wear suggest themselves as just right to bridge over the season's gap and give a fresh touch to the early fall costume.

See the new Hats Monday.

August clearing of children's apparel brings such unusual opportunities as these:

Girls' $2.50, $3, $3.50 and $4 White Dresses at $1.98

Dainty little Frocks of soft white lingerie cloth; lace and embroidery trimmed, prettily tucked, and some have touches here and there of hand embroidery; sizes 6 to 12 years.

Half Price for Junior Girls' White Party Dresses

Exquisite Dresses of such beautiful materials, so prettily fashioned that they make ideal party dresses for winter. Only about a dozen remaining. They are fresh and in perfect condition; sizes 13 to 15 years.

Instead of $12.50 to $20 you may buy them Monday at exactly half—$6.25 to $10.

Children's Cloth and Linen Coats With Summer-End Prices

Coats of beautiful light-weight wool materials such as will be needed for early fall school wear.

This is the way you may buy them Monday:

$9.75 For Junior Girls' Coats—blues and tans—13 to 15-year sizes; regularly priced $12.50 to $16.

Children's Coats—2 to 14-year Sizes

$3.75 for $ 5.00 Coats
$5.00 for $ 7.50 Coats
$7.50 for $10.00 Coats
$8.75 for $12.50 Coats

Little Tots' White Serge Coats at Half Price

Dressy little Coats of plain or novelty serge, lace or braid trimmed or hand-embroidered; others in Peter Thompson style with emblem on sleeve; in 2 to 6-year sizes. They are $5 to $10 Coats, priced for Monday at $2.50 to $5.

All fresh, unsoiled—the best of styles.

Auto Coats for Children

Linen and Ratine Coats for motoring; tans and browns; 3 to 12-year sizes; regular $4, $5 and $6.50 Coats; priced for Monday at $2 to $3.25.

A Sale of Cotton Dress Fabrics That Few Will Want to Miss

The remaining stocks of Wash Goods and Summer Cottons are priced so extremely low that one finds it hard to withstand the temptation to buy dresses by the half-dozen to lay away for next season.

Some examples:

12½c yd. For Printed Crepe Voiles that have sold all season at 25c yard. Bulgarian and Jouy patterns—some bordered effects—36 inches wide.

7½c Yd. For Bates' Toile du Nord and A. F. C Ginghams and Wm. Anderson's Madras—the regular 12½c and 15c grades; 25 full, new pieces to sell Monday at 7½c yard.

Solicitor Reasserts His Conviction Of Bad Character and Guilt of Frank

"What I had to say yesterday," began Mr. Dorsey at the opening of Saturday morning's session, "with references to character I think I have demonstrated by law to any fair-minded man that the defendant is not a man of good character.

"In failing to cross-examine these twenty young ladies who claim his character was bad, is proof, in itself, that if he had character that was good no power on earth would have kept him and his counsel from plying countless questions in his behalf.

"That's common-sense, gentlemen, a proposition that is as fair and a proposition which I have already shown you by law that they had a perfect right to delve into his character. Also, you have seen their failure to cross-question these witnesses.

"Whenever any man has evidence in possession and fails to produce it the strongest presumption arises that it would be hurtful if they did produce it. Failure to present such evidence is a glaring indictment. You need no law books to tell you that.

"You know the reason this able counsel did not ask these here-brained fanatic questions of the evidence they had presented against their client. You know it too well. They know—they know it better than you. That's why they did not question.

"You tell me these good people from Marietta went home and said that they never heard anything against Frank? Many a man has gone through life without even his wife knowing his maledictions. It takes the valley to know a man's life.

Bad Character Demonstrated.

"That man has a bad character and it has been ably demonstrated. Often a man uses charities, lodges, religious organizations to cover up his misdeeds—sometimes to cover up his conscience—as Frank has done by the B'nai B'rith, of all places, of which he is president.

"Many a man has walked high in society and outwardly has appeared spotless who was rotten, dead rotten, inside. He has no character. I submit—gentlemen, he has none. His reputation for good is among the people who do not know his true life.

"Judas, of old, was a great character until he went from to the front of betrayal. Many a man has betrayed and David takes his wife, Judas Iscariot, until he blasted the betraying kiss upon the lips of the Lord, was a good man, one of the president.

"Benedict Arnold had the confidence of all the people until he betrayed his nation. Arnold and Judas and Frank has been a synonym of infamy and disgrace.

Cites Wilde Case.

"Oscar Wilde, brilliant, brilliant, author of works that will go down for ages, the profundest of which he wrote while in jail and the companionship of felons and the men of the marquis insisted up for criminal practice in which he indulged.

"Wherever the English language is read Oscar Wilde is known. The trial of Wilde while he underwent cross-examination will be the subject of history and admiration. He was a man of Frank's stripe. Wilde will remain forever the type of pervert as is this man who stands before you charged with the murder of Mary Phagan.

"Not even Wilde's wife stenched he was guilty of perversion. He was sent to prison for three long years. He was at last released on good behavior and collected and his cross-examination is a worthy part of history.

"Good character. Why, he came to America did lecture throughout the country. It was he who raised the sunflower to the level of a man of brain, knowledge and physique. Art, grace and bravery but a sexual pervert.

"Abe Ruef, of San Francisco, a man of Frank's stripe, polished, lovely, respected, honored, admired. But he corrupted Schmidt and corrupted everything he put his hand to. He led a life of luxury, of splendor and debauching girls without end. Eventually his case terminated in the penitentiary.

"Crime, gentlemen, doesn't go only with the ignorant and poor. The ignorant, like Jim Conley, commit the smaller crimes. A man of high intellect and wonderful endowments commits the worst of crimes. For instance, look at McKibbin, mayor of Chattanooga, who was found dead in the bathtub because he had tired of her. A jury of Virginia gentlemen send him to a felon's grave, his just deserts.

Richeson Sent to Chair.

"Then, there was Richeson, of Boston, a preacher, who was engaged to one of the most beautiful and most attractive girls of his city. But, entanglement with a poor little girl who had had designs upon him in his designing and fast-ridden hands, caused him to so far forget himself as to put her in a sack.

"All these cases are of circumstantial evidence, and, after conviction, in hope he would obtain pardon, he confessed. Not one of these men, governor and jury were brave and dauntless enough to send him to the electric chair. Then, there were others, including Henry Clay Beattie, of Richmond, Virginia, of splendid family, who took his wife, the mother of a 12-month-old babe, to shoot her in the automobile in which they were riding.

"Yet, that man, gazing upon the blood of his slain mate, was cool and calm enough to joke with the detectives. Such funds were raised, every effort possible was made to free him, but a courageous and honest jury of Virginia gentlemen sent him to death, thus putting this old Virginia citizenship on a high plane.

"I have never confessed, that is true, but he left a note to be read after his electrocution, which he admitted his guilt.

"The judges of England, man of worthy standing, killed his wife because of his infatuation for another woman, and such people do away like this man Frank put away little Mary Phagan's, hoping it never would be discovered.

"You, gentlemen, have the opportunity that comes to but few men. Measure up to it. Will you do it?

"If not, then I ask you to say why? Tell me as an honest man, why not?

Attacks Frank's Alibi.

"They say Frank has an alibi. Let's examine it. In section 101 of the Georgia code it says that just what is an alibi. It involves the impossibility of the prisoner's presence at the scene during the time of the crime. The burden of proof rests wholly upon the defendant for Frank to have been on the scene at the time Mary Phagan was killed. The burden is upon them. An alibi, unless fully properly substantiated, is worthless. I am going to show you why that this alibi is worse than no defense at all.

"I once read an old darkey's description of an alibi, and it was this: 'Parson, what's an alibi?'

"'An alibi, a somethin' that show you was at the prayer meetin' where you wasn't and not at the crap game where you was.'

"Turn around this table a minute—this alleged chronological table of Frank's actions that day, and then turn it back to the wall where I want it to stay—face against the wall.

"At 12 o'clock Frank leaves the factory. That's mighty nice. Now, turn it back to the wall. Let it stay. Its not sustained by evidence. Not even substantiated by the statement of the defendant, himself. His story at police headquarters says he locked the door of the factory at 12 o'clock, and then he swore it was 1 o'clock when he left the building.

A Sad Spectacle.

"The little Kern girl—God help her! —swore she saw him at Alabama and Whitehall streets at 1 o'clock. Now, here's his own statement that he left the factory at 1:10.

"You talk of sad spectacles, the saddest I've ever seen was the bringing of this little Kern girl, the daughter of a man who works for Sig Montag, to help free this red-handed murderer.

"The jurors have a right to take into consideration the reasonableness of what any witness swears. Any man who looked at that little girl could see the untruth stamped clearly in her story.

"If Frank had locked the door at 1:10 o'clock, how did she ever see him at Alabama and Whitehall streets at that time? Answer me.

"Mind you, she had never seen him but once, this daughter of a Montag employee. Yet, she comes here and tells you the unreasonable story she has told.

"On this time proposition, I want to read this to you, a splendid, wonderful man, a man to whom even the great and brainy Arnold and the big powerful Rosser would have doffed their hats, Samuel Untermyer.

"Time's subdivisions," he says, are all alike. No man knows one day from another, one hour from another. Days and hours are not visible to the senses. He who speaks of date or minute of Christian era is talking nothing to guide him speaks at random.

"And, gentlemen, it's the truth.

Other Descrepancies.

"Now, what else about this alibi, Old man Montag visited and warned his workers as I suggest this man. For instance, Frank sat down to the building at 8:25 o'clock, sending Mrs. Hall, Corinthians and others. Frank says he got there at 8:30. He arrived with a fair count. They tried to make it appear that he did not have one.

"I'll venture the reason he borrowed Uncle Sig's watch yesterday because he forgot the coat Jim Conley saw him with.

"Hattie Smith says he left the building at 9:30 o'clock. Frank says he left at 9:30. At 11 o'clock Frank returns to office, says the chronological alibi chart. In his own statement he swears it was 11:05 o'clock.

"Move it up or down—move it anyway—do anything with it. Gentlemen, we've got to have an alibi some way or other.

"12:12, says the chart, the time Mary Phagan entered the plant. Frank says Mary came at 19 minutes after Miss Hall left and she left at 12 o'clock. If persons were as accurate as Frank is in regard to time on the day Mary Phagan was killed, wouldn't this old world be a glorious one. No trains missed, no appointments missed—no nothing but an entire world accurately time.

"Lemmie Quinn arrives, says the chart, from 12:20 to 12:25. But Lemmie Quinn, friend of Frederman and the other lady who saw him at 11:45."

Here the solicitor was interrupted by Mr. Arnold, who rose and said:

"There is no evidence to that effect, Mr. Dorsey. The girls didn't see him at the factory."

"I don't doubt that anyone didn't see him, retorted the solicitor.

Crowd Riles Arnold.

The crowd in the courtroom broke into a laugh that was well-nigh an applause.

Mr. Arnold said to the judge:

"Your honor, we can do without this kind of thing. If you'll order such outbreak I'll move to clear the courtroom."

"Lemmie Quinn was blowing hot and blowing cold," continued Dorsey, "and he was too anxious. I never saw a more eager man in my life. Is Jim says he saw Lemmie Quinn go up the stairs before Mary Phagan got there. If Frank and his wife did Frank have to consult with his lawyers before he spoke at police headquarters?

"Lemmie Quinn is the poorest man to split hairs over a proposition I have ever encountered. He is the most anxious man, the most eager I have ever seen. Lemmie is the old man Hoke way. Can you tell me that an honest, innocent man would first want to consult his lawyers before making his statement?

"Let me read you what a great judge said, Judge Lochraine, in one of the most eloquent words even of witnesses. I take their acts.'

"This table that the defense produces—from 12:05 to 12:10, Lemmie Quinn there from 12:10 to 12:12, just the time that will suit the defense and its corroborative alibi. Men, they are straining at a gnat.

The Charges of Perjury.

"Let's consider for a moment Arnold's flippant charges of perjury.

"You saw the witnesses. You heard what they had to say. Do you remember how, at one point, almost hysterically, Arnold wanted to die for Frank? When did you ever hear of an employee who would go to the length of her employer that she would die for him if the friendship that existed was merely platonic? I know that back of that utterance to die for her lies a far closer meant for Frank there was something stronger, something more powerful than platonic love, don't you? I mean Arnold's passion bore of something beyond mere friendship. But he is married, and she is single; he is the husband of another woman.

"Take the little Dinner boy. Before he took that ride in Sig Montag's automobile, in the office of Arnold and Rosser, he could remember Frank's face but after that he suffered a lapse of memory. Before that he could remember just everything, but after that his mind went blank.

"It reminds me of the south Georgian preacher who everybody gathered to the church praying for rain. They prayed and prayed, and after awhile there came a regular trash-mover, a gulley-washer. So the preacher rubbed his chin a little pulsatingly, guess he must have overdone it just a bit.

"Don't you know that Sig Montag must have whispered in that boy's ear, 'Don't remember a thing, a thing.'

"Does that look like perjury? Oh, how foolish, foolish, foolish!

"Hold it about that machinist, Lee.

"He swears that Frank had in his possession of 8 stiff papers that he had signed. Then they brought papers up here and Frank wrote and his name was not even initialed. Those are the stuff they're unloading on you.

"Talk about fatiguing indignation! Don't that just make you sick?

Claims Women Were Subborned.

"Perjury." Let's go further.

"I have never seen a case where women have been subborned as in this case.

"Take the stenographer, Miss Fleming. They put her on the stand, and we took her up on a line she didn't anticipate.

"Oh, we don't mean to say that Frank tried to seduce or ravish every woman who came to the pencil factory. No, of course, he didn't have admitted to it. He knew whom to approach and whom not, until he met Mary Phagan. And she 'called him.'

"How about Darling? She said she never saw or heard of any orders against flirting."

Interrupted Miss Fleming's account of Frank's work at the office on Saturday morning.

"Now," he continued, "she says that she saw Frank make out the financial sheet. She said that this was Frank's business in the forenoons of Saturdays. She was questioned on this point time and again, and was positive that she saw Frank making out the financial sheet.

"Then Arnold interrupted her and said, 'Let's have a little talk about the financial sheet on Saturday morning, did he?'

"And she caught Arnold. She answered, 'No.'

"Arnold was so nervous that he couldn't let me finish, but he interrupted Frank's attorney in the most unfair question, and she took the bait and went under the bank with it.

"I have read to you how positive she was about having seen Frank working on the financial sheet. Now look. Afterwards when she was about it she said that she had never made any such statement. I asked her whether she had said these things I have read you from the record, and she said 'No.'

"I tell you if you are going to turn men loose on such evidence as that, it is time to quit drawing juries in Fulton county.

Why Frank Was Indicted.

"Why didn't Rosser, Pat Campbell and Starnes take Newt Lee, Jim Conley, or Gantt instead of this man? Because the evidence against them was only a slim of cobwebs, but about Frank the evidence is composed of cables, and they are bound about him and he can't break them. The erudite Arnold and the dynamic Rosser can't break them.

"Circumstantial evidence is as good as any if it is the right sort. This evidence draws tightly around him and there is not a break in it.

"Schiff said that Frank, who was behind with his work, went home and slept instead of making out the financial sheet, because he (Schiff) had not given him the data (pronouncing it dotter,' as Schiff had pronounced it).

"Do you think that Frank, with such a charming wife as he has, with all his friends, Frank, head of no end of lodges, clubs, cards and pleasure; do you think that he would go back to the factory on Saturday afternoon to make out the financial sheet just because he did not have the data in the morning. He made out that financial sheet in the morning.

"I submit that this man made out that financial sheet on Saturday morning. I give no reasons because I don't believe them necessary. But even if he made out the sheet on Saturday afternoon, don't come to that belief because the sheet shows no nervousness.

Why Frank Was Calm.

"Why, after the crime, he went to his home and in the bosom of his family he showed composure. He read the joke about baseball and laughed about it. He made so merry over it that he disturbed the card game which was in progress.

"He has been making out financial sheets for six years, and do you mean to tell me that he had to wait for Schiff to tell him what to do before he could make out that sheet?

"He didn't betray nervousness when he wrote for the police to look for the white hat and another identified that writing as that of her son, and yet when they put an expert, who knew Frank's writing, to work to identify it, he was so afraid that he might do something to hurt this man that he wouldn't identify it. Is that perjury?

"The frivolity that Frank showed at his home was just the sort of frivolity that Henry Clay Beattie showed outside which the automobile in which was the blood of his wife.

"I'll tell you something this man did do on Saturday afternoon. Conley told about Frank's looking at the ceiling and saying, 'I have rich relatives in Brooklyn. Why should I be here?' Frank had been boasting his rich uncle and his people in Brooklyn that afternoon.

"They say his people in Brooklyn were not rich, and Conley is the only one to testify that he was in Brooklyn that afternoon when he wrote that letter and said what he did.'

Dorsey picked up the letter.

"Listen to this: 'How are the dear ones in Brooklyn?' Does that sound like he thought his uncle was in Brooklyn, or not?"

A Betraying Line.

"Now, here's a line that if you know anything about the mentality of a guilty conscience, you will know was written in the afternoon when Frank knew the body had been found in the basement of the factory where he had it put.

"He wrote: 'It has been too short a time since you left for anything startling to have happen!' Too short! Too short! Startling!

"Do you tell me, honest men, that that letter was written by a guiltless conscience? What do you think of that, honest men?

"Now, do you think the rich uncle cared anything about this life? An eminent authority says that extravagant language is the surmark of fraud. Do you think the rich uncle—and the thin gray line of veterans is growing thinner each year.

"Do you think M. Frank, the capitalist, to a man who cared not for the thin gray line, but for the dividends the factory was paying?

"There is nothing new in the factory to report," he writes.

"Ah, but there was something new, and that was the murder of Mary Phagan, and there had been time enough for something to happen! It had happened in the space of thirty minutes! Oh, me! The time was not too short!

"Yes, his people lived in Brooklyn, and he knew that he would be lynched if they lived in Brooklyn unless he had heard Frank say so. They may not be rich, but they have a cold $20,000 living and they breed and they have a business worth I don't know how much!

Frank's Wire to Montag.

"Let's read that wire Frank sent to montag.

"'You may have read,' it says, 'of a pencil factory girl found dead—Pollux will eventually solve it.'

"Oh, they did solve it.

"Assure my uncle,' he says, 'I'm all right if he should inquire.' Our company has other fish to fry on hand.'

"May be he did think that when he got this fellow Scott. There's an honest man who is willing to approach and whom not, until he met Mary Phagan. And he 'called him.'

"How about Darling?' She said she never saw or heard of any orders against flirting."

Interrupted Miss Fleming's account of Frank's work at the office on Saturday morning.

"Now," he continued, "she says that she saw Frank make out the financial sheet. She said that this was Frank's business in the forenoons of Saturdays. She was questioned on this point time and again, and was positive that she saw Frank making out the financial sheet.

"Then Arnold interrupted her and said, 'Let's have a little talk about the financial sheet on Saturday morning, did he?'

Because the evidence against them was only a slim of cobwebs, but about Frank the evidence is composed of cables, and they are bound about him and he can't break them. The erudite Arnold and the dynamic Rosser can't break them.

"Circumstantial evidence is as good as any if it is the right sort. This is a dirty suggestion. It is dirty. It is more than that; it is infamous. Yet there sits today Leo M. Frank trying to put that rope around the neck of another.

Upholds Detective Department.

"The only thing in this entire case that is at all to the discredit of the police department," continued Mr. Dorsey, "is that they were afraid on account of the influence and position of Leo Frank to put him in a cell like they did Lee and Gantt. That's the only thing against them.

"If my friend, Black, over there had gone after Frank like he went after Newt Lee, there would probably, very probably, have been a confession and no necessity for this long and tedious trial.

"You," he continued, turning to Frank, "you called for Haas, and you called for Rosser and you called for Arnold, three men of the very best legal talent that the state affords, and it took their combined efforts to keep up your lying statement.

"You know I'm telling the truth," continued Mr. Dorsey, again addressing himself to the jury.

"There is only one thing, I tell you, that is to the discredit of the police and that is they were awayed by learned counsel and the influence of wealth, and treated with too much consideration this man who had snuffed out the life of the poor little girl.

"I positively declare I had nothing to do with it. I honor the way they went after Minola McKnight and the way in which they, the able and fearless detectives, the getting of evidence in a big murder case like this is no job for a man with the manners of a dancing master. You've got to get in and jolly like a dog after a 'possum and you've got to tree that 'possum and keep on barking up that tree until you show he's there.

"You know that Albert McKnight, the woman's husband, would not have told Graves and Pickens any such tale as that unless it was true.

"So these detectives knew that, too, and they went after that evidence and followed up that tree until they got the evidence that was there. Talk about it's legally being impossible like Conley. Conley couldn't have done it if he had wanted to get her out. That's what it was made for.

"Conley certainly had nothing to do with freeing her.

What He Would Have Told Haas.

"If Herbert Haas had come to me on the Tuesday after the murder and told me he wanted me to get Frank out, I would have told him that I was running my office and not the police department, and I would have advised that the habeas corpus was intended for that; oh, I don't know. I wouldn't have advised it, however like that. He would have known about the habeas corpus.

"Well, they have taken me to task too, for what I did in which I went early into the case. Well, I honor the memory of the late Charlie Hill; I'm as proud of the fact that I was one of the solicitor's office as I am that the people elected me to that high office, but I'm not going to pattern myself after no man. I'm going to pattern myself after the dictates of my own conscience.

"If I'm proud of anything in this case I'm proud that I went into this case with the detectives when I did and sought and found the real murderer of the little girl, and that too, when your influence was pouring letters into the grand jury in an effort to try to get an innocent man—a negro—even though he was.

"I'm glad I stuck it out and kept them on everything that developed an honest man, and I'm going to stick it out as long as I'm in office and if you don't like it, the only way to do it is to remove me from office. I'm doing what I think is right and I'm going to keep on doing what I think is right.

No Evidence Overlooked.

"Now they have talked about perjury. Well, let's not say that everybody in this case have been liars, when we have every reason for evidence to accuse everybody of being liars.

"Was Jim Conley a liar?

"Let's look at some of the things he says and let's look at the many times the little and apparently unimportant details of his statement are corroborated by other witnesses. Mrs. Small, time and again, in her testimony, corroborates the things Jim told of as happening that Tuesday morning in the office, and Frank admitted that, let's take one of their witnesses: Take Mrs. Carson, mother of Rebecca Carson, the forewoman, whom witnesses swear was constantly in and out of the rooms with Frank. Mrs. Carson swore on the stand that she did not go back and look at the spots of blood on the second floor.

"You know why she swore that? Well, there had been too many of those employees adverse to going back there, and the defense did not want to make it appear that the spots caused any stir up there, so by the time Mrs. Carson got on the stand employees began to say that they had paid no attention to the spots.

"Well, we asked Mrs. Small if she went to look at them, and she said that she did, and we asked who went with her, and she said that Mrs. Carson did, and we asked her what was said, and she said she remembered because she and Mrs. Carson had gone back there after the other witnesses had left the time when they could get plenty of time to look at the spots.

"If this is founded on perjury, if the defense thinks that they can simply a case of pot calling kettle black, and I haven't dealt in glittering generalities, either, in making my charges.

"When evidence of this character was wanted in any particular phase of this case, there has never been the time when some of them, one or more, did not come forward and testify to what was needed, and they'd have you believe those witnesses came willingly, and that there was no pull that things might have been different.

Recognize Weakness of Case.

"Talk about perjury, Hunter? He's not nearly so smart as Frank. Frank is as smart as either of his lawyers. Frank realized the weakness of his case. He wrote that statement himself. I'll bet.

"Frank, in his statement, had to drag in a lot of evil spirits to help him out and he would have drawn2d in more if we had not stopped him.

"And he would rather about the blood? The machinist Lee said that Duffy held out his finger and let that blood spurt from it. Why should he have done that? Isn't that a most natural thing to grab that finger and put it up?

"Miss Carson said that she saw Frank and Jim Conley on the fourth floor Tuesday morning before the arrest. That is the only thing that Frank said to Jim. 'Jim, you be a good boy.'

"According to their own witness Jim and Frank were not where Jim said they were that morning.

"Mrs. Carson, mother of Rebecca, when asked about seeing blood spots, was very particular to ask what blood spots and where. Then she said that she never saw any blood spots on the second floor, because she didn't want to see anything like that.

"Miss Small corroborates Conley's story. She said that she saw Frank and Jim on the fourth floor of the factory about 9 o'clock on that Tuesday morning.

"Why was Frank there?

"He wanted to see if Jim was keeping the secret. Arnold said that this is a dirty suggestion. It is dirty. It is more than that; it is infamous. Yet there sits today Leo M. Frank trying to put that rope around the neck of another.

Upholds Detective Department.

CAPTAIN W. M. MAYO IN RACE FOR SHERIFF

Popular Officer Is Entering the Contest at Request of Large Number of Friends.

Captain W. M. Mayo, of the Atlanta police department, announced Saturday afternoon that he will be a candidate for sheriff of Fulton county, subject to the democratic primary next spring.

Captain Mayo is 42 years of age, and has been a member of the Atlanta police for 15 years, coming to Atlanta shortly before his appointment from Jackson, Butts county, Georgia, where he was a county officer for several years.

Captain Mayo states that he is making the announcement of his candidacy at the solicitation of a large number of friends who strongly urge him for the office. Captain Mayo has made an ideal officer and stands high in the record of his superiors. It is said that he will develop a strong following and it is the opinion of many that he stands an excellent chance for the nomination.

OFFERED SCHOLARSHIP IN WOODBERRY SCHOOL

Thomasville, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—Miss Rosa Woodberry, of Atlanta, has notified the Thomasville Study Class that she has given a scholarship in her school in Atlanta to the class to be awarded by them to any deserving girl that they may select. This action on the part of Miss Woodberry was entirely unsolicited by the members of the class, as it will afford advantages to some deserving girl here who is not able otherwise to attend them. It is not known yet who has been selected for the place, but the class has the matter under advisement.

DAWSON PEACH GROWER WILL HAVE 30,000 TREES

Dawson, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—Eugene Baldwin, who owns a fine orchard near Dawson, and has met with much success for several years in marketing fine peaches, has recently set out 2,000 more trees of the early varieties, which will give him 30,000 trees, whose fruit will be given during the months of June. Mr. Baldwin and Dr. J. G. Dean planted 9,000 trees on land owned by Dr. Dean, situated just beyond the city's northeastern corporate limits of Dawson. These gentlemen hope to enjoy the fruits of their efforts within three years after the trees have been set out.

NABBED IN VALDOSTA AS A WHITE SLAVER

Valdosta, Ga., August 23.—T. L. Rushin was arrested here today charged with violating the Mann white slave act, which came here from Hickory ville with young woman who gave her name as Mamie Williams. Both say they are from Charlotte, although Rushin says his companion is from Columbia, S. C.

Charlotte, N. C., August 23.—Neither T. L. Rushin nor Mamie Williams arrested at Valdosta today, are known in Charlotte. The city directory does not contain their names.

TILLER WILL SUCCEED TO CLUB PRESIDENCY

Washington, August 23.—(Special.)—Theodore H. Tiller, formerly of Bainbridge, Ga., and now connected with The Washington Times, will succeed to the presidency of the National Press club next week upon the resignation of John Hay Jr., to become private secretary and assistant to Mr. McReynolds, the attorney general.

Mr. Tiller is now vice president of the club, which has about 600 members most of the out-of-town correspondents in Washington.

Jones Named by Daniels.

Washington, August 23.—Lieutenant Commander Newton L. Jones was named today personal aide to Secretary Daniels to succeed Lieutenant Commander Lewis C. Palmer, ordered to command the destroyer Allen at Philadelphia. Commander Jones held the world's record with a 12-inch turret, made on the battleship Ohio in 1906.

IN SHERIFF RACE

CAPTAIN W. M. MAYO.

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER DEFENDS JUDGE SPEER

Under the heading, "Bloody Hatchet for Speer," The Charlotte Observer comes out with a warm editorial in defense of Judge Emory Speer, in its issue of Friday, August 22. The editorial of The Observer reads as follows:

"It might have been safely predicted that with the inauguration of the new regime at Washington mission would be sought against Judge Emory Speer and that anything possible found in his official would be once. When the department of justice began to follow him around openly from court to court with inspectors harassing him and demanding his administration of justic by the spectacle presented. It became evident that the process was under way. When Judge Speer received word that complaint before the Illinois Bar association, which passed a resolution of sympathy, he must have known what was to come. It has now come with a rush in the form of a hostile investigation by the house judiciary committee. The manifest purpose is to recommend an impeachment if any plausible grounds however slight, can be alleged. The ammunition secured by the department is certainly far from impressive in print. It looks like the petty, focusing kind that could be charged against any public officer who had to use his own discretion in handling matters and with whose discretion or judgment anybody was at liberty to disagree. No judge would be immune from impeachment on such charges as these. There is nothing whatever in the charges on the face of them that necessarily reflects upon Judge Speer.

"This an mine against one of the most able and distinguished men of his state or section is not difficult of explanation in proportion to its gravity. We will give it our attention at another day."

BRITAIN WANTS $500,000 FOR HER OLYMPIC TEAM

London, August 23.—The great olympic fund of $500,000 it not rolling up as fast as the promoters expected. An appeal for this amount to provide adequately for the British team at the olympic games in Berlin in 1916, was issued August 17. It was signed by Earl Grey, Lord Roberts, the Duke of Westminster and many other prominent men, but only $25,000 has been subscribed and is for the first week.

The project has met strong opposition, notwithstanding Lord Robert's name, which headed the appeal, and it is by is the most potent influence any patriotic cause can have. Most of the criticisms are that wholesale subsidizing of athletes would foster professionalism and be contrary to the wholesome traditions of British sport. Some of the sharpest thrusts have reference to attempted "Americanization" of sports.

The Saturday Review predicts that the money will be raised, although the paper adds, if it were asked for anything important to the nation it would not be forthcoming.

"If Stone Henge, the celebrated monument in Salisbury Plain, were offered to the public to save its being bought by a Yankee for $500,000 would the British public rise?" asks the paper.

ATHENS MAN IS JAILED UNDER SERIOUS CHARGE

Athens, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—Because a woman peeped into a room where there was suspicious noise, Wilber Jeffersen is in jail under a serious charge. He was reported last night to the police who charge that he had a pistol and a coat pocket literally full of cartridges and was threatening the life of a young girl named Lizzie Muckle.

PISTOL TOTER'S BULLET WOUNDS ATLANTA GIRL

Miss Frances Brown Hit When J. P. Sanders Fires at John Rodgers in Cedartown.

Cedartown, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—Miss Frances Brown, of Atlanta, daughter of Robert H. Brown, of Ponce de Leon avenue, was the victim of an accident this morning, when, in company with young lady friends at the Seaboard station, she was accidentally shot in the thigh by a bullet from the pistol of J. P. Sanders, a merchant who runs a store in the western part of the city.

It seems that Sanders had gone to collect small debt from John Rodgers. He became infuriated with him and drew his pistol. Rodgers ran into the crowd of young ladies and Sanders shot at him, the bullet going astray, hitting Miss Brown.

Sanders was arrested and placed in jail and has been released on bond.

It came as a sad termination to a house party which Miss Brown has been attending, as the guest of Miss Lois Mundy. Miss Brown was at once carried to the Mundy home and the physicians could not locate the bullet. She was carried to Atlanta on the next train for X-ray treatment. It is not known how serious the wound is.

SHOT BEHIND THE EAR AND LEFT FOR DEAD

Tampa, Fla., August 23.—Shot behind the ear at 1 o'clock this afternoon, fatally wounded and left for dead, Jose Vellos, an 18-year-old Spanish cigar maker, remained conscienless after dark and crawled a half-mile through dense woods to a house and asked for medical attention. Vellos will die at midnight, but physicians state that he will die before day.

Vellos joined a Spaniard and a Cuban after a fist fight, leaving the city at noon. At 1 o'clock, according to his disconnected story, the party reached a hydraul and the car was turned down this. Asking where they were going, the other two told him that it made no difference. Vellos attempted to run, but was shot down without warning, the Spaniard shot him with a revolver. He refuses to give the names of the other parties.

REILLY FATALLY SHOT ON WASHINGTON STREET

Washington, August 23.—Francis A. Reilly, personal stenographer to Senator Bristow, of Kansas, was shot and probably fatally wounded early this morning on the street.

On his way to the hospital Reilly accused his chum, D. H. Schultz, of the shooting, but Schultz took effort in Reilly's body, both being fired at such close range that Reilly's clothing took fire.

Schultz escaped, and is being sought by the police, who have failed to discover the motive for the attack. Schultz was private secretary to Mr. Bristow, national secretary to the progressive party, until a few days ago, when he resigned his position.

ALTERATIONS MADE BY HAYES BROTHERS

Hayes Brothers, Jack and Bob, have completed alterations on their premises, that doubles their floor space, at 9 Peachtree. The additional space has been given over to the tailoring department. This brings the entire tailoring department together under the direct supervision of the cutter. Since Hayes Brothers opened about six years ago they have steadily progressed until today they rank with the best men's stores Atlanta boasts.

Three Children Cremated.

Toano, Va., August 23.—Three children, two boys and a girl, were burned to death today when the home of Oliver Harkaday, at Diescend, a village 5 miles from here, was destroyed by fire. The dead are Mary Elizabeth and William Harkaday, and James Roearth, Jr. Returning home, Mrs. Harkaday saw flames issuing from an upper window and, with the help of neighbors, made desperate efforts to save the children. She was unable to reach them.

BURIAL OF R. E. ADAMS OCCURS AT ELBERTON

Elberton, Ga., August 23.—(Special.) R. E. Adams was interred here today. He had been in failing health for some months, and recently received a fall from which he never recovered. He was 78 years old, and leaves several children. He was the father of the late Willis B. Adams. He occupied prominent positions in the county and in 1886 and 1887 represented Elbert county in the legislature.

A Man Who Talks to the Public Through 934 Newspapers

An Interview with Robert S. Scarburgh, Advertising Manager of the New York Telephone Company, Written by Herbert N. Casson

Reprinted from "Newspaperdom."

THE NEWSPAPER AND THE TELEPHONE are two of a kind. They are the Siamese Twins of Talk. Both reach everywhere and concern everybody. Both have to deal with the transportation of language. Both serve the great function of keeping everybody in touch with everybody else; and both are practically operated by the public.

The greatest of all telephone companies is the New York Telephone Company, and its advertising manager is Robert S. Scarburgh, a native of old Virginia. Mr. Scarburgh is frank in acknowledging his dependence upon the newspapers. He says:

"To my mind there is nothing occult or mysterious about the advertising of a big public service corporation, such as our Company. It is a business proposition. It must be planned on business lines, tested and tried, and the results must back it up."

This is the spirit in which Mr. Scarburgh has attacked the advertising and publicity problems of the New York Telephone Company. The mysterious has given place to the business-like handling of advertising methods.

In the particular territory in which the New York Telephone Company operates (New York state and the northern part of New Jersey), the New York Telephone Company is about as wide a user of newspaper space as can be found. Practically every newspaper in this whole territory receives some advertising from the Telephone Company.

The advertising work has been attended with such unusual success that it deserves a considerable mention. Mr. Scarburgh says, "It is through the newspaper that our Company finds the medium for the expression of its policies and opinions to the public, and our Company has been for a long while committed to the policy of taking the public into its confidence through the newspaper and telling all the facts about the Company that are interesting."

Why does the Telephone Company advertise? Mr. Scarburgh says that on every side he receives this question, and the answer to it is the reason which is given for a large expenditure in any good business organization—the results justify the expenditure. The popular thought is that the telephone is a necessity and that it is useless to advertise it, but the experience the New York Telephone Company has had goes far to prove that it is a paying investment to advertise.

Mr. Scarburgh says:

"We have to show why the people should use our service. We advertise a service that can be used by all the population. Every man, woman and child is a possible customer. We try to show the public through the medium of printed matter the service we render, and how it can be adapted to fill their wants, and promotes comfort, promotes business and promotes health. We advertise to get the people to install service, to use more service, to install sufficient equipment, to use the toll lines, to buy and sell by telephone, to use the telephone instead of the mail. We advertise to get them to understand how we do business, and to do business our way, to show them that we are performing a service that is valuable to the community and how we perform it.

"This all helps us to do a paying business with a satisfied public, to please our stockholders with dividends, and our employees with salaries, so that you see with us advertising is really a sound business proposition.

"Away back in 1893, Mr. U. N. Bethell, then general manager of the Telephone Company, laid down the policy of advertising, which is still carried out, and in that year the first advertisement of the New York Telephone Company appeared.

"The esteem and good will of the public is absolutely essential to the efficient operation of a telephone system, and the work which our advertising has done for us through the newspapers in establishing this good will and reasonableness on the part of the public has been worth a great deal to us."

Mr. Scarburgh, when asked about his relations with the newspapers, and how he carried on these relations, remarked as follows:

"In a large measure we attribute the reason for our splendid relations with the newspaper press to the fact that we on our side have endeavored to treat the papers in an honest fashion. We are not seekers of free publicity, and we never have been, and the material we wish to place before the public we believe will carry its greatest effect when placed over our own name and displayed to the people.

"There are, of course, many instances connected with the operation of the telephone system where events are happening that have considerable news value, and in which the papers are naturally interested. In cases of this sort we are very anxious to see that the news, as published by the paper, is based on the real facts in the case, as a lack of understanding of telephone conditions frequently compels a paper to publish a story which is not based on real facts.

"Our relations with the press are so cordial, and the understanding is beginning to be so complete, that in a great number of cases we find the papers coming to us to ask for our side of the matter before publishing such stories. Because we appreciate this attitude on their part, we are endeavoring to treat them with absolute fairness, and to avoid any semblance of a desire to influence their news columns. We merely state the facts of the case as we know them, and allow the paper to use its judgment in the reporting of the story."

The advertising of the New York Telephone Company under Mr. Scarburgh's direction has been noted for its timeliness and vigor. When a heavy snowstorm occurs, the Telephone Company has an advertisement in immediately, pointing out the way to avoid the storm and still carry on business by telephone. An extremely hot day finds their advertisement pointing out to you the reasonableness of staying in your office and telephoning. No opportunity is lost to couple up the present minute with the telephone idea, and to quote Mr. Scarburgh, "To carry out our up-to-the-minute policy of advertising, and particularize in our appeal to the people, to select a particular message, which we wish to present to a particular class of people, no other medium than the newspaper would be possible for us."

Georgia's Neglected Dairying Industry Gains New Life

The Dairy Instruction Train of the Southern Railway in Atlanta with the staff of instructors and some visitors lined up on the platform.

"The trouble isn't so much the hollow tail of the cow as it is the hollow head of the farmer."—Brahnsen.

Have you ever traveled through Georgia in the winter time—through the so-called farming districts farther away than the places you can see from the train window?

If so, you must have seen, and shivered when you saw, the poor little emaciated-looking cow standing under a makeshift woodshed, or maybe the lean-room end of an unpainted farmhouse. The poor little cow has been milked and left there—out in the cold. She is unclean, unkempt and barely fed. You hesitate to enter if you are hunting shelter for the night, for you realize the poverty and discomfort of the cow very directly reflects the atmosphere of the home.

Upon the crop everything has depended, and the crop this year has not been good. In some of these homes there has never been a good crop. It is always bad, sometimes worse, but never better. Yes, I know it may not be loyal to paint such a picture as being in this our much-boosted state for its resources. But this picture can be seen and will be seen this winter, and last year eighteen million, four hundred and thirty-six thousand and sixty-eight pounds of butter were bought outside of the state of Georgia.

Now, if it were difficult to raise cattle in Georgia, if our climate and soil was not conducive to the raising of cattle, and produce dairy products cheaper in this state than in those states from which we send our money for the purchase of these products, I would say an arraignment of our present indifference in this matter were unjust.

Wasted Oratory.

Georgia orators since the state was in swaddling clothes have tried their lung power boosting the state's resources, the richness and fertility of her soil, her agricultural lands, and her advantages for every kind—as compared with any other part of the globe.

Yet, with all of that—and this is not pleasant, either—there is a certain little worm called "hook worm," yielded by the soil, and there is a certain little tick called cow tick, which has infested the state in more places than any map yet shows. Now, the impoverished cow, with its tick company, is going to be with us as long as we have our hook worm citizens with us, for there are many people in Georgia who, when it comes to the care of their cattle, have the hook worm spirit—the one unmistakable symptom of laziness. Georgia will never be able to rid herself of the stain upon her good name which is left by the trail of this worm, until she can point with pride to the well-built cowshed and the healthy cattle underneath.

The Cow Is Neglected.

"Sookie" has been long enough neglected in Georgia. She has lost her cud and wagged her hollow tail long enough against a toppling shed, and the time has come when she should be raised to her dignity in the animal kingdom, given a comfortable abode on the farm, and given her chance to produce right here in her state, some of those eighteen millions of pounds of butter we have been buying outside of the state each year for a long time.

"Sookie" has the same chance that the ten thousand dollar beauty had whose picture is shown on this page today. This picture hangs as an inspiration in the dairy construction car of the Southern railroad passing through Atlanta Thursday and Friday, bringing a message which, when it is acted upon, will add another chapter of prosperity to Georgia's history, and warrant her claims as the "Empire State of the South."

There is no reason why Georgia's cattle should ever touch polluted soil; no reason why they should be preyed upon by ticks or hollow-horn, if they are only given the care that is coming to them from intelligent, energetic rural citizens.

It's Time to Wake Up.

But so long as our cattle is neglected—so long as we do not see what is ours—what our possessions are, and make the best of them, we will still be held down by the hook worm spirit which sends millions of dollars out of the state which might be ours right here. Every farm in the state should have its department for cattle—its own dairy—and until that is accomplished the farm is yet incomplete. It is so much the integral part of the life of the farm—the cattle-raising and the dairying—the owner scarcely has the right to term what he has "a farm," until he has well developed that part.

Lately, since our United States commission was sent to Europe to investigate the credit systems, and we have heard wondrous stories of the prosperity there, where rural credit has worked out so surely for the farmers' interest, the question is asked "How?"

One of the first things we hear is the success the farmer has in cattle-raising and dairying. That is one of the great assets they can put forward to warrant their credit.

How many of our rural borrowers would be able to do that?

They must come to it.

Must Use Resources.

It is not so much what we have in Georgia now—everybody knows what we have—but it is what we are doing with it. All our talk about resources is not going to mean anything, unless we do something with these resources.

Our college of agriculture, with its wonderful extension work, has blazed the way and waked up the people to what they need, but the people have to be waked up still more, and there should be many agencies at work.

A new and active agency is the dairy instruction car now making its way along the lines of the Southern railway. It is another following-up of the rational theory of taking knowledge to the people, bringing to them that which they need when they can't come after it themselves.

The car is fitted up to accommodate the visitors who come. Pictures of prize cattle adorn the walls, and illustrations are given as to how to build the cow's home; how to milk her; what to do with the milk afterward, and there are whole stories told in the pictures, showing the well-fed cow and the one neglected.

In the upper end of the car are the last invented facilities for the manipulation of dairy products, all the vessels and apparati for the testing of milk, and much literature to instruct. The car is in charge of three men, experts in their line: a representative from the cattle-raising branch of the United States department of agriculture; the state veterinary and the representative from the Southern railroad, an expert in cattle-raising and dairying.

The lectures are divided into two courses—those designed to instruct dairymen, and those designed to help consumers of dairy products, but all the lectures are so practical and partake so much of the human interest, that they are instructive and interesting to the people at large.

The Appeal to Women.

For a number of women the club women of Georgia have striven for some form of instruction for farmers' wives, that they might become factors in the development of dairy products. They worked for an appropriation which might warrant women experts in this line being put on the staff of the extension workers of the college of agriculture. They saw with joy the step in this direction of giving rural women a new interest in home, when the girls' canning clubs were organized under the agricultural extension work, and now they are hoping for a similar movement in the direction of instructing women and interesting them in cattle-raising and dairying.

They believe that in this knowledge women will have a better understanding of all food products; that it will aid them in conserving the health of those around them, and that it will be the beginning of a new industry among Georgia women which will hold them to the appreciation of the farm as a home. Just as the canning industry has reconciled many a girl to her home on the farm, and the earning of a livelihood there, so the development of dairying as an industry will bring about the same good results.

Club Women to Take Up Subject.

It is probable that at the meeting of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs in Cuthbert, in November, plans may be made by which the club women will become a direct agency in the promotion of better dairying movement.

In Atlanta the City Federation of Women's Clubs have already cooperated with the Dairymen's association in bringing the consumer to realize his and her obligation to know the care which should be given milk, this in relation to the preservation of health. In many cases where illness has been traceable to impure milk, and the milk has been analyzed before delivery, and then afterwards in the home of the consumer it has been found that ignorance on the part of the consumer has caused the impurity.

It was interesting to note that at the lectures given in the dairy instruction train Thursday and Friday the most interested listeners were women. They asked questions, took notes, and eagerly sought the literature being given out. How to dehorn a cow was a subject to which much instruction was given to one of the women dairymen present, and another showed a disposition to argue as to the best breeds.

"Now, where is the cow?" asked a well-known Atlanta woman, who had come to hear the lectures. She was deeply interested; examined the milk separator and other new devices. She watched the milk tested, was convinced she knew how; looked at the pictures of the prize cattle beauties, and was very much disappointed when she found the car was minus the all-important animal about which the problem of dairying revolves.

The world's champion cow, her official record at 8 years, 2 months and 1 day has been: Seven days, 694.6 pounds milk, 41 pounds butter. Thirty days, 2,833 pounds milk; 104 pounds butter

Clever Sheriff of Spalding Ferrets Out Mystery of String of Daring Robberies

Will Kirkland and Two Associates Are Arrested and Make Full Confession of Their Crimes.

Griffin, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—The burglarizing of the Persons-Hammond hardware store here last week by Will Kirkland and two associates gave rise to a vast amount of human interest and gossip on the streets, as well as affording Sheriff L. D. Hutson and Deputy Sheriff Mallory a splendid opportunity to do some clever detective work. The burglary, which was consummated at about the same time as two others, was well planned as to details, fitted with daring ventures, and successfully made under the glare of electric lights and at a time of night when none of Griffin's citizens had even thought of retiring.

The planning of the burglary was arranged with much completeness, and the detecting of the criminals and the rounding up of the gang, followed by their arrests and confession to Sheriff Hutson, was executed with the cleverness of a Nick Carter or a Sherlock Holmes. This good piece of work has made the already popular sheriff of Spalding county the man of the hour.

Hardware Store Robbed.

For the fourth time in the last few years the hardware store was entered Thursday night, and many valuables were taken out. When the store was opened Friday morning for the day's business it was soon observed that the goods had been tampered with.

As in the escape of Harry Thaw, a dairyman played a conspicuous part in this affair, for it was a dairyman who had purchased from Russell Kirkland a brand-new revolver at a remarkably low price, and which was offered for sale to another hardware store. Upon examination of registered number of pistols in stock it was found that this one was of the missing numbers. Soon the sheriff was speeding to the home of Russell Kirkland, near Rushton cotton mills. Behind bars Kirkland confessed finally to having in his possession nine of the stolen pistols, that he had buried five of them and had put in the keeping of a Greek fruit merchant three others, besides selling one to Bunk Latta, the dairyman.

SHERIFF L. D. HUTSON.

Bicycle Is Stolen.

At this juncture knowledge of a robbery of a bicycle shop, owned by Tom Elliott, came to hand. As Russell Kirkland admitted that the pistols were placed in his keeping by his cousin, Will Kirkland, it then became evident that Will had also robbed the bicycle shop and had used the bicycle to make his getaway.

The next problem was to locate Will Kirkland. It was known that he had relatives in Jonesboro. The presence of a bicycle in the problem indicated that he probably went in that direction. Policeman Archer was dispatched to Jonesboro in plain clothes, but returned without his man.

At midnight Saturday night Sheriff Hutson in automobile went to Jonesboro, believing Will Kirkland to be there with his uncle, or at East Point with another uncle. The sheriff found Will at Jonesboro and brought him back to Griffin Sunday morning. At 3 o'clock Sunday morning the sheriff, accompanied by Russell Kirkland, went to an old field and dug up the buried treasure and was also given the custody of the guns in the keeping of the Greek.

In the meantime as the plot was revealing and confessions were being made, it was learned that Evans Brothers' store, of Jonesboro, had also been robbed a week before, when a large quantity of watches, knives, chains, jewelry and men's socks had been stolen.

Developments Come Fast.

Also on the busy Saturday, when developments were coming thick and fast, it was determined that Tom Kirkland, a brother of Will, had received some of the goods from both places, Jonesboro and Griffin, since Will had now confessed to the robbery of the Jonesboro store.

It was known that Tom Kirkland lived in the second district of Pike county with a relative, George Barrow, who happened to be a bailiff in that very district. On this same Saturday it so happened that Barrow came to Griffin accompanied by Tom Kirkland. As the Spalding county and Griffin authorities did not know Tom by sight, and knowing that he is related to Barrow, they gave Barrow the tip that Tom was wanted in connection with the triple robbery and asked his assistance in locating Tom.

Barrow gave no intimation that Tom had come to town with him and was in town at that moment, but kept mum and hung around till midnight, when he and Tom returned to Pike county.

On the way home Barrow tipped off Tom and at 2 o'clock Sunday morning the two went to the home of a negro, Cephas Matthews, and engaged him to go and hide all the stolen plunder they had in hand.

Sheriff Goes to Pike.

Sunday morning Sheriff Hutson, accompanied by J. B. Mills and J. W. Hammond, went in auto to Barrow's home in Pike, as they had become aware of Tom's presence in Griffin the night before.

Barrow, learning their mission, admitted that Tom had been at his home, but had gone two hours before. However, he assured them he was waiting an opportunity to assist the Spalding county authorities. He suggested that Sheriff Hutson leave with him the warrant and that he make the arrest on Tom's return. Again he suggested that he be allowed to go in search of Tom.

A neighbor of Barrow, standing by, tipped off the sheriff that he had better not let Barrow go, and stated that Tom was then gone to see if the negro had hidden the stuff.

With Barrow in the car with Hammond and Mills, securely hid in the bushes, Sheriff Hutson concealed himself in Barrow's yard till Tom should return. When arrested Tom denied all knowledge of the robberies. After being questioned thirty minutes, he finally admitted the whole thing, and showed that he and Barrow were wearing some of the socks stolen in Jonesboro the week before, and that he had on one of the stolen guns.

Search was made of the negro's house for the plunder, but nothing was found. The journey was resumed and the negro, Cephas Matthews, was located at Orchard Hill, several miles distant. Upon arrest the negro denied all knowledge of the affair, but on his way to jail confessed to hiding the goods, and offered to show the sheriff where they were. Matthews led the way to an old barn on a vacant farm near Barrow's home, where, under some hay and fodder beneath the barn floor, the stolen knives and jewelry, with the remainder of the socks, were found.

Tells About Robbery.

Talking of his maneuvers, Will Kirkland said: "I thought $30 the best time to do that job, as the cops wouldn't be looking out for anything big at that time. When Forbes stepped to his back door, I spoke to him and walked away. He was dead easy. Then I came back and raised that cellar door just a little to allow me to crawl in. As I went through that store I came to a box of cartridges, but I didn't want the whole box, so I just put a few in my pocket. Then I looked on the shelves and took three boxes of every kind of cartridge I could find, so as to have some for every kind of gun I stole. I didn't take any pocket-knives, 'cause I had enough weight on me to tote without them. Them eleven guns weighed me down considerable, I tell you. Once I dropped a fine automatic Colt pistol, but I didn't stop to pick it up. Time was worth too much.

"As I came out that cellar door a nigger had just passed, but he didn't see me. Maybe he was after something his self. And I went on through town with eleven guns hanging to me.

I could have run the whole police department if I had just turned loose on 'em. When I got that wheel out of Elliott's shop I then skidooed and made for the tall timber. I got to Jonesboro long before day."

LARGEST POWER DAM HAS BEEN COMPLETED

Keokuk, Iowa, August 23.—The largest water power dam in the world will be dedicated here next Tuesday. The plant, built at a cost of $27,000,000 in the Mississippi river, where the states of Iowa, Illinois and Missouri join, is expected to develop 300,000 horsepower.

The dam, stretching nine-tenths of a mile across the river, is 54 feet wide at the top. It consists of 119 arched spans each thirty feet, between six-feet piers. In each span is a spillway thirty-two feet high, topped by a steel gate eleven feet high. By opening and closing a variable number of these gates, the water above the dam is kept at a certain height and sufficient water for navigation below is always passed through the dam.

The water power, converted into electricity, is for use in the new power zone, extending from Burlington, Iowa to St. Louis, the latter taking 60,000 horsepower of current.

In order not to obstruct navigation on the river the power company has built a lock which is to be the property of the United States government. It has the same width as the Panama canal locks and a lift one-third higher than any one lock on the isthmus.

The power house is one-third of a mile long and contains thirty of the largest turbines ever built.

The lake above the dam has an area of 100 square miles and its water is kept at a constant level by the operation of gates in the dam.

France at Panama Show.

Paris, August 23.—The French government today sent a delegation to San Francisco to take possession of a site on the grounds of the Panama-Pacific exposition for the French pavilion. While the French government has definitely decided to take part in the exposition the extent of the exhibits and their variety, beauty and value will depend largely upon the report of this delegation.

No More Bleeding Corns

No more knives, no more scissors, no more razors, no more blood poisoning. Away with the instruments of barbarous butchery. Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid will take out any corn, hard or soft, whole and positively without pain or danger. Never pare or cut a corn, for if the blade slips, as it frequently does, the corn bleeds, there is serious danger of blood poisoning and many deaths have been caused in this way.

The first application of Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid gives instant relief from pain, and if a soft corn of new growth, will remove it. Hard, deep, stubborn corns require several applications, but are just as completely removed, root and all, and there is no possibility of danger, nor pain. Tampering with a corn causes irritation and makes it harder to remove. Use Jacobs' Magic Corn Liquid, we guarantee it to be successful and painless. 20c, by mail 22c. —(Advt.)

MISS GENEVIEVE GRESHAM,
Of Portsmouth, Va., the attractive guest of Mrs. John Russell Gresham.

Miss Tillman's Tea.

A delightful occasion of the past week was the tea given Wednesday afternoon by Miss Jewel Tillman in compliment to her guests, Miss Wood of Winder, Miss Henderson of Florida and Miss Mattox of Virginia.

Miss Tillman's attractive home was beautifully decorated with smilax, palms and ferns as a background for white clematis and pink garden flowers and many pink candles shed a soft light over the scene.

Miss Tillman received her guests wearing a handsome gown of white embroidered crepe. Mrs. Charles D. Tillman assisted her daughter in entertaining.

About 150 guests called during the afternoon.

Fairbanks-Stamper.

A recent wedding of much interest to their many friends was that of Miss Frances Susan Fairbanks and Mr. William Harrison Stamper, Jr., having taken place at the home of the bride on the evening of August the fourteenth.

The bridal party entered the parlor as a selection from Mendelssohn's wedding march was softly played by Miss Katherine Rouse.

A corner of the room banked with palms made a background for the wedding party. The ceremony was performed in an impressive manner by Rev. E. E. Cavaleri, brother-in-law of the bride.

The bride was becomingly gowned in white French crepe, trimmed with baby Irish lace, and carried a bouquet of white bride roses. She is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Stewart Fairbanks and a young woman of charming personality.

Mr. Stamper was formerly of Danbury, Iowa, but since coming to Atlanta a year ago has won a host of friends, socially as well as in business. He is also well known in military circles.

The maid of honor, Miss Ruble Herring, wore a gown of white voile, lace-trimmed, with girdle of pink sat in. Her flowers were pink roses.

Mr. Lester C. Hoover was groomsman.

Mrs. W. E. Bryan, of Ringgold, Ga., an aunt of the bride, and Rev. and Mrs. E. E. Cavaleri were among the out-of-town guests.

The home was decorated throughout with palms, roses and gladioli.

The many gifts were displayed in the dining-room.

Mr. and Mrs. Stamper are at home in the Piedmont apartments.

McCall-Hall.

The friends of Mr. Joseph A. Hall, Jr., will be interested to know that announcement has been received of the marriage, August 17, of Miss Mabel McCall, of New Orleans. The marriage took place at the home of Dr. and Mrs. R. E. Blouin, brother and sister of the bride, at Tucmuan, Argentine Republic, where Mr. Hall has been engaged in business for several years. Mr. and Mrs. Hall will sail from Montevideo for home on August 30.

For Miss Clements.

A pleasant event of Friday was the spend-the-day party, entertained by Mrs. A. G. McDuffie in honor of Miss Clarice Clements, of Rome. The party included Mrs. Robert Carroll, Mrs. E. G. Clinkscales, Mrs. D. A. McDuffie, Mrs. George Turner, Miss Annie Carroll, Misses Amelia and Nora McDuffie.

Evening Bridge Club.

The Wednesday Evening Bridge club was delightfully entertained by Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Everett, at their home, 199 Angier avenue, Wednesday evening.

The top scores were made by Mrs. Frank Jeter and Mr. W. C. Wood. At conclusion of the game refreshments were served.

Silver Shower.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the West End Baptist church will entertain at a silver shower Monday afternoon, August 25, 4 to 6, at the church, for Miss Clifford Hunter, who leaves soon for north China, where she will assist Dr. T. W. Ayers.

Mrs. W. A. Hartman will have charge of the program and Mrs. W. R. Respess, the refreshments.

A cordial invitation is extended to all the ladies of the Atlanta association of Baptist churches and their friends.

Surprise Party.

One of the enjoyable events of the week was the surprise party given at the home of Dr. and Mrs. R. B. Callahan Thursday evening in honor of their guests, Messrs W. L. and Dick Carmack and Ross Gillett, of Opelika, Ala.

Those present were Misses Mary Louise Jackson, Leonard McDuffie, Annie Carroll Ellis Short, Emily Schell, Annie Lemon and Evelyn Holcomb, Elmina Schell, Wittie Caldwell, Janie Callahan. Messrs. Thomas Spencer, Frank Spencer, Frank and Phil Boykin, Marian Blackwell, Horace Lipscomb, Render Callahan.

Spend-the-Day Party.

Misses Mattie and Winnie Couch entertained a company of friends at a spend-the-day party Thursday in honor of their guest, Miss Hazel Waters, of Virginia.

Dinner Party.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. McKenzie, of Church street, East Point, entertained at a family dinner Thursday in honor of their brother, Mr. Hugh Couch, who returned the day following to his home in Dallas, Texas.

Reagen-Floyd.

Miss Mary Lillie Reagen and Mr. J. M. Floyd were married Thursday afternoon at 124 Mangum street. Rev. A. C. Ward officiated.

For Visitor.

Miss Mary Lee Ison entertained twenty-five guests Friday evening at her home in College Park in honor of Miss Elsie Plumb, of Clearwater, Fla. Golden glow decorated the house and Miss Ison received her guests wearing a white voile gown over pink and Miss Plumb wore blue chiffon trimmed in lace. Assisting in entertaining were Mrs. G. C. Ison, Miss Annie Lou Ison and Miss Gladys Brown.

Cox-Kelly.

The marriage has been announced of Miss Mary Edna Cox and Mr. Homer G. Kelly on July 9. Rev. A. F. Flury performing.

Miss Cox is the beautiful daughter of Mrs. J. E. Hamilton, of 285 Sunset avenue, and numbers her friends by the score. Mr. Kelly is a popular engineer connected with the Western & Atlantic railroad. They will be at home to their friends at 285 Sunset avenue.

Beck-Batterton.

The marriage of Miss Margaret Beck and Mr. Lyle K. Batterton will take place next Saturday afternoon, August 30, at 3:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Judge and Mrs. Marcus W. Beck. Miss Rachel Beck will be her sister's only attendant. Dr. Charles W. Daniel will perform the ceremony, which will be witnessed by intimate friends and relatives. Mr. Batterton and his bride will leave immediately after the ceremony for South Dakota. They will be at home after September 15 in Inman park.

Duggan-Evans.

The summer home of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Duggan, at Clayton, Ga., was the scene of a beautiful wedding on Thursday, August 14, when their daughter, Miss Lillian Duggan, of Sparta, Ga., and Mr. George William Evans, of Anderson, S. C., were united in marriage.

Only close relatives and a few intimate friends were in attendance. The house was elaborately decorated with vines and flowers from the adjacent mountains. Wild clematis festooned the mantels and windows and rhododendron was banked in the wide-open fireplace, and a profusion of mountain laurel and feathery ferns completed the color scheme of green and white.

To the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, effectively rendered by Mrs. E. P. Davis, of Forsyth, the groom entered with his best man, Mr. B. O. Evans, of Anderson, S. C. Following them came the bride, attended by her sister, Miss Janie Prichard Duggan. The ceremony was impressively performed by Rev. Milo H. Massey, of Hartwell, Ga.

The bride was becomingly gowned in a traveling suit of King's blue with hat to match, and wore a corsage bouquet of lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore a white cloth suit, white picture hat and a corsage of pink Killarney roses.

Immediately after the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Evans left for an extended tour of the New England states and Canada, after which they will be at home to their friends at their future home, Anderson, S. C.

Mrs. Evans is a very cultured and accomplished young woman, a graduate of Bessie Tift college, and having taken post graduate work at University of Chicago, Cornell university and Columbia college, New York. She has been a valued member of the faculty of Bessie Tift college and more recently of Anderson college.

Mr. Evans is well known in business circles having been for a number of years president and treasurer of the Evans' pharmacy corporation, which conducts three of the leading drug stores in Anderson, S. C.

Among the guests was the venerable and distinguished grandfather of the bride, Dr. Ivy W. Duggan, 82 years old, honored and loved by three generations as an educator of note throughout Georgia and Alabama. Others attending were Mrs. Ivy W. Duggan, Miss Gertrude Avant, of Atlanta; Mr. E. G. Evans, Misses Lula, Margaret and Nancy Evans, of Pendleton, S. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Evans, Mr. J. Furman Evans, Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Evans, Eunice and Sarah Evans, Miss Margaret M. Evans, Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Bleckley, Mrs. W. F. Cox, Mrs. C. E. Cobb, of Anderson, S. C.; Miss Gertrude Dickinson, of Charlotte, N. C.; Mrs. Logan E. Bleckley, Colonel and Mrs. J. T. Davis, of Clayton.

Automobile Party.

Miss Lillian S. Norvell, of "Milneburg," New Orleans, is being delightfully entertained by Misses Nell and Marian Thompson, on West Washington street, East Point. Miss Norvell is a member of an automobile party touring the country. The party consists of prominent Orleanians—Mr. and Mrs. Francis Carrau, Misses Carrau, Messrs. H. Rahders and W. A. Bracht—and have traversed twenty-four states and Canada, being now on the home stretch. The remainder of the party are domiciled at Peachtree inn, Atlanta, where they will be for several days, or at least until they are able to see some of the interesting sights of the Gate City.

Miss Norvell is the daughter of Mrs. Madge Dimitry Norvell, of New Orleans, who is widely known through the columns of the New Orleans daily press, more especially The Times-Democrat, of which she has been a constant contributor for a great many years. The party will return to New Orleans from Atlanta via Montgomery, Ala., Meridian and Jackson, Miss.

Gaiety at East Lake.

The Athletic club dance at East Lake last night was the brightest of the season, following, as it did, upon the water sports program, and assembling the largest company of the summer.

Dinner preceding the dance had to be served indoors, as well as the length of the long porches, and afternoon and evening the clubhouse, the boathouse and the grounds presented the gayest of pictures.

Golf, tennis, the water sports, music, dinner and dancing—the program was complete for the brightest kind of a holiday, and it proved so. All the younger set were in attendance, and every girl was a heroine in one diversion or another, while all the club membership was present to help and dispense the club's hospitality.

To Miss Cannaday.

Mrs. Dudley Cowles will give a porch bridge party this week in compliment to her sister, Mrs. Cannaday.

Matinee Party.

Mrs. Augustus C. Castle gave a matinee party Thursday in compliment to Miss Claire Dunston and to Mrs. T. E. Echols, a recent bride. The other guests were Miss Sadie Williams and Miss Bertha Ballou.

For Mrs. Ayer.

Mrs. C. K. Ayer returned yesterday from a visit to Miss Ione Price at her home near Phipps, Ga.

Miss Price entertained very delightfully at a spend-the-day party Thursday for her guest. Bridge was played during the morning, after which a delicious picnic luncheon was served on the banks of the lake.

The guests were Mrs. J. Reagan, Mrs. E. M. Smith, Mrs. W. A. Price, Mrs. Ben Neal, Mrs. J. E. Smith, Mrs. Charles Whitehead, Mrs. Paul Turner of McDonough, Miss Burke of Hartwell, and the Misses Price.

Mrs. Brown Entertains.

Mrs. L. N. Brown, of East Point, entertained Thursday in honor of her sister, Mrs. A. O. Self, of Macon. Those invited were Mrs. C. W. Whitney, Mrs. W. W. Carroll, Mrs. E. R. Pyle, Miss Hazel Whitney, Miss Clarice Carroll, Misses Marie and Evelyn Brown.

Beavers-Thornton.

Mrs. Georgia Beavers has announced the marriage of her daughter, Sarah Louise, to Mr. John Raymond Thornton, Thursday, August 14, 1913, Campbellton, Ga.

Porch Party.

An enjoyable event of Tuesday was the porch party entertained by Mrs. W. C. Carroll in honor of her guests, Miss Iva Vance, of Tallapoosa, and Miss Alma Adamson, of Jonesboro, invited to meet the honor guests were Misses Mattie Lou Bailey, Kate Hemperley, Male Shepard, Pauline Trimble, Elsie Short, Mary L. Jackson, Evelyn Holcombe, Leonora McDuffie, Amelia McDuffie, Annie Carroll, Mrs. Joe Oberst.

Thursday evening Mrs. Carroll entertained the Alpha Beta club in compliment to Misses Iva Vance and Adamson. Music and parlor games were the features of the entertainment. During the evening refreshments were served to twenty guests.

For House Party.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Bubanks, who have been entertaining a delightful house party at their cottage, "Ruby Ford," on Lakewood avenue, for the last three weeks, had for their guests the past week Mrs. Ed Hays, Miss Ruby Hays, Miss Maude Hays, Mrs. M. A. Hunt, Miss Mollie Hunt, Mrs. J. C. Wyche, Mrs. A. C. Young, J. C. Wyche, Jr., all of Macon.

On Tuesday of the last week Mr. and Mrs. Eubank entertained at an enjoyable spend-the-day party in honor of their house guests. The home was decorated for the occasion in ferns and roses. The diningroom was turquoise in the decorations with pink and pink roses. Those invited to meet the guests of honor were Mrs. A. W. Born, of Anniston, Ala.; Misses John Short, Mrs. J. M. Orr, Mrs. B. H. Orr and children, Mrs. E. G. Clinkscales, Mrs. James Barfield, Mrs. Charles E. Hitt, Mrs. G. T. Kohler, Miss Clara Short, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Scearles, all of East Point.

During the afternoon photographs were taken of the house party. Four generations were represented in the house guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Scarles, who are gifted artists in music, favored the company with several selections during the day.

Gortatowsky-Neal.

The marriage of Miss Florence Gortatowsky, of Albany, Ga., and Mr. Walter Neal, of the same place, which took place in Albany last week, will be an announcement of pleasing interest to their friends throughout the state. They have spent their honeymoon at resorts of Tennessee, and spent yesterday in Atlanta, the guest of Mrs. Neal's brother, Mr. J. D. Gortatowsky, at the Georgian Terrace.

They were joined here by Mr. Leon Gortatowsky, who returned with them last night to Albany, where they will reside.

At the Driving Club.

The music, the flowers, the prettily gowned women all added to the charm of the atmosphere at the week-end dinner-dance at the Driving club last night, when eighty of the club members enjoyed dinner on the terrace and dancing afterwards.

The tables were decorated with flowers, in the vivid colors of the zennia, and there were lanterns and fairy lamps to add to the decorative effect.

Among the hosts of the evening were: Mr. J. D. Palmer, Mr. J. H. Lewis, Mr. J. H. Nunnally, Mr. W. E. Austin, Mr. Jackson, Mr. Dudley Cowles, Mr. E. T. Lamb, Mr. Jesse Draper, Mr. J. C. Harris, Mr. Dozier Lowndes.

Tuxedo Club.

One of the most delightful events of the week was the dance given by the Tuxedo club, at their club rooms on Lee street Friday evening. The guest of honor was Miss Cabrial, of Waco, Texas.

Among those present were Miss Cabrial, Miss Mills, Miss Haney, Mrs. Elsing, Miss Nellie Osburn, Miss Ella Hall, Miss Ellen McCullough, Miss Patter, Miss Mae Shelton, Miss Davis, Miss Earline Gaines, Miss Lula Austine, Miss Eula Baker, Miss McKee, Miss Phillips, Mrs. Whitamore, Miss Marie Kelley, Miss Kate Watson, Mr. John T. Malone, Mr. E. G. Smith, Mr. E. Adler, Mr. Dick Speer, Mr. C. L. Yarbrough, Mr. Ogletree, Mr. F. M. Harris, Mr. G. W. R. Barker, Mr. Sam Cohen, Mr. R. P. Pierce, Mr. P. C. Westmoreland, Mr. W. F. Howell, Mr. Guy M. Homes, Mr. E. R. Peres, Mr. C. O. Pope, Mr. Stacy Adams, Mr. R. L. Beavers, Mr. Guy Chappell, Mr. Robert Caldwell, Mr. J. A. Bose, Mr. R. H. Wallace, Mr. J. G. Hilton, Mr. L. S. Elkins, Mr. Fred Boyd, Mr. C. A. Parker.

Miscellaneous Shower.

Mrs. Thomas J. Smith will entertain at a miscellaneous shower Thursday afternoon, August 28, for Miss Jennie Gavin, whose marriage to Mr. Edward Dean takes place early in September.

Heart-Dice Party.

Misses Male Shepard and Carrie May Allen entertained twenty-four guests at heart dice Friday evening, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Taylor on Church street in East Point.

The occasion was the anniversary of Miss Shepard's and Miss Allen's birthdays.

SOLICITOR REASSERTS HIS CONVICTION

have had their lunch and will be working there the greater part of the afternoon.

"Well, Mrs. White comes down the steps and passes the office. Is Frank ready to leave? Has he got on his hat and coat? No; he's not in a hurry then, not at all. He's got to wait there to get rid of that body."

Addresses Himself to Frank.

Here Mr. Dorsey gradually drifted in the use of the second person in his talk and seemed to be addressing himself to Frank instead of to the jurors.

"You went tiptoeing right back to see if everything was all right, and then you signalled Conley," he continued, "and you soon learned, by what Conley said about not seeing a certain girl go back down the steps, that you were given away, and so you sent him back to get the body. There was no blood there where you had killed the girl. The blow was not sufficient, and no blood was there until Conley dropped the body and caused it to spatter out.

"No, you had struck the girl and gagged her and assaulted her and then you went back and got a cord and fixed the little girl, whom you had assaulted, when, thank God, she would not yield to your proposals.

"You got that cord because you wanted to save your reputation—you had no character—you wanted to save your reputation among the good people of Rabbi Marx's church and among those in the B'nai Brith, and you wanted to save your reputation among the Hasees and the Montags.

"Oh, you knew that dead men tell no tales, you knew it, but you forgot that murder will out. Oh, had that little girl lived to tell the assault made on her in that factory, there would have been a thousand men in Atlanta who would have not have feared your wealth, and your power and relatives, rich and poor, but who would have stormed the jail and defied the law in taking vengeance on you. It is not right that it should be so, people ought to wait for fair courts and fearless juries to decide these things, but they don't and you knew it then.

"I wouldn't be a bit surprised that if Frank hadn't put Mary Phagan's handbag in the safe it would have turned up just the same as the plaited envelope and blood spots in the Pinkerton found on the first floor.

"This cloth that was found around her throat was torn from her own underclothing and shoved over her mouth for a gag, while Frank tiptoed back to his office for the cord with which to strangle her.

Describes Death of Girl.

"When she did not yield to his lust that was not like that of other men, he struck her. They scuffled. She fell against the machine. Her brain jarred into unconsciousness.

"They say he had no marks on his person—he did not give her time to inflict marks. Durrant had no marks.

"There never was such a farce as this attempt by Frank's able counsel to disprove the fact that the spots found on the second floor were blood stains. They bring in this negress Lee. He says it wasn't. Who is this Lee?

"You know it was blood and that it was the blood of Mary Phagan, because its location corresponds with the spot where Jim Conley says he dropped the body.

"Barrett discovered the blood and hair just before any reward was ever offered. The hair was identified by Magnolia Kennedy, their own witness.

"When it became apparent that too many persons saw Frank go to the elevator box and get the key, old man Holloway, who lied and betrayed us, perjured himself in a story about having opened the box, himself.

Says Holloway Perjured Himself.

"Holloway perjured himself either to obtain acquittal of his boss or to get the reward for the conviction of Jim Conley, this negro. I say that Barrett stands as an oasis in a mighty desert for truth and veracity, although his own job be in jeopardy. He has told the truth. If there be a man in town who rightly deserves a reward, it is that poor employee of the pencil factory who had courage to tell the truth.

"Compare him with Holloway.

"Neither did Barrett make his discoveries on May 15. He did not go the floor and is positive he did not see it.

"Jim Conley saw Mary Phagan go up and never come down. She was killed where Jim Conley found her, and her body was put where Frank wrote in his telegram 'in the cellar.'

"Darley and Quinn saw the blood spots. Sometimes, you know, we have to go into the camp of the enemy for ammunition. The handsome Darley was tied up by an affidavit. It was a hard pill for him, but he had it to swallow, and he admitted having seen the blood that so glaringly accused his boss.

"To cap it all, Dr. Claude Smith saw the blood, and, upon first hearing it, found there were blood corpuscles, disporting the argument of the defense that it was paint.

"Their own witnesses, Schiff, Magnolia Kennedy and Wade Campbell all saw this blood and admit having seen it.

New Richmond in Field.

"Frank and his friends found that Harry Scott didn't manipulate to suit them. They got some new Richmonds and put them in the field. Where are they now, these men who found the club and blood spots and planted envelope?

"Where is Pierce, the Pinkerton head? Echo answers 'Where?'

"Where is McWorth, who helped find them? Echo answers 'Where?'

"All detectives, Starnes, Black, Campbell, Rosser, Scott every one of whom searched in vicinity of the scuttle hole, say they could see no blood spots nor club nor envelope.

"Don't you know that if they had not been planted and had been there after the murder, Holloway and others of his ilk would have been only too glad to have reported it to their superintendent in prison.

"Why, only a few days after the murder a general clean-up was ordered by insurance authorities. None of the cleaners found the blood nor the club nor the envelope on the first floor. Why? Because they weren't there.

Evidence All Planted.

"The club and spots and envelope are purely in keeping with the planting of Newt Lee's bloody shirt.

"Both Boone and Frank take out the clock slip that morning and say that it was accurate. But, later, when the shirt was planted, this graduate of Cornell, this man so quick at figures, saw that Newt wouldn't have had time to go home and change his shirt, so he accordingly changed his figures and alibied his Stanford.

"But, the man who planted the shirt did his job too well—he got a shirt too clean and smeared blood on both sides.

"And, more about this club—Dr. Harris and Dr. Hurt both say that the wound in Mary Phagan's head could not have been inflicted by the planted club. It was too large, too round.

"They harp on this Minola McKnight business. Isn't it strange that Minola, herself, should tell such a story to her husband, then corroborate it in a sworn and written statement.

"Are we going to swallow all this stuff of Mrs. Selig's without knowledge of human nature?

"Minola, in presence of her counsel, made that statement and swore to it. Gordon would not have been worthy of the name of lawyer had the story not been true and he had not said:

"'Minola, don't put your name to that story unless it be true.'

"If the statement weren't true, Gordon, her lawyer, would not have sat there without raising a hand, knowing, well knowing, that his client could be sent to the penitentiary for false swearing.

"The reason Minola made that affidavit was because it was the embodiment of the truth, the pure truth."

It was at this point that Judge Roan recessed until Monday, on account of the exhausted condition of Mr. Dorsey.

Mrs. Williams Is Elected Head of G., A. & F. Railroad

MRS. J. P. WILLIAMS.

Bainbridge, Ga., August 23.—At a meeting of the directors of the Georgia, Alabama and Florida railroad today, Mrs. Cora B. Williams was elected president, succeeding her husband, the late Captain J. P. Williams. Mrs. Williams is believed to be the only woman in the south who is president of a railroad.

All other officials were re-elected, including the vice president, Colonel Green Johnson, of Sandersville.

SOLICITOR DORSEY ADDRESSING JURY

hausted, left the court room at 1:45 o'clock, the waiting crowd once more cheered him wildly. It was a splendid tribute to a man who, in discharge of his duty and in the face of many disagreeable obstacles, has fought his way regardless of pressure or opinion.

Large Crowd Hears The Solicitor's Speech.

As early as 7 o'clock a large crowd was in line in front of the courthouse clamoring for admission. When the doors were opened the crowd surged in and in five minutes there was not a vacant seat in the room. Many ladies were in the audience—friends of the Phagan girl and her family.

Seated near the rail was Mrs. J. W. Coleman and her daughter, dressed in deep mourning. Only a day or so before they had suffered bereavement in the death of Mrs. Coleman's mother. Mrs. Frank sat beside her husband. His mother occupied another seat next her son.

Mrs. Coleman Hysterical Over Story of Murder.

In the midst of Solicitor Dorsey's graphic description of the murder of her daughter, Mrs. Coleman's voice rose in a moan, which ended in a heart-broken scream of hysteria. It pierced the hearts of all in the court room. The sight of the mother's grief was too much for scores in the audience. Mrs. Leo Frank was deeply affected and broke down sobbing on her husband's shoulder. Strong men made no effort to hide their feelings. The tender-hearted sheriff cried and was not ashamed of his tears.

It was a dramatic moment—the most dramatic of the trial.

When one looks back at the task which Solicitor Dorsey set for himself the wonder is not that he found himself unequal to concluding his speech Saturday, but that he should have covered so much ground as he did.

When Luther Rosser reached the recess hour Friday an adjournment was had and he had an opportunity to refresh himself and begin the labors of the afternoon fully equipped physically and mentally. No such opportunity was given Mr. Dorsey. Judge Roan was anxious to conclude the case and no adjournment was had for lunch. It would have been cruelty to expect Mr. Dorsey to continue to speak much longer.

There were few points in the case which Mr. Dorsey failed to touch on in the four hours of his speech Saturday. He left out with Frank's character and contended that the failure of the attorneys for the defense to cross the witnesses who swore Frank's character was bad was an admission of weakness. He contended that Frank was a pervert and classed him in the category of Oscar Wilde.

He took up Frank's alibi and picked it to pieces. He showed that it had been bolstered up in many places—the time advanced here or shortened there.

On the subject of perjury he said that if there had been perjury it had been on the side of the defense; and he attacked Quinn, Holloway and others whom he charged with falsifying.

The letter which Frank wrote to his uncle on Memorial day and the telegram which he sent to Adolph Montag Monday morning were analyzed. He said there was no doubt the letter was written on Memorial day and that it was written for a purpose. He analyzed the psychology of this letter and pictured the feelings of the man who wrote it.

He told of the Minola McKnight affidavit and defended the detectives for the part they had played in it. He declared that Albert McKnight, the woman's husband, had told the truth and that Minola had told the truth in her last affidavit.

He said he was proud of having worked with the detectives and had no apologies to make to any one for what he had done.

He took up the letters found by the dead girl's body and pointed out the word "did;" whereas, he stated, Conley always used the word "done." He said there was no doubt that Frank had dictated the letters and at the right time had sought to put the crime on the negro.

The murder of Mary Phagan was pictured as the result of a plot pure and simple. Frank had not meant to kill the girl, but he had meant to get her to yield to his lust. Failing in this, murder was the only thing for him to do. He knew that "dead men tell no tales," and that if Mary Phagan should tell her tale all his influence and position would not save him from the mob. He had killed her to save his reputation and to save his life.

Mr. Dorsey will doubtless take fully three hours to conclude his speech Monday.

MAN HELD PRISONER BY LARGE RATTLER

Thomasville, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—Employee Rogers, of the Southern Bell Telephone company in this city, had an experience with snakes a day or two ago, which was something of a thriller, and which he is not likely to forget soon.

Rogers was sent out to the C. B. Parsons' winter home near the country club to do some work on a broken telephone wire. Just as he got under the house where the line led he heard a sharp rattle of a snake down by his side. Coming out of the bright light he could not exactly see the snake, but he knew it was there, and he promptly climbed upon a line of pipes running under the house. Looking down from his perch Rogers saw not only the snake that had scared him, but another also, the latter lying just in front of him and completely barring his way out. There was nothing within reach that could be used for killing a snake, so he had only to wait and see what would happen. After about a quarter of an hour one snake, probably deciding that the fun was too slow for him, crawled away and Rogers slipped down and grabbing a stick killed the one remaining after a desperate fight.

Many Records Are Badly Broken by State's Most Expensive Trial

By Britt Craig.

Besides costing Fulton county a small-sized fortune, the trial of Leo Frank has broken many records which at one time seemed likely to stand for all time.

It has been Georgia's longest trial.

It has sent to court record a half-million more words than any other.

It has been the state's most expensive.

It brought to court more witnesses than any two criminal trials.

It fostered more widespread interest.

It brought more sentiment into play.

And that's not all:

Worked Papers Hard.

It worked the newspapers harder than they ever worked before, except when Daisy Grace hied herself from the jail of Fulton and journeyed to Philadelphia. If all the white paper that has been devoted to the Frank trial were stretched in a string, it would reach all the way from Rabun Gap to Tybee Light.

If anyone were to tell you that the state would expend 10,000 perfectly good dollars in this expensive coast of living era just to hang a man, you'd either think the state was very vindictive or that your friend was a liar. But that will be just about what the state will have to pay when the verdict is in and the jury has gone home.

Longest of All.

There are only two criminal trials in Georgia's history that can compare in time with the present case. The famous Ed Cox trial, thirty-five years ago lasted more than two weeks. He was convicted for killing Colonel Robert Alston in the old capitol building.

The Flannigan trial in DeKalb county, which lasted three weeks, is the next rival. Flannigan was sentenced for the slaying of a family in the county in which he was tried.

Tomorrow the Frank trial enters into its fifth week.

The speech made by Solicitor Dorsey—which, by the way, is not yet completed—is the longest in southern criminal annals. Already has lasted six hours, with prospects for an additional two or three—maybe more.

The next address, speech will be four or five hours. That was in the halcyon days of Charley Hill, who brought tears and smiles and anger whenever he spoke. Some have said that that grand old man never made a better speech than Dorsey's argument. Some say not so. They haven't heard Dorsey.

Dorsey's Speech.

Dorsey's speech was a masterly argument, with the stamp of genius in every line, and, in expression of esteem, Atlanta—or a part of Atlanta—did something it never did before: Cheered a solicitor as he came from the courtroom.

The defense has examined approximately 175 witnesses. The prosecution has examined in the neighborhood of 75, thereby holsting the Frank trial flag several odd inches above another record. Most of the witnesses for the defense were character witnesses. The prosecution produced but very few of this nature.

Word Record Cracked.

And, there's another record gone, a record for words. Judge Harvey L. Parry, official stenographer, stated last night that he and his men had noted 1,016,040 words, which is a little more than a half-million over the number of words taken from any other criminal trial in Georgia's career.

The expenses in the case will be attributed to such sources as these: Evidence, court attaches, jurymen, stenographers, salary of judge and solicitor, attaches to solicitor's staff and various other necessities to modern justice. Probably the biggest item will be contributed to the gathering of evidence.

It is rapidly nearing its end. The courthouse soon will be empty, and the jury will be home. The public will take a rest, and the morbidly curious will turn to other fields. The Frank trial will go to its inevitable havens, memory and history.

And, nobody will weep thereover. Especially the state of Georgia.

NINE-YEAR-OLD NEGRO KILLS HIS COMPANION

Perry, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—On Wednesday George McCluster, a negro boy 9 years old, killed Coy Barrett, a negro boy 13 years old, by stabbing him in the shoulder with a knife. The crime was committed about seven miles from town on J. A. Wood's place just beyond Myrtle on the Perry and Fort Valley public road.

The coroner's jury returned the following verdict: "We, the jury, find that Coy Barrett came to his death by a knife wound inflicted by George McCluster." George was brought to town and put in jail on a warrant for committing a felony.

MARSH ADAIR RECOVERS FROM PTOMAINE POISON

Marsh Adair had a violent attack at the theater the other evening from the effects of ptomaine poisoning, caused by eating ice cream. For a time his condition was alarming. His many friends will be pleased to learn that he has recovered.

Pardon for Watkins.

Jackson, Miss., August 23.—Governor Brewer today issued full pardon to Leight Watkins, former clerk in the land commissioner's office, who confessed to having embezzled $325 of the state's funds and sentenced two months ago to serve one year on the county farm. Since his sentence Watkins has been an inmate of the hospital and recently was discharged.

Primitive Baptist Church.

Dawson, Ga., August 23.—(Special.) Members of the Primitive Baptist church, of which Elder W. T. Everett is pastor, are preparing to build a church near the home of John E. Thomas, about one mile north of Dawson. A building committee has been appointed and steps are being taken to commence the erection of the structure at an early date.

Rev. Ross Will Speak.

Rev. L. N. Ross, pastor of the Metropolitan A. M. E. church, Washington, D. C., will speak under the auspices of the Holmes Institute Monday night, at 8 o'clock, at the Bethel A. M. E. church. Wednesday night he will speak at the Ebenezer Baptist church at the same hour. The proceeds will go towards the maintenance of the Holmes Institute, for the education of negro children.

PERMANENT RECEIVER FOR V., M. & W. RAILWAY

Valdosta, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—At hearing on the petition for a permanent receivership for the Valdosta, Moultrie and Western railway was held before Judge W. R. Thomas, of the superior court, here today and B. H. Jones, temporary receiver appointed two weeks ago, was made permanent receiver.

On petition of the minority stockholders of the road A. L. Davis and C. I. Harrell were appointed co-receivers and Frank Roberts and W. B. Conoley advisory receivers and sales commissioners. Mr. Roberts is president of the road. C. I. Harrell continues as general manager of the property. Mr. Jones, the permanent receiver, owns the entire $300,000 bonded indebtedness of the road and the men appointed as co-receivers and advisors are the leading stockholders. All of them are serving without remuneration in an effort to reduce the expenses of receivership and make the best disposition for the stockholders.

CORDELE COTTON BUYERS RESENT A LICENSE TAX

Cordele, Ga., August 23.—(Special.) The recent action of the city council in assessing a tax of $25 on local cotton buyers and $1 per day on transient buyers has created considerable dissatisfaction among local buyers. They feel that in comparison the taxes are unjust to them. Being established here they feel that they should have the advantage in the local market, while the low tax on transient buying give them too much privilege, it is claimed. All local buyers refuse to pay the license and cases have been made against them to be tried before Mayor Harder.

Heat Is Quick to Affect the Bowels

Well-Known Fact That Extreme Heat Conduces to Chronic Constipation.

So many people are in the habit of eating cold food in hot weather that constipation is very common during summer. It is best to vary the food and have some hot things, as, for example, soups and hot fish and meats. If that is to be the case, Iced water should be drunk sparingly.

In spite of all care people will become constipated, and if you find yourself in that condition you can get immediate relief by the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. There is no time of the year when you should be more careful of constipation than in the summer, for many of the serious illnesses as well as the fatalities result from a clogging up of the bowels. You also need general good health to withstand the heat, and hence Syrup Pepsin is best to take because it contains tonic ingredients that help to build up the entire system.

Numerous users throughout the land will verify these facts, among them Mr. George C. Allen, 408 N. Main St., Reading, Mass., who recovered his health completely after using only two bottles; and Miss Anna Schoff, 249 S. Washington St., Baltimore, Md., who used it for constipation and now has her mother and friends also using it. They now avoid drastic remedies like cathartics, tablets, purgatives, salt waters, pills and such things. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is mild and pleasant, and children like it. You can obtain it of any druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a large bottle. Each bottle must do what is claimed or your money will be refunded.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it, postpaid, by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 418 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

CANDIDATE FOR SENATE R. O. COCHRAN SPEAKS IN RABUN COUNTY

Delivers Campaign Address at Clayton, Setting Forth Platform of His Race For the United States Senate.

Here is the address in full of Ralph O. Cochran, candidate for United states senate to succeed Senator Hoke Smith in 1914, delivered at Clayton Saturday:

"I am glad to be in Clayton and have an opportunity of addressing the people of Rabun county. You have heard the expression, 'from Rabun county to Tybee Light,' and it is fitting that in my campaign for the United States senate I should deliver the first address in this county—the address that in a substantial measure carries my position on the questions that the people of Georgia will be interested in in casting their votes in the election next summer for a United States senator—and this for the reason that I will show considerable attention in the campaign which will extend from the mountains to the sea.

"It is further true that you people of Rabun live in a county that was established in 1819, almost a hundred years ago, and it bears the name of one of the chief executives of this state. This county has furnished many men in the public arena during its history, and it has been worthy sons and distinguished servants of the people.

"I am here today in advocacy of my candidacy for the United States senate, the suggestion of some zealous friends of mine entered this some time ago. It is an undertaking worthy of one's best efforts, and I entered the field conscious of the great responsibilities that will rest upon the senate, and fully conscious of the difficulties that confront me in achieving this ambition.

Confident of Victory.

"I want to tell you here today that I am going to Washington. I expect to win this race and I have every confidence in ultimate success. It is a big undertaking, but I believe that the sentiment of the people of Georgia today is in favor of electing a business man—a man in the best sense of his life, and one who will endeavor to represent all people alike and all interests alike within the borders of the state.

"It is true that probably in point of years, as I am only 39 years old, I am the youngest man who has ever offered in the state of Georgia for this high position. But the progress of the campaign I will be confronted with the statement that I am too youthful, and further that I have not had sufficient experience. I want to say to you here today that such criticism that may be raised that many of the best statesmen that this country has ever had have been men who have achieved success and attained much prominence in their early years in life. With long service to their credit before them, they passed them, and therefore their services are of the most estimable worth. As a matter of fact, it is remarkable what that age limit of 30 years, established by the framers of the United States constitution, should be only 30 years. Experience of the world has proven that a man at the age of 30 is ripe for service.

"I am frank to say that at no period in life do I consider my ability for great labor greater than today, if it is true that experience counts on many things relating to state affairs, but I feel that I can safely appeal to the people of this county and upon a county by county basis, upon which to be elected to my state and pay tribute it honored with this high position.

A Business Man.

"In advocacy of my candidacy, I place before the people of Georgia the proposition of electing a business man. I can properly be classed as one of the young business men of this state. It occurs to me that in these times of industrial growth and progress that the best thing that this country, any state can do is to elect a larger percentage of men of the business circles of their midst. In the present question that requires business ability and sense to properly solve, I should say that those who pertain the nature of the laws under which we shall live are pretty generally men to where business experience, understanding of business and the ultimate effect are the ones that in turn demand the business man to pass upon. The slogan of the day is that business is more business and less theory.

"I want to tell you here and now that as far as I am concerned I have never see any trace of demagogy in anything that I have done, and I shall deal frankly with the people of Georgia, and my campaign will be devoid of tricks and subterfuge. My candidacy will be put up to the people of Georgia squarely on its merits, without frills or deception. In my candidacy more than a plain business man. I have no machine behind me, nor lines, but I assure you in this time that if I am elected I shall ever endeavor to follow the lines of the path of duty. This campaign as far as I am concerned, will never be marred with the personalities that are based on prejudices of the past against the people of the city than against the country, or the young man against the old man. I shall take the position in the campaign that I shall maintain to the end of the campaign, that if I am elected I want to be elected by the choice of your citizens, and if elected I shall endeavor you most sincerely and earnestly, and I will represent the whole state of Georgia, and all the lawful interests within her borders.

Without Any Prejudice.

"Under no political caucus so to speak, all classes of our citizens rally. No prejudice has ever taken root in my heart against the Jew, or favor of the Gentile, against the Catholic in favor of the protestant, against the third party man in favor of the democrat or against any man or class of men within our state who may have long been of different parties. Political faith, social circle or other relations contrary to these I have never had, nor to say that any man who harbors hatred for any class of our citizens is unworthy of the high position to which I now aspire. In truth, the light, the malignancy of characters of this kind should have no place in shaping the policies and destiny of this country. The sun shines upon the just and the unjust, we are the children of the same Creator, and in its last analysis there is no great difference between us.

"I have always endeavored to be fair to all the interests in life, and I have always endeavored to be fair to the cause of labor; I shall endeavor to be fair to all of my relations to my fellowman, whether that relation be in private business matters or in public position, and if I am fortunate enough in contending for the wisdom of such a position I shall do so in a way that I shall have no apprehension. It is true that I state on this occasion that I have never been allied with any of the political factions of Georgia, during the past few decades, when party lines have reached high water mark, I have always stood, since the early years of my manhood, for the right and have acted on every election day in the way that I thought my vote would count for most, looking to the best interests of the people of this state. We have been confronted at a number of elections with partisan politics and partisan issues. I thank God that we are now living in a more desirable day.

Against Class Legislation.

"I am in favor of no class legislation. All legislation should be founded on the idea of the greatest good for the greatest number, irrespective of nationalities, wealth, education or anything else. However, if there is to be any class legislation, it should be in favor of the biggest class, and I shouldstay that this class is composed of those of moderate means. If I ever cast a vote, if elected to the United States senate, for any class whatsoever, it will be for the class here designated.

"In my campaign for the senate, throughout the entire time I shall remain absolutely a free man. I shall not tie myself up with promises and political alignments. I elected I want to be a free man to represent the entire people of Georgia.

"To me, of experience and men of business affairs it is an accepted truth that no man need be a Croesus or an intellectual giant to represent well his people in legislative halls. What counts most is industry, integrity and sound common sense, these elements are united in a candidate he deserves well at the hands of his people. The making of laws and the administration of government is largely business matter where good judgment and good conscientious service avails much.

No Mud-Slinging.

"Permit me to say also that God has endowed me with a degree of manhood and independence so much so that I can tell you in all frankness and truth that if you do not see fit to elect me that it will be perfectly all right and I assure you that no scars will be left behind over which I will brood through the coming years. I understand and have understood that I declare to you there is no place for mud-slinging and assassination of character, and I will not indulge in any of this for will I permit any of my friends to do so within my power to prevent. The campaign does not involve personal issues. The issues are most substantial and more worthy of the intelligence of the people of this state.

"I stand for good government in all of its forms, and I shall ever be the enemy of all men who will use office to represent all people alike and all interests alike within the borders of the state.

"It is true that probably in point of years, as I am only 39 years old, I am the youngest man who has ever offered in the state of Georgia for this high position. But the progress of the campaign I will be confronted with the statement that I am too youthful, and further that I have not had sufficient experience. I want to say to you here today that such criticism that may be raised that many of the best statesmen that this country has ever had have been men who have achieved success and attained much prominence in their early years in life. We have been confronted at a number of elections with partisan politics and partisan issues. I thank God that we are now living in a more desirable day.

Against Class Legislation.

"I am in favor of no class legislation. All legislation should be founded on the idea of the greatest good for the greatest number, irrespective of nationalities, wealth, education that is transgressing the inalienable rights of property and person, and much of that that is suggested tends too much this way. I took occasion not long ago to count the sections of laws that compose the code of Georgia. It is astounding, but true, that there are approximately 8,000 sections of laws under which we are living this day. It has almost gotten to the point where any man's mind must be an encyclopedia to carry the innumerable laws governing cities, counties, state and nation. It reminds one of the old adage that people is best governed who are least governed.

"I want to say on this occasion that, if elected to the United States senate, I shall stand at all time for the cause of good roads. If we ever expect to have great systems of roads traversing this entire country the national government will have to take hold of the proposition. It strikes me that money appropriated for this purpose is just as much within the constitution of this country as the right to appropriate funds to deepen the waterways and improve harbors. By navigation the products of the country are distributed, and it is a method of travel. The public roads of the country are the avenues of distribution whereby the products of the country reach the centers and are ultimately distributed throughout the country and the world. The people's public roads are used by everybody, and the benefits derived from appropriations for this cause are participated in by all of the people of the country. What cause more equitable or worthy could be mentioned for the appropriation of public funds? The additional commercial advantages associated with improved public roads, is the enhancement of property.

Stands for Good Roads.

"Down in my country it is generally estimated that property on a macadamized road is never worth less than double as much as property on a road that has not been so improved. Also think of the convenience, pleasure and general benefits that are derived by reason of the construction of such thoroughfares. Think of the benefits to your country or any county that might be mentioned that would be derived from the construction of such highways. In conclusion, for these substantial reasons, I shall ever be a friend to the cause of good roads.

"Any legislative body that today has lost sight of the greatest cause when it does not cultivate and improve the great agricultural interests of their county and state. You may talk about business and all you please that are opposed to its preservation and promotion. I shall ever stand for the principles of government that represent the best interests of the farmer as well as the man of trade, and in general, the best interests of every man of every class of the people, and I confess, my life and great state. I was born and reared on a farm in Habersham county and I feel that my years of association with the people of the rural districts, their needs and their interests, have prepared me to know once for all the important recognition that should be accorded them. Then by the business experience that I have had elsewhere, I feel that I can represent the entire people of this state with fellowship for feeling and wisdom and justice to all.

Watch Dog of Treasury.

"At this time I want to put the people of Georgia on notice that I intend as the junior United States senators from this state, to be a watch dog of the treasury. I have always been convinced that the policy that was inaugurated during the years of democratic control, and otherwise should be stopped. The policy is hardly a session of the Georgia legislature or congress of the United States congress that some new form of taxation is not inaugurated. Increasing the old forms is not sufficient, I ask you, in the name of reason, when and where will these taxations stop? There is an eternal cry for more money, that our institutions are being throttled and that the state and nation are lagging in appropriations on account of insufficient funds. You know as well as I do that if the state of Georgia had five times as much revenue for the purpose that to spend that every dollar of it would be appropriated and would still be in need of more money.

"As a matter of fact, unless the increased taxation is stopped, and not half-taxes will become very oppressive to the people of this country. Take your state tax, your county tax, your city tax, your professional tax, your corporation tax, your income tax, your occupation tax, your road tax, your local assessments, your tax on automobiles, and I tell you when any man will sit down at the end of the year and figure out what he has paid out in taxes and had done a fairly good year's work to meet them, he will be astounded at the business to meet them. The philosophy of all taxation, according to my understanding, is that it is not to be a burdensome increase in the forms of taxing the people, but to the amounts, that the conditions of the times justify and keeping with the enhancement of property and the prosperity into the state and more citizens as our common population. With an increase of population and the enhancement of property, the limitation of appropriations and taxation and country will all be in a solvent condition and the people will be prosperous and happy.

Platform Unselfish.

"As an executive, broad and lofty achievements, we should have in mind that the names and memories of the great men who have filled with honor the highest offices in the gift of the people will be perpetuated in our state's history who lived and worked for something for others. Selfishness, like a cancer, is destructive of the good and great in the estimation of its fellowmen. We have got rid of much of the tyranny that has characterized it in the past, but the tyranny of trusts and the corporations of the country continue, and will continue as long as civilization endures. Ambition to be great and to do great things for others should characterize the life of every man.

"There is another matter that I wish to speak of to which I will give as much time and attention as possible, if elected, I refer to the advertising of the resources of Georgia and the entire country. The value of advertising by one in this exalted position is beyond the power of words to express its inestimable worth to this state and section. Georgia and the entire south have been misrepresented in their resources for many years to the world. Any man who is in favor of any law that will retard the progress of industrial and illiberal the institutions in which it is invested is an enemy of Georgia people, and the sooner he is relegated to the rear the better off it will be. Georgia could be many people in it as it has today. A multiplication of population means better roads, better schools, better churches, better mail facilities and better communities in general. These ends are worthy of attainment and should always be the attention of the representatives of this state in Washington.

A Business Senator.

"If elected to the United States senate, I will, with my purpose to perform well what might be termed my small duties incident to this high office. Those who might have petitions, either for themselves or their friends, who might at any time wish information from the departments in the city of Washington pertaining to the government or local matters, those who desire to correspond with the senator or that pursue in their respective offices and desire a general those who want ready service of their representative in getting something or doing something in Washington, United States senator can be of service to them. I will be the man to call upon. I am going to devote a considerable amount of my time will be given to the study of foreign questions or the preparation of what might be termed big speeches, but on the other hand, I will try to inject much business in the situation as possible and serve the interests of the people of Georgia, not only concerning such matters as I hear mentioned, but in promoting and voting for legislation which will promote the general interests of the state as well as the country at large.

"I am deeply interested in the cause of education in all of its forms. Our public schools are the greatest institution that can be in a part of the government of this state. Public schools touch every man's interest, and in them is involved the element of an elementary education which means better citizenship and more happiness on the part of our entire population. Almost as essential are the institutions of higher learning of this state. Also our colleges of technical training which prepare the young man and young woman to make a living have probably become the most popular institutions in the way of higher training that we have in the state. The old idea was to educate the smart boys in classical training, either for the ministry, medicine or the law. This conception of higher learning is in a measure passing away, and technical training is largely the slogan of the times in which we live.

Opposed to Radical Reform.

"I do not know how you people in Rabun county feel about it, but I imagine that you have about the same feeling and sentiment that we people of Fulton have, as well as the people of all the other counties of this state—that is the constant recurring panics that disturb and distress the business interests of this country. I do not know whether or not any man can assign with accuracy the immediate causes of these recurring panics. However, I am inclined to believe that the most prominent cause is the drastic reform legislation that sets up about every eight or ten years. I am in favor of a certain amount of reform. We all know that in this great economy of nature change must take place in order for good to result. The country that does not improve is condition must of necessity retrograde. On the other hand, I mention, and I shall always vote accordingly, to reforms and reform measures which come in bunches and have the inevitable effect of upsetting the entire business of this state and country. As far as I am concerned I want a little rest so that I may have an opportunity of contributing with the world's goods while in this state of manhood, and not for one moment to be enamored of all evil and the improvement of our institutions and country on the Utopian idea for our children and our children's children. As I see it, the proposition we now need most is the rest cure.

"We often lose sight of the untold good that has been accomplished by the people of our day and our fathers before us. In fact, we live in the best times in the history of the world, the greatest people that this world has ever seen. The thousands of needed blessings that does not find a parallel there. You know so much ill in man and the human race as a whole, when he is at his best. I have often said that the sorriest man in any community is a pretty good fellow after all. Think of that in this day of enlightenment and education. In which we live. He works hard and usually by the sweat of his brow he provides for wife and children. He has contributed educational advantages of his family he looks forward with a feverish mind to the ultimate condition of the world longer he will be the majority of these loved ones. Then, I say, there is more humane in the treatment of those who are unfortunate, our ideals are high and we are enlightened by reason of our intelligence, and industry of most of the people that it affords.

Much Experiment Dangerous.

"Another point that I wish to bring out. Too much experiment is always dangerous. The people of any state or country that is experimenting with their institution and this new idea that is to fail, and then to go back and undo the ill departures from the old time established institutions which probably will prove dangerous and fatal. It is always better to let men who are in business or affairs of state, and then the wisdom of the ages becomes clear and of no loss to the people. Such is the case in the life of this experience. Of course some advancement in constitutional and conservative lines is good for all people, but that is not indorsed in they are liable to be dangerous. Take the initiative and referendum, for instance, the people of Georgia should not be misled into the belief that it is estimated that the people of Georgia are known as an impostor of ideas.

"I am elected to the United States senate I shall always stand for clean administration. I am in favor of the most rigid economy. We live in a country that is overburdened with taxation. Taxes are piled upon taxes, and while the people are able they have made no special complaint, but for the cost of living is so high that those immortal men, the fathers of this republic, whose names are dear to us as long as liberty is preserved, imbedded in that immortal declaration of the inalienable rights of equal rights to all men, and the struggles of this life. No man should be taxed to the limit of his justice and equal chance. No man should be taxed to the limit of his ability, more than his financial chance and justice in the line of life. I shall always be allowed to stand for the best laws to be had for the people, and shall ever stand for the best laws to be had for the people, and shall ever stand for the best laws to be had for the people, and shall ever

FAMOUS CRIMINAL CASES of GEORGIA

Mrs. J. A. Applebaum. Posed in Tesslar's Studio, Montgomery, Ala.

Mr. Telamon Cuyler.

At the instance of The Sunday Constitution Mr. Telamon Cuyler has written this sketch of Georgia's "big" criminal cases. Trials that absorbed the public mind as they, each in turn, held the stage and passed on. One changed history—Wesley's trial. Another amended the Federal Constitution—the Chisholm case. Every case focused the attention and furnished food for discussion. Legal reputations were made and lost in the heat of trials. Human life lost was the entering fact, and human life the dear hazard staked. Long forgotten events are here set forth. So long as human society moves along its devious path, just so long will the "big case" draw our attention by the very grip of its being a very real drama of life.

Georgia's criminal and "big case" annals have run their absorbing course for close to two centuries. Tragedy, often relieved by comedy. Sordid dramas overlap in the public mind the play of passion.

Knife, ax and bullet send human souls into eternity. Violence seems to rule as against the more subtle methods. Poison and the dark waters of our streams find but little use. Our leading capital cases are rarely the result of deep plots, nor do they find their origin in a sudden rush of anger between relatives and friends, but seem to be the culmination of causes, the beginning long antedating the actual crime. So much for the gory past, with its long-forgotten graves and unremembered names. Time's merciful oblivion buries them all. The newest sensation crowds out the old excitement, and the public exclaims, "What next?" as it falls in the latest "extra," hot from the press.

The John Wesley Case.

Georgia's big trials begin far back in 1738, when her government was largely in the hands of Oglethorpe and his board of trustees. They placed all judicial authority at Savannah in the recorder and his assistants.

Rev. John Wesley's sweet, sad romance, the one great love of his tender heart, his devotion to the sprightly Sophia Hankey, led his arrest. They had met aboard ship on the voyage out from England. She was young and beautiful. He was young and romantic—fresh from college and utterly unlearned in the wiles and ways of women.

The voyage was long and he taught her French on sunny decks they spent long hours. Love was the result. Later, fearing her religious views were not orthodox, "he drew away from her." She misunderstood—pouted and flew into a maiden's rage.

The dandy of Georgia attracted her. She turned to William Williamson and they fled to Purysburg, in South Carolina, and were wed. Wesley grieved and ultimately raged and went out his heart.

Next Sunday he repulsed her from the communion rail in Christ church. Her uncle Causton was recorder. He made her cause his and caused Wesley's arrest under some forty-two charges. Wesley bravely met the issue and refused to plead to thirty-nine, claiming they were specified as ecclesiastical matters and over such the court had no jurisdiction.

Causton lacked the nerve to try him, though Wesley repeatedly came to court. Seeing his usefulness in the parish ended, he publicly announced his intention of returning to England —and went. The Charleston newspaper of the day carried only a copy of Mrs. Williamson's affidavit and mention of Wesley's departure.

Another "Ancient" Case.

Next came the investigation of the conduct of the armed expedition against east Florida in 1777, led by Governor Gwinnett and General McIntosh. The governor stood up as the very first exponent of state's rights, and gave his orders as commander-in-chief.

General McIntosh was commissioned by congress and refused obedience. He was a federalist. Both denounced the other as "a lying scoundrel." The legislature called them to account, but reached no decision. They fought a duel and Gwinnett lost his life. McIntosh went north to fight under Washington. The public interest was intense and this case founded political parties in Georgia. The attitude of Gwinnett led to the forming of the party that fought on secession in 1861.

After the revolution came the great "Pine Barren swindle" in 1795. The use of fraudulent applications for lands by "settlers" who existed only in the minds of plotters led to the issuance of valid land grants running into millions of acres. General Elijah Clarke was misled into attempting to set up an independent state in south Georgia. France entangled him in the persuasions of Citizen Genet, whom he met in Charleston. Clarke was arrested and his dream of empire vanished. The plotters sold their grants and to this day people yet present worthless grants in our capitol. The public excitement was intense.

The Great Yazoo Fraud.

In 1795-6 came the great Yazoo steal, in which a mild band of prominent men actually bought all the lands now composing Alabama and Mississippi from the Georgia legislature for only $500,000. The grants were forced to action by James Jackson and reluctated the sale. Duels resulted and two members of the legislature were killed by a mob and others fled to save their lives. Jackson fought with pistol and cane in the very halls of the capitol at Louisville. He was the very spirit of resistance in behalf of our people's rights. The courts were lodged with suits and arrests were daily made.

The legislature of 1796 repudiated the sale and ordered that every document be burned. This scene is depicted on the walls of the new Hotel Ansley, in Atlanta.

Beverly Allen was a preacher, and out of his arrest grew a furious legal battle. Early in the last century he was charged with crime in North Carolina.

"Dark-lantern affidavits" became a trite name, for such papers as these were secured at night. Robert Forsyth, federal marshal, attempted to arrest Allen and was shot dead. He sleeps in grand yard of St. Paul's in Augusta. His son was John Forsyth, secretary of war and minister to France. Judge Tait was horsewhipped in Milledgeville and state-wide political division resulted. Allen escaped punishment for Forsyth's murder.

Federalist and Whig clashed over the Indian land question. Governor Troup called Georgia to arms and boldly defied the president and the United States commander in Georgia, Van Allen, who moved his troops to prevent Troup's surveyors from "locating" Indian lands under the treaty of Indian Springs.

Secured Aid of Indians.

Federalists set on the Indians to murder General McIntosh, who died under the blazing rafters of his house, surrounded by yelling savages. Troup was furious and made the cause of the two widows, Peggy and Sally, his own and hunted down the murderers. The section of the Georgia code which decrees that "only friendly Indians can testify" in our courts grew out of this case.

Though not criminal, yet the case of Chisholm vs. The State of Georgia was national in its interest and caused the amendment to the United States constitution which provides that no man may sue a state. The framers of the United States constitution in 1789 had omitted this provision.

Mistaken identity is a criminal charge so rare that only three such cases have attracted the world's attention in the past four centuries. Martin Guerre in France in 1550; then the Georgia case in 1837, and the English case of Tichborne in 1868. At that time the public mind was about equally interested in the Tichborne case, the confederate war, and "Les Miserables," then just off the press. The State vs. Elijah Barber is set forth in dry legal phraseology in the yellowed records of Jones county, Georgia. This case grew out of the disappearance of wealthy young Jesse Bunkley. Supposing his death of fever in New Orleans, the state was given to his mother. Years after a claimant appeared. The mother could not say whether or not he was her son, so remarkable was his physical resemblance to Bunkley. Feeling ran high and, at the October term, 1837, the case was fought with great vigor by the local champions of the day. The county was divided and fights resulted. Barber was convicted and served his term, but the mystery remained and does to this day in my county, where Bunkley's boyhood home yet stands, a decayed but elegant mansion.

War Caused Hiatus in Courts.

Soon the great war swept over Georgia and interest in the courts gave place to the clash of arms in the field.

In more recent years Georgia courts have dealt with criminal cases both sordid and refined, with causes simple and causes complicated, but the present great case is perhaps the most complicated ever brought to the public attention. Springing from about the simplest beginning, it has developed complications worthy of the pen of Dumas or Conan Doyle.

During reconstruction days, "Mose" Bently, who had been body-servant to General Barlow and borne his body off the field of First Manassas, obtained employment at the capitol as a porter to the house. A negro "member of the legislature" referred to Georgia white women in a contemptuous manner. Mose listened, reflected and quietly loaded two revolvers. He stood at the bottom of the wide stairs.

The "legislator" came out—and Mose opened fire. Everybody blazed away.

Death was in the air. Mose was wounded. Tried at the bar of the house he was discharged, and operated a barbershop in Atlanta until his death a few years ago.

The Asberry Gentry Case.

In 1887 one Asberry Gentry cut Burke Wall, a locomotive engineer, to death on Collins street. Wall staggered to Decatur street and fell. Gentry was convicted, but cut his way out of jail, and has never been heard of. He was of great strength, marked appearance and penniless, but he got away.

Blood followed blood in a gory procession, and men and women died here and there; cases attracted public attention; accused were acquitted or convicted; some were hanged, some escaped, some suicided and a few were pardoned.

The noted Rawlins case in Lowndes county grew out of the father and three sons being charged with the murder of a neighbor's children. The father and eldest son were hanged and the younger sons are now serving life terms.

A curious case came up, years ago, when an Atlanta policeman killed a man on the old United States fort reservation while resisting arrest. He was never tried by the United States courts.

Tobe Turner killed a man named Shelton at Greenville, Meriwether county, in 1885. He was convicted and held in jail in Atlanta. The day before he was to be hung he choked himself to death by a noose made from his handkerchief.

The public interest in Whitlock's killing of Felton on another Memorial day, in 1892, at the White Elephant saloon on Alabama street, roused public attention. He was sentenced for life and pardoned after five years.

Acquittal Was Not Popular.

The curious fact of both being maimed men came up in the case of George Edelman, a one-legged man, who killed Tom Gresham, who only had one hand, in the basement of the old James Bank building in Atlanta. He was acquitted, but public feeling ran so high that the jury was burned in effigy—a very rare occurrence, and possibly the only one in Georgia.

Sheriff C. C. Green, of Fulton county, had a deputy named "Whit" Anderson. He killed Tom Shives at Alabama and Broad streets with a shotgun—and was acquitted.

"Pen" Bodell killed his man—one Phillips—in a tough corner of Atlanta. He was convicted in short order, but managed to get "a little white powder" the night before execution and they found him dead. He was buried with a confederate flag draped across the coffin and was followed by a detachment from the Gate City Guard—his old company.

My old home, Rome, startled the state more than once. In 1885 Hardy Hamilton, a powerful mulatto, crept from a livery stable into a Chinese laundry and chopped two Chinese to death. One was a very large man and fought desperately. Hamilton's hanging was one of the last in public. A vast crowd gathered.

In 1879 "Gus" Johnson, young, handsome and fearless, one of the last "desperadoes," was tried and convicted of the murder of a negro boy. Coming to a ferry he hailed for the boat. The boy set it going across the muddy Coosa. "I wonder if my new shotgun will carry that far?" said Johnson, and fired. North Georgia lived in terror of "Gus." He was known to sleep at a certain house. The officers cut a stout sapling and crept in. Two men on each end of the sapling brought it down across him and pinioned his arms. The others leaped on him. Tied, he was lodged in jail; tied he was tried, with dozens of armed guards. He was convicted, and, calmly smoking, Handsome "Gus" rode to his gallows seated on his coffin.

He Claimed Self Defense.

Dr. Holmes drove up to the Armstrong hotel and saw his brother-in-law, Deforrest Allicod, approaching. The doctor fired and Allicod died. Self-defense was plead and with such able counsel as N. J. Hammond and Joel Dranham in court a great legal battle resulted. Holmes was acquitted.

Bill Choice was an old Rome boy, brave and beloved, but a reckless sportsman. In what was, before the war, a little bark in Pryor street, opposite the Kimball House, Bill met a bailiff who "dunned" him. Bill shot him down. This case was the cause of a great deal of excitement and talk of a rescue flew about Atlanta. Bill went to the penitentiary for life, but was released by Governor Joe Brown to join the Confederate army. He was a private under Captain Roberts; also a convict and fought bravely for the south.

The great "Tom Woolfolk case" in Twiggs county has not been forgotten. His was a wholesale murder—sisters, grandfather and mother died under his bloody axe. John B. Rutherford defended him and died of the strain of the trial. Tom was hanged.

The state house was the scene of the killing of Alston by Cox. Cox was sentenced to life imprisonment, but was pardoned by Governor Stephens after five years. Owing to the prominence of all parties, this case was very much in the public mind.

"Will" Myers was charged with the murder of Crowley in Fulton county in 1895. A case of circumstantial evidence. Myers fled, was captured and convicted. Solicitor Hill and Senator Clay were for the state and E. M. and G. F. Mitchell for the defense. The public excitement was intense. Myers escaped from jail and vanished. Were he ever to be brought here, the only procedure would be after identification, to re-sentence and hang him.

The Flannigan Case.

Flannigan, in 1897, flashed a revolver on the quiet family with whom he boarded in Decatur and fired. Several died. One was a lovely young girl, engaged to marry. She lingered for days, nursed with loving care. One day she had her saddle horse brought to her window and caressed its head while all wept. The trial was long and bitterly fought. Soldiers guarded the courthouse. Hon. W. C. Glenn, Dan Rountree and George Spence defended. The state was represented by W. T. Kinsey and W. W. Brownell. This was a case of insanity and farce was the medical difference of opinion. A curious side of this case was that Glenn, his attorney, and no less than eight other persons connected with the case died before Flannigan died in jail of the very disease his counsel claimed he suffered!

Ponder was a brave Atlanta policeman. He saw shadowy forms in a wholesale whisky house opposite the old Union depot. He attacked the intruders, and was shot down. Several men were accused, but released. A year later the writer and Hon. William Schley Howard were called upon to defend one Pendley, who not only implicated himself, but accused two other men. The trial resulted in a mistrial, and the cases were dropped. Pendley was suffering from delusions but his "confessions" nearly hanged all three of them. The Ponder mystery has never been solved.

Mrs. Grace was handsome and her husband was young. Something went wrong in their domestic affairs and one morning the phone rang at Atlanta police headquarters and Grace said: "I'm shot! send help." The police ran out and he was found barely conscious, paralyzed from the waist down, and still is in that condition. Grace told conflicting stories regarding his injury. Mrs. Grace was found guilty. She was acquitted. Divorces are being sought in both Pennsylvania and Georgia.

Atlanta's hotel clerks are imperturbable enough, but when Mrs. Callie Applebum rushed down to his desk and screamed, "My husband's shot!"—one clerk lost his head and rushed at her. She promptly fainted in his arms. In their bath the husband lay dead, his head smashed by bullets. She was locked up. She was tried and acquitted. Her first cry when the police told her she was to be charged with murder, was "Good heavens! Get me Mrs. Grace's lawyers!" Callie fainted dead away when acquitted—she was one of the lost Mid-Victorian "Swooners!"

McNaughton Case.

Another of Georgia's famous murder cases is that of Dr. J. W. McNaughton, of Cheatham county, now under sentence of death for alleged murdering of Fred Flanders by arsenic poisoning, near Swainsboro, Ga. The wife of Flanders is under indictment for the same crime also, but has never been brought to trial.

At the present time applications for McNaughton's pardon are in the hands of the prison commission, and the date of his execution has been postponed twice, now standing October 3.

Since the sentencing of Dr. McNaughton a number of physicians have come forward stating that Flanders' death was caused by acute nephritis. Yet the fact remains, as brought out in the trial, that Mrs. Flanders and the physician were on extremely intimate terms, and it was claimed that the two plotted Flanders' death. It remains to be seen whether executive clemency will be exercised or no.

The Stripling Mystery.

But by far the most dramatic page in Georgia's court annals is that which deals with the famous Stripling case—another Jekyl and Hyde affair.

Thomas Edgar Stripling was convicted of murder and sentenced to life imprisonment in 1898 for the murder of W. J. Cornett in Harris county, Ga.

Stripling escaped from jail, went to Danville, Va., where he lived under the name of R. E. Morris. There he rose in the public esteem, and was made chief of police. Then his Nemesis appeared in the person of one who recognized him as the Stripling of Georgia who had escaped from serving a life term.

Stripling was brought back to Georgia in 1911, and though people by the hundred signed his applicaton for pardon, he was sent back to serve his lifetime sentence, and is today imprisoned.

The Final Week of Our Twice Yearly Shoe Sale

Every low shoe in the house has reached a new price level for this, the end of our 1913 summer season.

A mere reduction in price does not necessarily represent a bargain.

A bargain is a bargain indeed—in shoes—when you buy a correct style, plus good wear, good fit and proper store service, at a fraction of the original established price.

Low Heel Button Oxford, in black or tan, $4.50 value, $1.50.

A $5.00 Shoe in black, tan or white, $1.50.

Our July business was conducted actually at a loss and August will show a still greater one; but we find that in each six months' season it pays us better to clean house absolutely than to carry over broken sizes, odds and ends and what will be next season-old stock. That is the reason why Allen's shoe sale means more than the average shoe sale.

Next week we will offer exactly 522 pairs of shoes in white, black and tan, at $1.50 a pair, and over 200 pairs of white only at $1.00 a pair. These are badly broken in sizes, but splendid values.

WITH THE MOVIES

Anna Hoffman Popular.

Anna Von Hoffman, grand opera prima donna, scored a tremendous hit with the music loving Atlantans the past week. Her praises reached the ears of Warden Moyer at the Federal penitentiary. The warden, who is ever on the watch for innocent amusement for his charges on Sunday and holidays, appealed to Miss Von Hoffman to render some selections at the Sunday morning services. It did not take the pretty opera singer more than a moment to accept. The church services are held at 9 in the morning.

Miss Von Hoffman will continue her engagement at the Montgomery all this week.

Good Films at Vaudette.

"For the Flag," a two-reel American feature, with Warren Kerrigan in the leading part, will be shown at the Vaudette Monday.

The film follows the life of a young army officer from West Point west to California and thence to the Philippines, a well laid plot unfolds at the end of the film that makes the play well worth while.

Other two-reel features during the week are, "The Mad-Cap" (Broncho) and "The Green Shadow" (Kay-Bee).

An arrangement has been concluded between the Argentine and Bolivian governments for surveying a railroad from La Quiaca to Tupiza.

SAVANNAH'S NEW MILLION-DOLLAR HOTEL GROWING IN POPULARITY

It's Getting to Be the Mecca of the Traveling Public.

FIRE PROOF

When a city grows and grows and finds itself outgrowing its knowledge, it is something of a problem to overcome the difficulty. Some cities would have lamented, sighed and appealed to their wealthy citizens and solved the matter by getting rich capitalists who would invest them a hotel.

Not so with Savannah. They simply saw the need and promised to meet it. They invested a million dollars, built a modern proportion to their present needs, and are now receiving dividends on their investment.

The Hotel Savannah is a big, splendid hotel, situated in the heart of the city, equipped throughout thoroughly modern, its cuisine is excellent, and its cleanliness attributable to a fastidious chef and crew, who thoroughly understand the "art of cooking." Reservations from the "city of beautiful cuisine." As its rates seem to be less than many other hotels of the same class, it is safe to say its guests will always be counted in large numbers.

Special summer rates are on now also.

Savannah is to be congratulated on its enterprise which has resulted in such a splendid hostelry.—Adv.

TROOPERS CHARGED CROWD OF STRIKERS

Many Persons Are Wounded in a Labor Riot at Erie, Pa.

Erie, Pa., August 23.—Rioting in connection with the strike of iron molders broke out afresh tonight and as a result a state policeman was wounded, three men are in the hospital and a score of injured have been taken to their homes.

The streets were crowded and many people assembled near the Labor Temple where the union men were discussing the question of ordering a general strike which would involve 8,000 men.

As the non-union workmen filed out of the plants it is alleged they were met by union workers and foreigners. The Hutler troop of the state constabulary, which was sent here to prevent rioting, responded to the riot call. It is said the commander's orders to disperse were ignored, and that the troopers rode into the throng. The crowd resisted and a number of persons were injured.

Captain L. G. Adams, of the state constabulary, late tonight, it is understood, wired to Harrisburg, asking for more state police.

The executive committee of the Central Labor Union, late tonight appointed a committee to draft a resolution calling for a general strike. This resolution is to be presented to the union mass meeting to be held Sunday afternoon.

The First Battle.

The first battle last night occurred at the boarding house of Edward Stafer, one of the detectives. He had been active on other occasions, it was said, and when his place of abode was discovered a mob stormed the house and almost beat him to death before he was rescued by the police and taken to a hospital, where he was thought to be dying.

This spark fired the situation and from that hour until daybreak the fighting continued in many localities. The small police force was hurried to one battle ground only to be recalled to another, where the prospect for danger to life and property seemed even greater. Twenty-five or more arrests were made and the men were worn out.

The authorities finally decided to appeal to Governor Tener at Harrisburg and troops D, of Butler, and A, of Greensburg, were ordered from barracks at once. They were hurried here by special train.

The molders in a number of union plants struck last December and the strike has been continued with bitterness ever since, threats, it is alleged, having been made to burn the city.

Bitter Feeling Aroused.

The appearance of troopers, whose coming was unheralded, was bitterly resented by the union leaders, who declared they would continue the strike. President George A. Cook, of the Central Labor union, conferred with the executive committee and at noon the announcement was made that a strike of all union men in the city would be called tomorrow or Monday, the exact hour to be decided at a meeting to be held tonight. Should this plan be carried out it will increase the number of idle workmen in Erie by approximately 7,000.

Further plans for continuing the strike will be perfected at a mass meeting of all union workmen in the city tomorrow afternoon.

Here's hoping the home team can let all the goose eggs remain in cold storage.

BANKERS PROPOSE RADICAL CHANGES

bankers' associations and that representatives of the 1st clearing houses attend a meeting and unite in an expression, this joint body composed of bankers from the south and north and from ocean to coast, representing country and city banks, state and national and trust companies, after carefully considering the bill, has adopted the following:

"Whereas, we recognize the imperative necessity of incorporating into the banking and currency system of this country those proven principles which will provide the most ample credit facilities with greatest safety and a currency based on gold which automatically adjusts its volume to trade requirements in order that the highest stability may be attained for our commerce, thereby assuring continuity of employment for the laborer and favorable markets for the producer, the fundamental basis of general prosperity, and,

"Whereas, although the pending measure has many excellent features, and recognizes certain principles fundamental in any scientific banking system, yet it is believed the application of those principles in certain respects be made in ways that will more surely avoid a credit disturbance and more efficiently attain the desired benefits for the whole people, and

"Whereas, we believe that to insure the successful operation of a new banking law, it must be of such a character as to warrant a general acceptance for its provisions by all existing institutions, since the first test of the measure of success must be the strength and power of efficiently serving the interests of the entire country, which can alone be had from general participation of banks of all classes; and, believing that the bill as now drawn will by its onerous provisions prevent state banks and many national banks from joining the system, and earnestly desiring to cooperate with the administration in bringing about the adoption of the most highly efficient plan; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we recommend the following changes in the bill, convinced that while not rendering the plan ideal, these changes would render organization more probable, would avoid a credit disturbance and provide a system that would gradually develop into a bulwark for the protection of our whole commerce, benefiting alike and in equal measure the laborer, the farmer and the business man.

The Changes Recommended.

A summary of the important changes in the currency bill proposed by the resolutions adopted by the bankers follow:

That there should be established one central federal reserve bank under the new currency and banking plan instead of twelve, and if this is found inexpedient then number should not exceed five with as many branches as may be required.

That membership in federal reserve banks be made voluntary instead of compulsory on the part of national banks as is provided in the case of state banks.

That the amount of subscriptions to the capital stock of the federal reserve banks be reduced from 20 to 10 per cent of the capitalization of the bank applying for membership.

That in order to remove control of the federal reserve banks from political influence the election of the institution be vested in a board of seven members composed of the secretary of the treasury, as ex-officio member, three members to be appointed by the president of the United States, who shall give due regard to geographical representation and three members to be selected by the member banks. The terms of office are fixed at three six and nine years at the beginning and nine years for all members after the first term. The salary is fixed at $10,000 a year with allowance for necessary traveling expenses.

That directors of regional banks be appointed and in the district.

That directors of regional banks be authorized to elect their own officials who with the federal agent designed by the federal reserve board shall manage the institution.

That the appointee of the federal reserve board shall not act as chairman of the board of directors of regional banks.

That the advisory board of the federal reserve bank be abolished.

That the authority of the federal reserve board to compel one member banker to rediscount paper of another member bank be made optional instead of mandatory.

Dividends for Member Banks.

That the cumulative dividends allowed member banks out of earnings on their shares in the federal reserve bank be increased from five to six per cent.

That state banks accepting membership in federal reserve banks be required to adopt the word "national" in their corporate names.

That all government monies be deposited in federal reserve banks except the five per cent redemption fund of outstanding national bank notes.

That federal reserve banks be prohibited from rediscounting paper drawn for carrying of securities other than stocks and bonds.

That the country banks' required reserve be reduced from 15 to 12 per cent and that not less than 4 per cent be kept in the bank vault, not less than 4 per cent deposited with the federal reserve bank and the remainder with the correspondent.

That the reserve city banks' required reserve be fixed at 15 per cent instead of 20 and 25 per cent, 6 per cent to remain in vault, 6 per cent in a federal reserve bank and 6 per cent with the correspondent in a central reserve bank.

That the central reserve city banks' required reserve which varied from 20 to 25 per cent be fixed at 20 per cent, 10 per cent in the vault and 10 per cent in the federal reserve bank.

That the time limit on farm lands be extended from 6 to 12 months.

That the section of the bill relating to savings banks be stricken out.

Federal Reserve Bank Notes.

That the federal reserve banks issue the necessary currency bank notes under control of the comptroller of the currency instead of having treasury notes issued by the government.

The conference considered this plan necessary for the protection of the government's credit in time of war or other emergency.

The amendment proposed for this provision of the bill follows:

"That federal reserve bank notes be issued by permission of the federal reserve board to federal reserve banks, and are hereby authorized; that said notes shall be obligation of the federal reserve banks and for all the United States, customs and other public duties.

"They shall be redeemed in gold on demand by the bank of issue.

"Any federal reserve bank upon vote of its directors and within a limit prescribed by the federal reserve board may issue such amount of the notes hereinafter provided for as it may deem best.

"Whenever any federal reserve bank shall pay out federal reserve bank notes issued by it as hereinafter provided, it shall segregate in its own vault and shall carry to a special reserve account on its books gold equal in amount to 40 per cent of the federal reserve bank notes so paid out but such reserve to be used for the redemption of said federal reserve bank notes.

"That full amount of such note issues by each of said banks shall at all times be covered by rediscount paper and purchases of foreign bills held by such banks under the provisions of this act; however, nothing herein provided shall prevent an exchange of said federal reserve bank notes for gold of equal amount of the issue of said federal reserve bank notes or the purchase of a like amount of gold. Notes so paid out shall bear on their faces the name of the issuing bank.

The Gold Reserve.

"Whenever the gold reserve is 40 per cent or more such notes may be issued without tax; whenever such reserve shall fall below 40 per cent and shall be between 37 1-2 per cent and 40 per cent, such deficiency of reserve shall bear a tax of interest at the rate of 1 1-2 per cent per annum and for each 2 1-2 per cent or part thereof of further reduction of reserve an additional tax of interest at the rate of 1 1-2 per cent per annum for each such period of reserve shall be paid into the treasury of the United States, and whenever and while such reserve shall be reduced to 33 1-3 per cent of such outstanding notes, no further issues of notes shall be made.

"Whenever federal reserve bank notes issued by one federal reserve bank shall be received by another federal reserve bank they shall be returned for redemption to the federal reserve bank by which they were originally issued and at its expense for transportation. No federal reserve bank shall pay out notes issued by another under penalty of a tax of 10 per cent upon the face value of notes so paid out. The amount of such federal reserve bank notes so issued by any such federal reserve bank shall become a first and paramount lien on all the assets of any such federal reserve bank."

Near Flat Money.

George M. Reynolds, of the resolutions committee, said that the issue of treasury notes as contemplated by the Glass-Owen bill and sanctioned by Secretary of State Bryan yesterday was regarded as a near approach to flat money.

"I suggested to Mr. Bryan when I was in Washington that in case of war with Mexico he might test the scheme by paying the soldiers with these notes," said Mr. Reynolds.

Country bankers opposed the authorization of federal reserve banks to act as clearing houses, declaring it would deprive the banks of large sums in exchange charges for the cashing of checks and would facilitate "kiting." George W. Rodgers, of Little Rock, Ark., declared that country bankers would rather have no currency law at all than one containing the objectionable clause.

Chairman A. Barton Hepburn, of New York, asserted this feature should be eliminated. T. Fenton, Chicago, declared that the clause was objected to by city banks also and that they were not responsible for it. Others were heard on the subject and a radical difference of opinion developed.

Joseph Chapman, of Minneapolis, declared the credit men of wholesale houses and jobbers were back of the attempt to eliminate charges for cashing checks.

O. J. Sands, of Richmond, denied it.

MRS. LONGSTREET ATTACKS SMITH

would be acceptable. But Senator Smith had an "understanding" and it was at once discovered that the Gainesville, Ga., postoffice was badly managed.

It is believed that the Smith plan contemplates Mrs. Ham's resignation after a short interval and Smith men is to succeed her. By giving publicity to this smooth Smith trick, it may die while in the cradle, it is said.

Congressman Bell had nothing whatever to do with my displacement; the ultimate responsibility rests upon the broad shoulders of Senator Smith. I had political differences with Congressman Bell some years ago. Today I do not know what it was all about. I believe the estrangement was the result of temperamental incompatibility growing out of my allegiance to the Hoke Smith faction of Georgia politics. Congressman Bell was a lifetime member in good standing of that crowd. At any rate for six years I had not spoken to Congressman Bell. I had ridiculed him unmercifully for being Democrat twice. I did not seek his support. I had publicly announced that if the day ever came when I could not hold the office without his support, I would put on my hat and walk out of it. Under these circumstances it was scarcely to be expected that Congressman Bell would call off his coat and fight for me. Only a man of Hoke Smith's colossal proportions would have espoused my cause under similar conditions; it takes a big man like Smith to be able to forgive and forget. But Congressman Bell made no fight on me. He simply requested the appointment of Mr. A. S. Hardy, a young, vigorous man, who is his friend and eminently qualified to make an efficient postmaster, and stood unflinchingly by his recommendation.

There was an ulterior and deeper purpose, however, than merely driving me out of the little postoffice in the mountains of Georgia and defeating Congressman Bells candidate. It was the beginning of a move to put a Smith man in congress from the Ninth district; already one of Smith's chief henchmen is being groomed and heralded by friends and admirers" to oppose Mr. Bell next year.

It may be possible that a Smith man to defeat Mr. Bell, but if I know the mettle of the people of the bloody old Ninth, it will take more than $17,000 to accomplish it. Senator Clapp gets through his bill making it criminal to send outside moneys into other states, it may be hard to raise sufficient campaign funds. Senator Smith admitted that he spent $17,000 in his last race for Governor of Georgia.

I have literally been exiled from Georgia by the Smith regime in Georgia politics, as I have had to come to seek the opportunity to earn a living in my profession of journalism.

I call on my friends in Georgia to register their friendship at the ballot boxes next year when Senator Smith seeks re-election. I call on my dear father's friends and on General Longstreet's friends who feel that I have as much right to live in Georgia as Hoke Smith, to remember me at the ballot boxes next year.

HELEN D. LONGSTREET.

Parker Against Sulzer.

New York, August 23.—Alton B. Parker, democratic nominee for president in 1904, will conduct the impeachment proceedings against Governor Sulzer next month before the court of impeachment, according to announcement made here today by Aaron J. Levy, majority leader of the assembly.

SULZER NOT AFRAID OF BEING IMPEACHED

Washington, August 23.—Governor William Sulzer, of New York, asserts that he has no fear of the ultimate results of the impeachment proceedings which have been instituted against him. He expressed this belief in reply to a letter to Representative Lafferty, of Washington, who made Mr. Sulzer's letter public tonight. Mr. Sulzer says none can conceive the obstacles which beset his path. He emphatically declares the charges against him are groundless, and says Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, and his followers know there is no basis for the publicity campaign they are conducting against him, but are pursuing it with the knowledge that it may prove disconcerting to him and worry Mrs. Sulzer.

Speaking of Murphy, he said:

"When the political boss found out he could not control me and make me a rubber stamp, he did everything in his power to destroy me politically. When Boss Murphy told me he would destroy me if I did not do his bidding, I defied him to do his worst, and declared I would continue to do my best."

Washington Streets Paved.

Washington, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—The West Construction company, of Chattanooga, has just completed Washington's second street paving contract which represented an outlay of $40,000. The work was commenced early in May and the completed work was turned over to the city yesterday after being approved by the Jaudon Engineering company, of Savannah, who were employed by the city as consulting engineers of the work.

Blow for Women Who Smoke.

(From The Detroit Free Press.)

Well, smoke as a feminine fad is apparently doned—if Ella Wheeler Wilcox is right. She is quoted in a New York newspaper as remarking that smoking is one of the Greatest of beauty destroyers. Doctors of ability and experience agree with her, too. Field Marshal Methuen, of England, calls attention to the same point. And not all of the enamel in the world can hide the ravages of smoking, for they show themselves in the eyes and in the nerves. The woman who wants to preserve even a remnant of good looks will not smoke. Only those who are anxious to make themselves repulsive to themselves and others will persist in the face of such testimony. Habit? Yes, it is strong. But there are stronger things in the world than mere, paltry little habits, you know.

DODGE

Out of This Great Plant Comes What You Want When You Want It—

The careful building of good transmission machinery is only a part of Dodge Service.

Getting the goods to you—on time—is another part.

A thousand or so master-workmen are laboring day and night building their engineering accuracy and skill into Dodge products.

One man—with a handful of assistants—directs the Dodge distribution to every part of the world.

Consecutive thought and tireless energy have made possible a remarkable Service.

Dodge Service means that no matter where in the United States your factory may be located, Dodge can reach you with standard equipment in double quick time.

The most difficult—and consequently the most carefully arranged distributing stations are in the great South.

For years railroad facilities limited a successful service.

Today Dodge-Atlanta, through its Subsidiary Service agents, can supply you with "what you want when you want it."

A break-down—crippling your factory—call Dodge.

A replacement—call Dodge.

A new building that should be hurried into operation—call Dodge. Say to your engineer or superintendent—"When you want power harness in a hurry—call Dodge on the phone—collect."

IRRIGATION PROPOSED FOR GEORGIA FARMS

Hughes Arranges for the Underground System to Be Tried.

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington, August 23.—(Special.) Representative Dudley M. Hughes, who is planning irrigating cotton farms in Georgia, has been particularly impressed by the report of drouth in Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma.

In those states tremendous damage has been caused to crops by the protracted hot spell, and this has been accentuated by the exhaustion of the water supply for man and beasts. Streams have run dry and cattle have to be driven miles, in some cases, to a water supply.

"To overcome the danger of similar distress in Georgia, which often does suffer from lack of cotton during this month I have arranged for a demonstration by the department of agriculture of the new underground system of irrigation," said Mr. Hughes.

"It may sound strange to some to talk of irrigation in our fertile state, but if this system will mean the saving one time of one-half our cotton crop it will be worth the cost. At this season of the year cotton is in its most critical condition, the plant being heavily loaded with the fruiting process and two weeks of extremely dry weather may cause a failure.

To Irrigate Cotton and Corn.

With the exception of some experimental work by Colonel John P. Fort, near Albany, this will be the first irrigation system in Georgia. Mr. Hughes, in small truck farms. Mr. Hughes' scheme contemplates the irrigation of cotton and corn fields.

"With the coming of the boll weevil, said Representative Hughes, 'the farmers of the south must come to depend more upon intensive farming. Weevil conditions demand this as a great deal more attention is required to cotton, and it is a crop in infested sections. My idea is, therefore, that the smaller the area on which the crop is planted the more closely will the farmer be able to care for his cotton. I believe that the experiments which are to be made by the irrigation expert in the Griffin district will demonstrate that our land can be made to produce twice as much cotton and corn as it is now producing. If this proves to be the case we will have won one of the first battles against his dread pest.

By Underground System.

"The system which the department proposes to try out is a new one to me. I have often thought of a system of overhead irrigation but the proposed system is known as an underground system. In the fields which are to be worked tiny pipes are laid some two feet under the ground. These pipes are supplied from some central water source and there are holes in them which permit the water to seep through and in this way reach the roots of the plants.

"That a system which will give all of the moisture needed to corn will make our lands produce a hundred bushels where we formerly grew twenty and thirty bushels will be valuable can be easily seen."

"GOSPEL STICK" GIVEN TO PRESIDENT WILSON

Washington, August 23.—President Wilson's latest gift from an admirer is a "gospel stick" elaborately carved with his monogram and several scriptural texts. The stick was left at the white house by the donor, the Rev. C. C. Penwick, a former bishop in Liberia, with a note explaining he had carved it himself.

The simple inscription, "Rev. C. C. Penwick," upon a card, coupled with the fact that the donor had been a bishop in Liberia, the negro republic, led to the theory originally that the stick was the gift of a negro preacher. Bishop Penwick, however, comes of a prominent white family and has spent the mature time of his 72 years in the ministry. He has done much work among the negroes.

It is time to teach Tanner that all really fashionable dogs wear muzzles.

FUND TO MOVE CROPS BEING SENT TO SOUTH

Georgia's Part of Fund to Be Handled by Atlanta, Macon, Augusta and Savannah.

Washington, August 23.—The government's $50,000,000 crop moving fund is being rapidly forwarded to the various cities in which the national banks have complied with the conditions of the treasury department. Banks in several southern cities already have sent their list of securities to the department for approval and these are being examined as to their acceptability.

While the exact amount of deposits already placed has not been announced at the department, it is understood several hundred thousand dollars have been sent into the larger reserve cities in the south to aid in moving the cotton crops.

The department today completed the list of cities in that section where the deposits are to be made. It includes:

Birmingham, Mobile and Montgomery, Ala.; Little Rock, Ark.; Jacksonville, Pensacola and Tampa, Fla.; Atlanta, Augusta, Macon and Savannah, Ga.; Lexington and Louisville, Ky.; New Orleans and Shreveport, La.; Jackson, Meridian and Vicksburg, Miss.; Charlotte, Greensboro, Raleigh and Wilmington, N. C.; Muscogee and Oklahoma City, Okla.; Charleston, Columbia, Greenville and Spartanburg, S. C.; Chattanooga, Knoxville, Memphis and Nashville, Tenn.; Dallas, Fort Worth, Galveston, Houston and San Antonio, Texas; Lynchburg, Norfolk, Richmond and Roanoke, Va., and Wheeling, W. Va.

Twenty-eight cities in central and far western states also were selected.

BANDITS SHOOT MEN, BUT LEAVE THE BOOTY

Buffalo, N. Y., August 23.—Bert P. Gage, president of the American Bluestone company, at Warsaw, is dying and Kirke Stirrell, his bookkeeper, is seriously wounded as the result of an attempted hold-up by a band of highway robbers near their quarries today.

The men were proceeding to the quarries in an automobile and carried with them $1,000 in currency to pay off the employees. While passing through a stretch of wood about a mile from the quarries, five masked men with revolvers and shotguns leaped from the bushes and demanded the money bag.

Gage, who was driving the car, quickly reversed and started to back his machine away. The robbers fired several shots and Gage received a wound in the right breast with a gun-shot charge. Stirrell was shot through the arm. Both men were taken to the Warsaw hospital.

The robbers fled after the shooting without making any further attempt to get the money. A posse is searching the country.

HE HAS LIVED 107 YEARS AND WAS NEVER SICK

Linton, Miss., August 23.—Joseph Fisher, said to be 107 years old, and claiming to have cast his first vote for Andrew Jackson for president, passed through here late yesterday in a one-horse wagon on his way to Bedford, Ind., to make his home there. He was accompanied by his daughter, aged 75, and his son, aged 64. Fisher says he was born in Washington county, Indiana, in 1806, uses tobacco in every form, drinks liquor and never was sick.

GREAT TRUST FORMED BY JEWELRY THIEVES

London, August 23.—Detectives of seven European countries who are searching for a $750,000 pearl necklace, stolen during a raid from Paris apartment, profess to have evidence that there is a gigantic "trust" of jewel thieves at work internationally.

At least six "kings" are known as members of the trust, including two American organizations. The profits of the organization are said to exceed $2,000,000 a year.

JUDGE SCORES JURY FOR MAKING MISTRIAL

And Defendant Is So Moved That He Arises and Pleads Guilty.

Montgomery, Ala., August 23.—Because a jury today reported a mistrial after two days in the case of Butler Searcy, a prominent Butler county planter, accused of holding Wash Garnder, a negro, in peonage, Federal Judge William B. Sheppard, of Pensacola, presiding temporarily over the federal court here, reprimanded the jury in most sensational terms.

"This is a travesty on justice," he declared. "I do not see how any intelligent man, hearing the evidence as it was presented, could agree to such a verdict." He hinted broadly that the members of the jury had carried their prejudice and petty personal differences into the jury room with them. He said in substance that despite the oath they took and the sacred obligations to which they subjected themselves—

"While we hear much of the corrupt judiciary on every hand," he said, "do you not think it behooves every juryman to consider any case brought before him in an impartial light and to render his verdict to the best of his ability, exercising the functions God gave him to their fullest power? I know that had given you my opinion of the case it would have had little weight with you. I will give it to you now.

"This man is guilty of peonage. Deep down in your hearts you are certain of the fact. Put your bring in a verdict to the effect that you agree to disagree."

After hearing Judge Sheppard's scathing rebuke, Searcy, the defendant, arose voluntarily and pleaded guilty to the charge against him. The fact that two juries heretofore had failed to reach a verdict in his case. He was sentenced to three months in the Montgomery jail.

AGRICULTURE TAUGHT AT THE CHAUTAUQUA

Washington, August 23.—Chautauquas have become a highly important agency in the teaching of agriculture, declares the United States bureau of education in its annual review of agricultural instruction, made public today.

"The progress which in the early history of the movement was confined principally of Bible study and recreation, have been considerably broadened, and special features, dealing with farm life, are becoming more popular and more frequent," says the report, referring to chautauquas. "It is now a common occurrence to find these programs offering courses in stock-judging, poultry-raising, soils, seed testing, household economy, etc.

More than 500 local chautauquas were held in the past season in Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Kansas and Missouri according to the bureau, more than 100 being held in towns with an average population of only 500.

The farmers' grange also is said to have become a prominent factor in the education of rural districts.

PAN-AMERICAN TOWER 901 FEET ABOVE CURB

New York, August 23.—A skyscraper we say tormost tower will rise 901 feet above the curb, is planned by the Pan-American States association. Unless plans miscarry, it will be built in this city, constructed wholly of materials from the Latin American republics, will arise from the Woolworth building the distinction of being the world's tallest habitable structure and will be ready for occupancy with the opening of the Panama-Pacific exposition in California in 1915.

Such at least are the tentative plans of the promoters. Plans and specifications for the structure have been drafted and will be given to a building committee of the association next Tuesday for review and acceptance. Francis H. Kimball, designer of notable downtown skyscrapers, made the plans. The estimated cost of the structure is $9,000,000. The site has not yet been selected. It is intended to erect the building as an enduring movement to Pan-American industry.

The Woolworth building, now the tallest in the world, is 750 feet high, the Metropolitan, its nearest rival, 700 feet.

SENTIMENT DIFFERS ON COTTON FUTURE TAX

One Southern Statesman Says Farmer Will Either Be Favorite or Victim.

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington, August 23.—(Special.) Sentiment radically differs here as to the effect of the proposed tax on cotton futures. Predictions are made on many sides that if the New York and New Orleans cotton exchanges are abolished, the farmer will be hurt instead of benefited.

A well-known southern statesman in discussing the matter with your correspondent today said:

"The farmer will either be the favorite or the victim of the proposed law. If it is good for the cotton farmer, it is good for the corn and wheat farmer, and should be imposed on future dealings in wheat and corn. If bad for the corn and wheat farmer, it is also bad for the cotton farmer.

"During the months of September, October and November about 75 per cent of our cotton product goes on the market. That means, if we have a 15,000,000 bale crop, that 11,250,000 bales are thrown on the market within three months.

"If it be a fact that the world's spinners would consume 15,000,000 bales throughout the year, they would only require during these three months 2,750,000 bales. This would leave 2,500,000 bales of unconsumed cotton to weigh down the market and depress prices.

"Under present conditions the custom of the trade is to carry this surplus cotton by means of hedges, using the cotton exchanges for the purpose. Destroy the american cotton exchanges and the southern cotton farmer will be put absolutely at the mercy of the foreign spinner.

"The foreign spot buyers, in that case, will have a tremendous advantage. He can send his representatives through the south, picking up cotton cheaply and cable his purchases to his house, which will then sell bales on the Liverpool or continental exchanges.

"The American spot buyer cannot hedge his purchase here if the American exchanges are abolished. The tax would make it prohibitive for him to do business, even if the exchanges existed, and if he attempted to hedge in foreign markets he would have to pay the foreign tax on the sale. This would be a handicap upon the American purchaser in favor of the foreigner."

RAPID PROGRESS MADE ON TARIFF MEASURE

Washington, August 23.—Rapid progress on the tariff bill was made today in the senate. The wool schedule was disposed of so far as it will be considered by the senate in committee of the whole and a deep inroad was made into the free list.

Though no vote was taken on free raw wool, the decisive showing on that having been deferred until the bill comes from the committee of the whole, the finance committee rates on woolen manufactures were agreed to without amendment, and there was every indication that raw wool would remain free. The Penrose, LaFollette, Smoot and Catron substitute for the schedule will come up when the bill appears in the senate proper.

With only a part of the free list, a portion of the rates schedule and the sundries schedule remaining to be considered in committee, democratic leaders expressed confidence that the income tax would be disposed of before the end of the coming week. It was their hope to have the bill ready for the final vote in the senate within two weeks.

Among the articles on the free list ratified today were agricultural implements and sugarcane machinery, alcohol, horses and mules and animals for breeding, apatite, asbestos, bauxite, Bibles, bread, biscuits and many others.

UNITED STATES WANTS HIGHWAY PRESS AGENT

Chicago, August 23.—The United States wants a press agent to help boom the good roads movement, according to announcement of the local branch of the federal civil service commission today.

The position may be competed for by any male, but a trained newspaper man is preferred. The position will pay $8 a day for each day employed.

AT THE THEATERS.

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Forsyth.)

A stranger in Atlanta might figure that the Forsyth is a real institution, that everybody in Atlanta makes a visit to the place during the course of time, and that the stranger would not be all wrong is pretty true a fact:

That vaudeville is decidedly the most popular form of theatrical entertainment is a fact so positive that there is not a negative argument. This style of entertainment is of such great variety that there is something on every seven-act program to please the fancy of an exacting patron, while as a general rule, if there might be something that would bore that individual, it does not last long enough to produce a grouch, and is pleasing some one else. That is the beauty and the success of vaudeville.

The bill that has been scheduled for the week, commencing with matinee on Monday, is made up of the acts that are right in keeping with the high standard of the Forsyth offering. There is plenty of comedy and lots of variety and acts that will be of value. There is no conflict there are no acts alike, and the show will be a speedy one from the opening act until the last inch of the motion picture has been run on the Forsyth's perfect screen.

Among the features will be Fred Bond and Miss Fremont Benton in their latest and newest comedy success, "Handkerchief Number 13." These two noted legitimate stars have found a real pleasure in vaudeville. They have been idepified with some of the best attractions ever placed on a stage and in vaudeville have been more than successful. Tony Wilson have the support of capable people in presenting their sketch, which is declared to be one of the best in modern vaudeville.

An European feature will be the first appearance here of The Four Regals, the really wonderful strong man act of the theatrical profession. These men have been long the features at the London Hilpodrome and at the Berlin Circus Schuman. They present a strong man act totally unlike anything of the sort that has ever been seen on a local stage. It is an act that will be talked about and will be something of a real drawing card.

And there will be Lewis and Dody who have been winning laurels all over the circuit with quaint chatter and new songs, and the Meredith Sisters, in stunning gowns, with pretty scenery will be presented with a selection of new songs that have an interest.

Joe Flynn, "the man with the hook," is a monologuist of unusual ability. His stories are all new, and he has some ideas that have been worked here, the novelty feature will be the introduction of Claude Golden, the Australian card expert, who will show some wonderful tricks in his handling cards. There is going to be another feature—one of those Forsyth surprises and in addition there is going to be of that worthwhile sort.

Kinemacolor.

(At the Grand.)

Kinemacolor is going to be at home permanently at the Grand starting on Monday. The wonderful natural colored pictures will be shown exclusively in the Grand. There will be no other place in Atlanta where these pictures can be seen. In addition there will be the best first run exclusive Biographs, Vitagraphs, Edisons, Seligs, Pathes, Lubins and the best of the independents. Kinemacolor reels will be changed every other day, black and white pictures will be shown exclusively and exhibitions start daily at 2:30, when the admission will be five cents and at 8 o'clock the admission will advance to ten cents.

Kinemacolor was presented at the Forsyth two years ago and made a wonderful hit. It was shown there at the Coronation of King George and more than 18,000 Atlanta people witnessed the wonderful views in motion pictures. Kinemacolor is a process of motion pictures that produces the subject in natural color. The reels are not painted. By an invention perfected by an American and a German a camera was made that in taking a picture takes three reel subject. "The Scarlet Letter," a drama will be offered and the last two days of the week will bring other People's Children" and "Back Stage Around New York." The first run black and white pictures will be changed every day and a great program will therefore be the result.

The small popular price of admission, cheaper than Kinemacolor can be seen anywhere, has been established because the Grand will soon be doing a wholesale business. The five cent admission fee from 2:30 to 5 o'clock will induce hundreds of ladies and children to see the pictures and at night ten cents will bring out big Kinemacolor parties.

The natural color pictures can not be seen anywhere in Atlanta save at the Grand and the first run movies will be exhibited at the Grand before they are released to any other local picture theater.

Jewell Kelley Company.

(At the Bijou.)

Commencing with the matinee tomorrow afternoon the Jewell Kelley Stock company will inaugurate a season of melodramatic and comedy-drama productions at the Bijou.

There is an evident demand for this class of amusement and theatergoers have long wanted to see the good old-fashioned plays again. In fact it was only after numerous requests that the management of the Bijou has agreed to change the well established policy of that playhouse, a theater which has furnished its patrons for nearly four years some of the best vaudeville that has ever been offered at bargain prices.

That the change will be received with satisfaction by patrons of the house is being shown in the heavy advance sale for the opening performances of the week. The engagement will begin with a matinee Monday afternoon at which the prices will be twenty cents for adults and ten cents for children in any part of the house.

Monday night will be a gala occasion, for this performance ladies will be admitted free when accompanied by an escort holding a paid thirty cent ticket, purchased before 6 p. m. Monday afternoon.

The bill for the coming week will be the sterling melodrama "Her Fatal Shadow," which will be staged with much special scenery and mechanical effects. The play is in four acts and several scenes which have been especially painted by Rep Logie, the famous scenic artist. It is said that nothing better staged will be seen in Atlanta this season.

The company is letter perfect in their various parts insuring a smooth and enjoyable performance. Jewell Kelley has engaged a splendid company including Eddie Black, Richard Mandell, Thomas McDonough, Rose Morris, Grace Webber, Claire Sunmers, Marie Claire, Earl Higley and others well known locally.

Mr. Jewell Kelley, actor and manager of the company, which bears his name is a pioneer of the stock business in the south. His first experience in the theatrical business dates back almost thirty years ago and his first visit to Atlanta goes back to the time when Atlanta was in her swaddling clothes, and when the old De Give Opera house was the only theater in the city.

Mr. Kelley has been a successful stock manager for twenty years, and he has the reputation of holding more successful stock engagements than any manager ever south.

Mr. Kelley has conducted stock in Dallas, Texas, San Antonio, Texas, Denver Colo., Chattanooga, and Knoxville, Tenn., Fort Worth, Fla., Savannah, Ga., New Orleans, La., Mobile, Ala., and other important cities of the south.

JOHN D. IS TO PREACH SERMON TO THE DEAF

Cleveland, Ohio, August 23.—If present plans are carried out John D. Rockefeller, through an interpreter, tomorrow will preach a short sermon to delegates attending the national convention of the deaf here. Mrs. Elmer E. Bates, chairman of the local committee of entertainment, announced today that Mr. Rockefeller had consented to the plan. The sermon will be delivered at the Euclid Avenue Baptist church, of which the oil king is a member. Afterwards he will shake hands with the deaf delegates.

At about the same hour Rev. Ferdinand H. Moeller will preach in the sign language at St. John's Cathedral. He is a brother of Archbishop Moeller, of Cincinnati. Both men were taken to the Warsaw hospital.

BOY IS CANDIDATE FOR A HERO MEDAL

Memphis, Tenn., August 23.—Little Homer Strong, aged 7, became a candidate for a hero medal today when he rescued his two-year-old sister, Florence, from a fire in their attic bedroom. When he discovered the flames in the hallway, Homer rushed back into the room, locked the trunk containing all the family's valuables, and then aiding his sister to his back, carried her pig-a-back down the stairs where he was aided by neighbors. The mother had gone to work and the children were alone at the time of the fire.

Our Frank Method of Selling Diamonds Interesting to Careful Buyers

Our plans are only possible to those really Diamond Merchants who buy direct from the cutters in ORIGINAL PAPERS OR LOTS and give each diamond a positively correct value at the hands of an expert classer.

Briefly—we give the diamond to the hands of the wearer direct from the cutter—in purchasing we take advantage of every cash discount, and give our customers the advantage of it—we cut out the middlemen's or wholesalers' profits.

When these papers are received each diamond is classed, graded and then marked in plain figures with its weight and grade, and price that must necessarily be as low as the same goods can be bought anywhere in the world.

Our diamond values are positively assured and our customers are protected against loss or dissatisfaction in the fact that every solitaire diamond we sell carries a guarantee that we will cheerfully buy it back from you at 90 cents on the dollar at any time within one year of purchase, or at any time allow you just what you paid for it together with any meantime advance in value in exchange for more expensive diamonds.

The old method of open credits are impossible with us on account of our small margin of profit, and for customers who do not care to pay out ready money we have devised our deferred payment plan, wherein you can pay one-fifth or more down and divide the balance into monthly notes bearing interest.

OUR DIAMOND BOOK SET NO. 7 explains our method of doing business, our positive guarantees, absolute values and shows the most beautiful set of designs ever illustrated.

HART SOUNDS KEYNOTE OF TAX EQUALIZATION

In a very striking address delivered Saturday at Greensboro, State Tax Commissioner John C. Hart sounded the keynote of the administration of the new state tax equalization law, the occasion of the address being the gathering of the home county friends of Judge Hart to bid him farewell on his removal to the capital to assume his official duties.

On account of its very great importance, and because it outlines the policy of the state in the administration of the new tax law, The Constitution publishes the address in full, and in doing so we commend it to the consideration of every citizen of Georgia. It should be read from beginning to end by every person who has the welfare of the state at heart and who feels a sense of pride in seeing the state redeemed from the disgraceful position into which it had been permitted to drift by an abominable system of financial operation for which, as Judge Hart shows, nobody is directly responsible.

Year by year conditions have grown worse until the state found itself in the very vortex of a whirlpool which threatened either default or repudiation. Even with so serious a condition confronting, there were many who took the position that because the state had not defaulted on any of its honest obligations in the past it would not do so now. They recognized the fact that the state's public institutions, charitable and educational, were being conducted on a starvation basis but even that was not enough to impress them with the gravity of the situation and with the fact that an honest system of taxation was the only possible remedy. Fortunately, however, as the result of the brilliant and fearless campaign of the governor, the general assembly was brought to a full realization of the situation and relief legislation was enacted in the shape of the new state tax equalization law.

The appointment of Judge Hart as state tax commissioner at once gave hope and encouragement even to those who had before doubted the wisdom of the measure, bringing to its support some of the strongest of those who had opposed it. Of all men in the state it was universally conceded that he was the one best suited for state tax commissioner—the position having been tendered him by Governor Slaton without his knowledge that his name was even under consideration. By unanimous vote both branches of the general assembly enthusiastically endorsed the appointment, and Commissioner Hart has already entered upon the discharge of what is perhaps the most important work ever put in the hands of one man in Georgia.

No honest man can possibly take exception to any feature of the policy which will control in the administration of the new law, as so admirably outlined in Commissioner Hart's address. There are of course some tax dodgers in Georgia, as in every other state, who have been evading their just obligation to the state, but we believe that the principle of honesty and square dealing enunciated in this address will so appeal to their patriotism and public spirit as to put practically everybody behind the enforcement of this law, which holds in its enactment the very salvation of the state.

The whole plan and purpose of the new law could not be presented stronger than in this statement of the tax commissioner:

"No discriminations or exemptions should be made in anybody's favor because of his habitation, but every taxpayer everywhere should be governed by the same rule of honest valuations and absolute equality in bearing the burden. The end hoped for is that every taxpayer shall do his share, which is to be determined by the value of his property. This is the essence of justice. No fair thinking man will object to this rule, and if the rule is observed by all taxpayers of Georgia the debt can be paid and taxes would cease to be a burden. But when taxpayers withhold their property from taxation, or make incorrect returns and feel that such things can be done consistently with common honesty, the result is inequality, and one man is made to bear the burden of another."

If the law is given a fair trial, as it will be, the first effect will be to put the credit of Georgia far ahead of that of any other southern state, and as well to give it the lead in every branch of public activity. It means that our charitable institutions will be cared for as those of no other state in the south, and that the public school and general educational system of the state will be put on a plane far above that of any other southern state—that the school teachers of Georgia will be compensated for their services from month to month, instead of being subjected to the humiliation of being forced to wait eight months for their pay, and that every obligation of the state will be paid as it matures.

More than that, Judge Hart expresses the belief that after a few years' operation of the law the state tax rate can be reduced from the constitutional five mills to four and perhaps three mills, and Governor Slaton believes that if the law is administered in strict accordance with an honest construction the state rate can be reduced from five even to two mills. What Kansas has done, Georgia can do.

At any rate the law is in effect, and it should appeal to the honesty and the patriotism of every taxpayer in the state.

GEORGIA'S OPPORTUNITY.

A big packer of Chicago said recently: "By January 1 meat will sell at unheard-of figures. Forty cents a pound for the choice cuts seems a certainty. Forty-five cents is a probability, and even 50 cents a possibility before spring."

This alarming situation has been brought about by the corn-killing drouth in Kansas and neighboring states, and the scarcity of cattle—with a few notable exceptions—in the southeast. The western raisers, foreseeing that they cannot afford to hold and feed their cattle, are rushing them to market, and have been doing so for the last two weeks.

Chicago packers will profit by the soaring prices of meat, and Georgia consumers will suffer, whereas they ought actually to be in a position to be benefited. Tennessee will not feel the shortage and the high prices as much as Georgia will, because Tennessee feeds herself on the finest beef, raised at home, and has enough left to ship millions of dollars' worth to other states.

Read Mr. LeCraw's intensely interesting story, "Where Luxury Looms on the Farm," elsewhere in this paper. What H. A. Walker, of Wartrace, Tenn., is doing, every farmer in Georgia can do on a larger or smaller scale. That is what W. H. White, Jr., says, and he knows more about it than any man in Georgia.

The day of the big ranch is over. The farmers of Georgia now stand where the farmers of France and Germany have stood for many years. They have had no big ranches over there. In France and Germany a man who owns as much as ten acres of land—and sometimes even less—has his little bunch of cattle. Of course he intensifies his cattle-raising. That is to say, he has the finest stock he can afford, and he puts into execution carefully thought out plans for getting the best results in beef, butter and milk, not forgetting that every head of cattle pays for its board and keep by improving the land on which it grazes. THE MEAT SUPPLY OF THE WORLD IS NOW BEING FURNISHED BY THE SMALL FARMER, and Georgia can supply not only its own demand, but in a large part that of the other states, if our farmers will only wake up to their opportunity.

TILLMAN ON WOMAN SUFFRAGE

It was inevitable that Senator Tillman's speech in the United States senate attacking woman suffrage would provoke a violent controversy. With almost the power of the old Tillman, and in the language typical of his fiery type of "pitchfork oratory," always interesting though oftentimes brutal, he excoriated the equal suffrage movement.

Senator Tillman makes a good defense, it must be admitted, of Dr. Alfred Taylor Bledsoe's article on "The Mission of Woman" published in 1871 when the south was in the throes of reconstruction.

"At the thought of women anywhere, and especially of the south, entering this monstrous and filthy arena of politics, Dr. Bledsoe's chivalrous, sensitive spirit recoiled with horror," said Mr. Tillman. "In sadness, not in anger, he saw, or thought he saw, northern women surrendering their divinity and high privileges for mere human rights, and as an honest man . . . he firmly but kindly spoke his sentiments."

But some northern newspapers, as was to be expected, did not deal kindly with Senator Tillman's apology for inserting Dr. Bledsoe's article in The Congressional Record. It contained too much disputable matter to escape harsh criticism.

In states where equal suffrage exists the press has made invidious comparisons and appear to glory in the political morality of their commonwealths as compared to that enjoyed by South Carolina under Governor Cole E. Blease. The equal suffrage states appear content after contrasting their status with the manhood suffrage states.

Statistics asked for by Senator Tillman to show the ratio under equal suffrage of divorce, illegitimacy, and the declining birthrate as compared to conditions under normal man-made political conditions would be interesting and valuable.

The historian Lecky, in analyzing the causes for the fall of Rome, insists that the increased privileges given to women led to the evasion of the maternal function, free love became the rule, and the birthrate declined. The mistress of the world decayed and fell.

That no such analogy can be drawn in this country with states which have granted women the suffrage is contended with force and conviction by many profound students.

If Senator Tillman is right in his premise, every true man will agree with his conclusion:

"It is better endure the evils of corruption in politics and debauchery in government, rather than bring about a condition which will mar the beauty and dim the luster of our glorious womanhood. We can better afford to have degraded and corrupt politics than degraded and bad women."

Whether a larger part in public affairs will help to improve conditions or will serve to lower the moral standard of the women engaged is the controversy that must be fought out solemnly and thoughtfully in every state which proposes to extend to woman the ballot.

RECALL OF JUDGES.

At the American Bar association's annual meeting next month in Montreal, one of the most interesting questions to be debated will be the recall of judges.

Despite the constitutional provision for the impeachment of an unworthy judge, the movement for the judicial recall has made such headway as to cause advocates of the old established order very serious concern.

A corollary of the judicial recall is a demand for the recall of judicial decisions. This received much attention in the last legislature of Massachusetts, according to the report of the committee on judicial recall of the American Bar association. This report held:

"The significance and danger of the judicial recall are, in many states and localities, underestimated, even by some members of our committee. Because, here and there, up to the present time, no special local demand for the judicial recall has shown itself, it seems to be considered that the adoption in 1908 in Oregon of the recall of judges, even though later followed in 1911 in California, was not necessarily indicative of the danger of its further extension.

"Besides its adoption in Oregon and California by constitutional amendment, the recall of judges has been within the past years made a constitutional provision in the states of Arizona and Nevada. It has been recently voted by the legislatures of the states of Kansas and Minnesota, to be submitted as a constitutional amendment for adoption by the people. At the last election in Colorado, constitutional amendments for both the recall of judges and for the recall of judicial decisions, initiated by the people under the initiative and referendum, were adopted.

"In Arkansas a constitutional amendment for the recall of judges, initiated by the people, was by a two-to-one vote adopted, but the state supreme court held that it had not been properly submitted, and, therefore, not adopted.

"In many other states the movement has been strong, without as yet sufficient strength to secure enactment of legislation looking to a constitutional change. This is true of Wisconsin, Illinois and Ohio.

GOVERNOR OF PHILIPPINES.

In Francis Burton Harrison, of New York, nominated as governor-general of the Philippine Islands, President Wilson has selected a clean, wholesome, able young democrat who bids fair to make a creditable record in the Far East.

Before the end of the present administration, the Philippines are certain to receive considerable attention, and the governor-general will be much in the world's eye. That he will bear himself with dignity and good sense seems assured.

Mr. Harrison has represented the Thirteenth New York district in congress since 1902. His father was secretary to Jefferson Davis, president of the southern confederacy.

Enlisting for the Spanish-American war, Mr. Harrison was made captain and assistant adjutant general. His wealth has not been a bar to the development of a vigorous, sturdy, patriotic Americanism.

Some positive statement in regard to the new administration's policy toward the Philippines should shortly be made. The Baltimore platform declared:

"We reaffirm the position . . . announced in the democratic platform of 1900 of imperialism and colonial exploitation in the Philippines or elsewhere. We condemn the experiment of imperialism as the most costly and unusable blunder which has involved us in enormous expense, brought us weakness instead of strength, and laid our nation open to the charge of abandonment of the fundamental doctrine of self-government. We favor an immediate declaration of the purpose to recognize the independence of the Philippine Islands as soon as a stable government can be established, such independence to be guaranteed by us until the neutralization of the islands can be secured by treaty with other powers.

No sane man believes that a stable and independent government could be set up in the Philippines without years of preparation.

Disappointed officeseekers should cheer up: there are fine crop prospects, and instead of running the country in their dreams they can do some rewarding work for it in their waking hours.

Lind didn't go to Mexico to hunt trouble: it was there waiting for him, and he knew that it would sit up all night to meet his train.

Takes a long time to become famous in two hemispheres. Great Britain didn't appear to know that Ambassador Wilson had criticised her and talked his head off.

Poor little Evelyn was afraid Harry would kill her while he was running away from her at the rate of sixty miles an hour. longer pays.

Two at the Gate.

A Georgia singer comforts his poverty with the following rhyme of "Rich and Poor:"

"The rich man went to glory
And long and long did wait;
The poor man shuffled past him
And walked right through the gate.

"The rich man saw the poor man
In royal robes complete;
A liveried angel led him
Up to the highest seat.

"No words the rich man needed
His further fate to learn;
'The fire's either out,' said he,
'Or fixing for to burn.'"

Log Cabin Sayings.

Don't tie yer troubles 'round yer neck an' jump into the river, for they know how to swim, and they'll save your life for future misery.

It's well that the golden streets are so far away, for some folks would soon pledge their interest in them as collateral for having a hick old time in this world.

The greatest men we've had amongst us were born in log cabins, and they were great, too, because they didn't forget their raising.

The Fruits of War.

(From The Toledo Blade.)

The war in the Balkans has been as profitless a war as has ever been fought. With the exception of Rumania, which came upon the scene as the blackmailer, not one of the victorious nations but is left in worse shape than when the invasion of Turkish territory began. Not one but must be years paying a heavy interest upon its loans, but must be years paying for its trampled crops and its destroyed villages, but must be years mourning for its dead.

It is probably true that no foreign war could be fought nowadays which could be profitable. The American war with Spain was appreciated the least by those for whose lives and liberties we fought. Japan is less happy as the victor over Russia than she was before she entered upon her great war. If Britain and Germany, after years of squabbling, come to blows, there may be nothing but woe and sorrow for whichever nation wins, as there would be nothing else for the one that lost.

The end of war may come, not because hatred and greed have been weeded out of the human breast, but because war no

The World's Mysteries

WHO WAS KASPAR HAUSER?

One of the most remarkable mysteries of history is the identity of Kaspar Houser, a German youth. During the early part of the last century all Europe seemed to be excited over this strange boy, trying to solve the question as to who he was and the mystery surrounding his death. Andrew Lang, who made a study of European mysteries, took the view that "possibly Kasper was a sort of 'ambulatory automatis,' an instance of a phenomenon, known by other cases to students of psychical abnormalities, of which the characteristics are a mania for straying away and the persistence of delusions as to identity." He inclines to regard Kaspar as simply a "thumbug." The "authentic records" purporting to confirm the kidnaping story Lang stigmatizes as "worthless and impudent rubbish."

The strange career and actions of Kaspar Hauser have been, however, a subject of much curious speculation. To the present day the mystery hanging over his origin remains undispelled, and the whole affair is beset with such anomalies and contradictions that it is almost impossible to form even a well-grounded conjecture on the subject.

Youth Hauser appeared in the streets of Nuremberg, between 4 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon of May 26, 1828, dressed in the garb of a peasant and with such a helpless and bewildered air that he attracted the attention of the passerby. He was apparently between 16 and 17 years, and had a letter addressed to the captain of the Sixth Regiment of Horse at Nuremberg. The letter stated that the boy was given into the custody of the writer, October 7, 1812, and that according to agreement he had instructed him in writing, reading and the Christian religion.

Along with this letter was inclosed another purporting to be written by the boy's mother, stating that he was born April 30, 1812, and that his father, formerly a cavalry officer in the Sixth Regiment of Nuremberg, was dead. He could speak very little and was almost totally ignorant of what was able to write his name in firm, legible characters, but the only question he could answer as to his identity was that he was from Regensburg.

The only nourishment he would take was bread and water, and he was seemingly ignorant of outward objects. For some time he was detained in prison as a vagrant, but on the 18th of July, 1828, he was delivered over by the town authorities to the care of a schoolmaster.

Further mysteries accumulated about his personality and conduct. His skin was very white, and his limbs delicately formed, his hands and feet being small and beautiful, showing no marks of his ever having worn shoes. Among his scanty articles of clothing was a handkerchief marked "K. H.," and he had likewise about him some written Catholic prayers.

The poor boy soon became the object of much sympathy. Binder, a burgomaster, exerted himself, in particular, to throw some light on the obscurity in which the origin of the young man was involved. In the course of their conversation it was brought out that Kaspar, from his childhood, had worn only a shirt and trousers; that he had lived in a dark place underground, where he was unable to stretch himself out at full length; that he had been fed upon bread and water by a man who did not show himself; but who cleaned and dressed him while he was in a state of natural or artificial sleep.

He stated that for some time before he had been brought to Nuremberg the man had come oftener to his dungeon, and had taught him to write by guiding his hand, and to lift his feet and walk. This narrative gave rise to various suppositions and rumors, some believing him to be of princely origin and the victim of some dark plot respecting an inheritance.

Then came the greatest of all the mystery connected with him. On the 17th of October, 1829, he was found to have received a wound on the forehead, which, according to his own statement, had been inflicted on him by a man with a blackened face. Having on this account been removed to the house of a magistrate he was visited by Earl Stanhope, who become so interested in his history that he sent him, in 1832, to Ansbach to be educated.

His story was gradually forgotten until his death again made him the subject of attention. It involved a new phase under the following singular circumstances: A stranger under the pretext of bringing him a message from Lord Stanhope engaged to meet Hauser in the palace garden at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of the 14th of December, 1833. The hapless youth was faithful to the rendezvous, but had scarcely commenced to converse with the unknown emissary when the latter stabbed him in the left side and he fell mortally wounded. He had, however, sufficient strength left to return home and relate the circumstances of his assassination, and three days afterwards he died. Nothing beyond mere conjecture has ever been added regarding the mysterious Kaspar Hauser.

Stories About Dreams.

(From The Chicago News.)

St. Augustine records that a disciple of his, having to lecture on Cicero's rhetorical books, was baffled by a certain passage. He slept, and in a dream his master, who was really far away and unconscious of the whole thing, appeared to him and expounded the passage. In 1893 Herr Hilprecht, professor of Assyriology in the University of Pennsylvania, was worried over two small inscribed fragments of agate found at Babylon, of which he had received drawings. In a dream a tall, thin Assyrian priest told him they "belonged together," being portions of an inscribed votive cylinder which had been cut up to make earrings for the statue of a god. The professor found next day that the fragments did fit and make a continuous inscription.

Melton Prior, war artist, always averred that he owed his life on the one occasion to warning dreams. "When going out to the Zulu war in Africa, he twice dreamed that he was shot and then buried. On arriving at Durban he received a letter from his mother telling of a dream identical with his own, and begging him not to go to the front. He obeyed her injunction, and engaged in another artist to go in his place. The unfortunate substitute was almost the first man killed in the fighting.

Robert Louis Stevenson was a wonderful dreamer, and could dream in sequence, continuing a dream from the point where it had broken off the night before. It was in this way that the greater part of "Jekyll and Hyde" was put together. Dante, too, is said to have dreamed many cantos of "The Divine Comedy," and Voltaire in one show the "Henriade" came to him in sleep. "Ideas occurred to me," he wrote. "In spite of myself, and in which I had no part whatever."

News in Reading Rocks.

(From the Providence Journal.)

In southern Illinois and adjacent Kentucky there are found beautiful flat beaches over which the farmer drives, as on any highway, never thinking to inquire what has become of the lakes the waters of which once lapped the beaches. The lakes have long been dry, though their existence in a geologically recent time—say within some one million years—is plain enough to the United States geological survey which has been mapping that region. What people down there go about on, when they are not strolling along the beaches, is the crust of sediment deposited in the lakes one hundred feet thick. Deposits of sediment made long before that, when southern Illinois was a part of the ocean, are now solid rocks.

At a later period, still many million years ago, it was a luxuriant swamp, and that has become coal mines. Once upon a time, too, a great glacier crept over it, making huge boulders from the Canadian ledges. When the glacier retreated these boulders were left scattered about and strung along. No such rocks are found in Illinois except in the track of the glacier. Such information imparted by the geologists suggest that reading the rocks may be more interesting reading than the latest novel or a debate in congress.

Cat Runs Down Rabbit.

(Sacramento, Cal., Correspondent, N. Y. Sun.)

In western Colusa county, on the Jones ranch, is a cat called Baby, which, according to Frank M. Woodson, Humane officer, who has just returned from Colusa county on a hunting trip, surpasses all of the cats he has killed and the multitude of others he has seen and heard of.

This cat, because of the admiration shown by Woodson, added another record to his long list, while the hunter visited his master. Woodson had been out hunting rabbits and came in with a goodly bag. Baby was not to be outdone by the visitor and went on a hunting trip all alone.

Woodson gives Baby's description as follows: Height, 14½ inches; length of front legs from toes to elbow joints, 7 inches; length from tip of nose to tip of tail, 38½ inches. Outside of this Baby is simply a cat with a beautiful disposition and a mezzo-soprano voice.

To chase a fleet jackrabbit and keep it in sight is some feat. But Woodson's feline friend did not stop at mere pursuit. He kept at its flying hind legs for three miles, caught and killed it. For absolute proof Baby carried his prey clear back home over a six-foot fence and left it on the back porch.

The Capture of Canada.

(From The Philadelphia Ledger.)

Recently I asked a United States army officer how long it would take to capture Canada, in the event of trouble with England. He thought about one week. I was his reply.

He assured me that he was not speaking lightly or at haphazard, but he based his statement on facts pigeonholed in the war department.

Canada is, for this reason, England's own greatest argument in favor of the Monroe doctrine. Indeed, King George's most highly prized possession is the protection under the message sent to congress ninety years ago next December by James Monroe as the United States itself.

Of all countries in the world which might do something hostile to the Monroe doctrine, England will be the very last to act. It has Canada to lose and nothing whatever to gain. But Monroe never dreamed anything so foolish as to pretend the United States would object to England's protecting its own American possessions, such as Bermuda and Canada.

Eating Their Words.

(From The Chicago News.)

Some authors have been compelled to destroy their books in a singularly unpleasant fashion. In 1668 Philippus Oldenburger, a German jurist, published a description of his travels through Germany. A passage in this offended his liege lord, and Oldenburg was soundly flogged and then ordered to eat a copy of his book. It was only a duodecimo, but the feat proved beyond his powers, and after five pages pleaded successfully for a remission.

When Bernard the Great, duke of Saxony, learned that he was criticised in lampoons and pamphlets, he had the author arrested, and after putting him in the pillory for an hour, with one of the objectionable works between his teeth, made him swallow it.

Cases have also been known of voluntary book eating. Ogier de Busbecq states that the Tartars used to eat their books in order to acquire knowledge, this being the only way in which they were capable of assimilating printed matter.

What Could the Poor Man Do?

(From Pearson's Weekly.)

An amusing story is going the rounds in Fleet street about an editor who, to the surprise of those under him, had just accepted a large batch of contributions. The manuscripts were not only remarkable for brilliance; indeed, in the ordinary way they would nearly all have been returned to the senders with the usual formula announcing that the editor was regretted he was unable to make use of them. The explanation of this apparent eccentricity on the part of the editor was that the other evening he took the manuscripts home in his bag to read at leisure. Between the office and his station he stopped to buy a bottle of whisky, which he put in the bag beside the manuscripts. In the train the bag got an unnoticed bang, and when he arrived home he was horrified to find the bottle broken and the manuscripts smothered in whisky. Now, that editor has a great reputation for dignity and sobriety, and—well, there you are!

Terrors of the Future.

(From The New York Evening Sun.)

London—Robert Donald, editor of The London Daily Chronicle, in his opening address as president of the Institute of Journalists at York today prophesied that aeroplanes and airships will eventually deliver newspapers at the breakfast table each morning. At amusement places all the day's news will be given by cinematograph and gramophone. News will be delivered like gas and water, and householders will listen to announcements while resting in their gardens.—News Dispatch.

Newspaper poets and column conductors will be able to talk their copy rapidly into a telephone receiver kind of a thing, we presume, and then go home to lunch. But the horrible thought occurs to us—will the audience be allowed to talk back?

Scott Letter to Bartie.

(From The Cincinnati Enquirer.)

It is not generally known that Sir James Mathew Barrie, whose thousands of admirers have not yet become accustomed to his new title, was one of the closest friends of the late and gallant Captain Scott, of the Antarctic expedition.

Captain Scott, however, left a letter from Captain Scott, written after the explorer's companion had perished in the tent, and the document was so terrible in its tragedy that Barrie has refused even a hint at its contents to his most intimate friends. He has, however, preserved the letter, and it is now understood that he will leave it in his will to the British museum.

Miss Rosss and Her Studio Of Interest to Her Friends

MISS LULA ROSS,
A talented Georgia artist, who has returned from Europe to apply her talents at home.

The return to her native state of Miss Lula Ross, of Rome, Ga., and her decision to make her permanent home in Atlanta is an announcement pleasing not only to her countless friends in the state, but to those art loving people who appreciate the significance of the artist who "comes home to paint."

Miss Ross has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Edward Durant, at the Rosly, and has been personally superintending the building of the house in which her studio will be built.

"It faces the west on Durant place," explained Miss Ross in talking enthusiastically of her prospective home. "For nowhere in this or the old world have I seen more beautiful sunsets, more wonderful sky lines than right here in Atlanta.

"Yes, I prefer landscape painting and working in the open—every artist does—and will indulge myself in this pleasure in and around Atlanta. While in Europe, where I studied a number of years, in France and Italy, I was a member of many of the out-of-door clubs, but I can assure you that America's great 'out-of-doors' can give just as much inspiration. The American student is realizing this more and more every day.

The Broadened Viewpoint.

"Getting the training which the old world masters can give, living in the very atmosphere of the greatest art human genius and talent have produced, the American student, who is right-minded, gets the broad viewpoint that makes him realize that with the training he gets abroad he can come back home and find plenty of subject matter. This fact is emphatically proven each day, and I believe this 'homecoming' is going to give to our country the very force which has been needed for what may be called a native art life.

"Like every other form of education the time has come for the knowledge of art to be applied, and not just wasted in endless seeking for a fame, which can just as easily be found at home as in foreign lands. In other words, art in America is going to find its most onward move through applied art, that is the artist coming back and applying what he has learned in his every day life and every day things. He can relate art to everything around him and paint a 'gray day' picture in the misty atmosphere which veils Kennesaw mountain just as wonderful as he could one on foreign shores.

"The lights of our own sunsets can be portrayed with as much skill as the sunset of any other world, for have we not the same glory of color, the same scenery and scapes and openness?"

To Make Exhibition.

Miss Ross is an instructor in drawing and painting, but her special work is landscape painting and she promises in the early winter to make an exhibition of her work.

Talking of the growing spirit of art as she has seen it here and elsewhere, in this country she believes that to push art in its relation to civic beauty and the people at large it will have to come through a more general knowledge of the subject, in the people patronizing it as well as the gradual growth through the public schools.

Miss Nott Honour, of Greenville, S. C., is the guest of Miss Anita Honour.

Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Jarnagin and Miss Erskine Jarnagin have returned from Wrightsville Beach.

Mrs. Sarah Harries and Miss Lorle Harries will be at home for the winter with Mrs. Baldwin, 271 North Boulevard.

Miss Annie Lourie Paine, of Savannah, is the guest of Miss Ruth Barry.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Harries and Mr. Robert Harries, of Valdosta, spend the past week with their mother, Mrs. Sarah Harris, and their sisters, Mrs. Glover and Miss Lorle Harries. Mr. and Mrs. Howard Harries are spending some time at Indian Springs before returning to Valdosta.

Miss Daisy Ramsey has returned from New York.

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Sanders and family have returned home after spending the summer at their camp near Roswell.

Mrs. Lillian Clarke Herman has returned from New York.

Mrs. T. B. Gay and children, Miss Eloise Gay and Bolling and Garnett, returned Tuesday from Virginia, where they have spent the summer.

Rev. C. C. Kiser is the guest of his mother, Mrs. C. C. Kiser on his way to his new church in Lexington, Miss.

Miss Gertrude Jones leaves today to join her parents at Atlantic City.

Mrs. L. H. Ledahinger is ill at Robertson's Sanitarium.

CITY URGES COUNTY TO CLEAN UP CREEK

Commissioners Told of Need for Removing Debris in Peachtree Creek.

To urge the absolute necessity of clearing Peachtree creek of rock and debris and to emphasize the fact that the work is imperative to the successful operation of Atlanta's new $195,000 sewerage disposal plant, Chief R. M. Clayton, of the city construction department, went before the county commission yesterday.

The city engineer called the attention of the county committee to the fact that the work was passed up favorably more than a year and a half ago, and asked for immediate action. Fletcher A. Quillian, chairman of the bond commission, also pointed out that it was the duty of the commission to do the work and thereby eliminate a danger which threatens the biggest improvement project ever accomplished in Atlanta.

The clearance of the creek is a small detail, Chief Clayton said. "It is trifling compared to the problems we have solved in these plants. Such a small detail should not be allowed to stand as a menace to the plant."

City Puts It Up to County.

The city officials placed the matter squarely up to the county commission. Bond Commissioner Quillian informed the county that Peachtree creek plant will be in operation on September 1 with three filter beds in operation, and he took the firm position that the cleaning of the creek was a duty which the county owed the city not only by reason of its promise to do the work when called upon by the city, but also by reason of the advantage it will be to the investment of $195,000 of which was voted in bonds by the people.

Because of the importance of the matter, particularly to the county, the county commission as a result of the committee's assertion that the matter of clearing the creek should be remained in abeyance for a few days. Captain Clayton again called attention to the necessity of starting the work before the cold weather sets in, and was informed that the matter would be given serious consideration.

Clayton Urges Work.

Captain Clayton takes the position that inasmuch as the city has been handicaped by the failure of Chester A. Dady, the first contractor, to complete the plant in time and inasmuch as Receiver Sullivan, who was put in charge of Dady's affairs, has been forced to incur additional expense in order to get sufficient stone to complete the three filter beds by the first of September, that the county should make efforts to aid the city in every possible way.

Peachtree creek plant is complete except for six filter beds. The sewers will be connected this week, and on September 1 as promised by the engineers, the plant will be in operation. The six remaining beds will be rushed to early completion.

Assistant Engineer Hansel, who has charge of the construction details of the sewage plants, says that the shipment of stone is great enough to indicate that the plant will be finished in every respect before the new year.

Wright to Study Systems.

M. J. Wright, the Bertillion expert of the Atlanta police, leaves tonight for Chicago for a stay of several weeks, during which time he will make a study of the metropolitan system of identifying criminals by finger prints. Some time ago the board of police commissioners, at the instance of Chief Beavers, presented a recommendation to the city council for an appropriation of $500 for the expense of putting in an identification system of this kind. The matter has not yet been considered by the council, but it is expected that the visit of Wright to Chicago will hasten action on this important adjunct to police work.

Primitive Baptist Meeting.

For the present the Primitive Baptists will hold their meetings at the Decatur Street Baptist church, Oakdale Park, near the end of the car line. Preaching will be at 11 o'clock this morning.

Seeks to Annul Contract.

H. S. Gibbs, of Atlanta, filed suit in the superior court against the county commissioners and the H. W. Manville company to have the contract for the cork tiling for the floors of the new courthouse set aside. Gibbs sets forth that he is the agent for several manufacturing concerns and bases his complaint on the ground that the material which the contractor proposes to install does not come up to the architect's specifications. The contract aggregates $14,000.

WAITERS WILL BANQUET.

W. P. Nelson, of Hotel Ansley, will be toastmaster, and short addresses will be made by McKiney, head waiter, Hotel Ansley; J. W. Wright, William Curry, William Smith, L. G. Whitley, L. R. Gaillard, head waiter, Georgian Terrace.

BIG EDUCATIONAL RALLY HELD AT SALEM CHURCH

A big educational rally was held at Salem church, 5 miles east of Lithonia, Friday. It was an all-day affair, basket dinner being served on the grounds by the 800 people present. Professor R. E. Carroll acted as master of ceremonies and the following delivered addresses: R. Frank Smith, Professor J. H. Walker, Robert S. Hester, L. T. Y. Lynch and H. D. Evans.

In the afternoon a spelling bee was held, in which the Wesley chapel school children came out victorious. Miss Emma Wesley, principal of the Hill street school, Atlanta, presided.

Los Angeles, Cal., August 23.—Establishing what was declared to be a world's record with rod and reel, W. Hinkson, of New York, brought to shore off Catalina island today a 355-pound sword fish in a 93 minutes' fight. The fish and 12 feet long, and had a 4-foot sword.

FARMERS' UNION PLANS TO MOVE HEADQUARTERS

No Definite Action Taken, But Options Are Secured on Lands at Alma.

Waycross, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—No definite action was taken at today's rally at Alma, regarding the removal of the Farmers' Union headquarters, but options on a sufficient acreage to induce leaders of the organization to seriously consider moving shortly were secured.

Charles S. Barrett, national president of the Farmers' union, J. J. Brown, former assistant commissioner of agriculture, and V. E. Padgett, made addresses. About eight hundred people attended.

It is understood that Mr. Brown with N. L. Rhodes, of Tennessee, will move to Alma and in the event they do this it is stated that President Barrett will seriously consider joining them. Plans are being made for establishing a big state paper and a large model farm will be a feature of the settlement. The land on which options have been given is located along the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic and the plans detailed today will bring about five hundred families into south Georgia during a year.

Dr. Walker Preaches Today.

Dr. Hugh K. Walker, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, who has returned from his vacation, will preach tomorrow morning on "The Christian and the New Day." He will seek to correct some of the mistakes of "the man in the street" on the subject of what it means to be a man in the Christian. Evening services in the church will be resumed the first Sunday in September.

The Ponce de Leon Apartments

OPEN SEPTEMBER FIRST, NINETEEN THIRTEEN

The Location

THE magnificent structure erected by the George A. Fuller Company of New York, under contract for the Fulton Properties Company, and known as the Ponce de Leon Apartments, was completed in August and will open for occupation by its tenants on September 1, 1913.

It is located on the southeast corner of Peachtree street and Ponce de Leon avenue, Atlanta, Ga., at the intersection of the two residence thoroughfares which are probably more famous throughout the United States for their striking beauty than any boulevard of any city in the western hemisphere, with the possible exception of Fifth avenue, New York.

The site of the building is at the apex of Peachtree ridge, the highest altitude in the City of Atlanta, and from the roof garden an extended view of the entire city and the surrounding country may be obtained, bringing Stone Mountain on the east, and Kennesaw Mountain, and the foothills of the Blue Ridge, on the north, in easy view of the observer.

The million dollar Georgian Terrace Hotel occupies the opposite corner, also facing Ponce de Leon Square, which marks the boundary line between the path of commercial industry and the palatial residences which have made this section of Atlanta famous throughout the world.

The Building

The building, which was planned by W. L. Stoddart, of New York, was designed to afford all the privacy, security, comfort and luxury that can be obtained in the most modern and expensive homes, at the same time eliminating those objectionable details that are necessary attendants upon the individual householder.

It was the aim of the owners in building the Ponce de Leon Apartments to provide, in Atlanta's choicest location, an apartment house so planned as to provide not only the maximum of light, sunshine and ventilation, but also an arrangement of rooms, and facilities for operation and service to afford every advantage of a luxurious private residence and to restrict its occupancy to desirable tenants of known respectability and standing.

The design of the building is Italian Renaissance. Its construction embraces every desirable improvement known to modern mechanics and architecture and the interior as well as the exterior of the building reflect equal credit upon the genius of the architect and the skill of the contractors in charge of its erection.

The building contains eleven stories in addition to the basement and the roof garden, and is of steel construction, absolutely fireproof and soundproof, its practical immunity from destruction by fire being recognized by its insurance rating under a nominal classification of the lowest rate enjoyed by any similar building in the Southern States.

The Detail

The entrance hall is in keeping with the general elegance and style which characterizes the building throughout. Its design is dignified in character and striking in effect, being finished in Caen stone and Formosa marble, with floor of marble mosaic.

The passenger elevators of ample capacity and handsome design, finished in Circassian walnut, are reached through the main entrance hall, supplying each apartment floor, and the roof garden which crowns the structure. A service elevator is reached through the rear entrance of the building, supplying service to each floor.

The first floor contains the office and private telephone exchange, ladies' rest room, gentlemen's cloak room, public hall and foyer and a commodious cafe, which is one of the features of the building.

The visitors' gallery, located on the second floor, affords a fine view of the public hall and foyer, and is reached by direct stairway and by two passenger elevators. The second floor also contains two housekeeping suites and four bachelor suites, which, with slight modifications, are typical.

Housekeeping Suites

The floors from the third to the ninth floors, inclusive, are typical in design, affording two separate housekeeping suites and four bachelor suites, the latter being capable of separate use or as a combination suite of two, three or four rooms with independent baths.

Housekeeping suites A contain nine rooms, including three bedrooms, sleeping porch, dressing room, hall, foyer, living room, dining room, kitchen, pantry and servants' room, and is equipped with three baths, ten closets, one lavatory and two balconies.

Suite B consists of ten rooms, and includes four bedrooms, sleeping porch, foyer, living room, dining room, pantry, kitchen, servants' room, three baths, ten closets and two balconies.

Under an admirable arrangement, the kitchens of each suite are entirely disconnected from the remainder of the building, so as to make objectionable odors and similar disagreeable features absolutely impossible.

A feature of equally obvious advantage is found in the private passage pervading each housekeeping suite, making direct access possible from kitchen or pantry to the foyer or apartment entrance without the necessity of passing through the dining room, living room or any other apartment.

The private passage immediately adjoins the spacious light court, insuring absolute privacy and preventing a view from any one apartment into the windows or doors of another.

These housekeeping suites are admirably adapted to entertaining, as the bedrooms are entirely separate and distinct from all the living apartments, although so arranged as to be easy of access to one another or to the foyer or living room.

The kitchens, which are commodious and conveniently arranged, with ample light and ventilation, immediately connect with the servants' room, which is equipped with a private bath, closet and spacious balcony.

The service elevator and independent staircase immediately adjoin the kitchens, which are equipped with separate entrance to the service hall, shut off from the main portion of the building, and each apartment is supplied with a patent garbage receptacle, recessed in the service hall.

The kitchens, pantries and servants' rooms are supplied with hot and cold water and with every convenience for easy and sanitary attention to domestic detail.

Mechanical refrigeration of the most modern and approved type is supplied direct to kitchen and pantry with modern mechanical refrigerators of ample capacity, durable construction and handsome finish, of which each housekeeping suite contains two, one in the pantry and another in the kitchen, making it possible to protect food and supplies from contaminating odors and obviating all the inconvenience, expense and annoyance incident to ice refrigeration.

The pantries are also equipped with sinks and cupboards, and are so arranged as to afford direct and cross-ventilation.

Special attention has been given to the arrangement of the dining rooms, which are striking in design, affording immediate access to the pantry on one side and from the living room, as well as from the private passage, on the other. Wide observation windows afford all the light and air that could be desired, and the juxtaposition of the doors and windows affords constant and direct ventilation between the light court and the exterior atmosphere.

The living rooms are designed to afford the substantial comfort of a private residence and are free from the conventional appearance too often found in hotels and apartment buildings.

The adjoining foyer is so constructed as to afford opportunity to transact business matters or interview temporary callers without disturbing other members of the family, or guests, who may occupy the living room or other apartments of the suite, or it may be, at will, thrown en suite with the living room and dining room, making ideal salons for entertaining.

All bedrooms are commodious, light and airy, each housekeeping suite being provided with a combination wall safe for the temporary protection of jewelry and other valuables, and each room having immediate and direct access to a private bath.

The bath rooms are furnished with the most modern and luxurious fixtures and appliances, and are finished in the most refined style with white tiled floors and wainscoting.

The front balcony attached to each housekeeping suite is unique in apartment buildings, and is peculiarly adapted to the demands of the southern climate. A magnificent view from Ponce de Leon Square is commanded by the occupants, who may enjoy the breezy coolness of the afternoon shade with perfect privacy. The side balconies are primarily designed for sleeping porches, but may be readily adapted for use as conservatories, winter gardens or sun-baths at the will of the tenant.

The servants' balconies allow opportunity for the discharge of culinary duties in the comfortable environment of the outside atmosphere, and, in providing domestics with a comfort not ordinarily obtainable in apartments, will materially aid in solving the servant problem.

Each housekeeping suite has direct access to two passenger elevators and one service elevator as well as to the main marble staircase in front and the steel service stairway in the rear and a mail chute on each floor permits the posting of mail at all hours, at the tenant's door.

Tenants are relieved from the annoyance of all such problems as garbage removal, as the janitor of the building gives personal attention to such details, frequently removing, at stated intervals, the accumulations which are temporarily accommodated in patent, odorless, recessed receptacles.

Individual storage rooms are provided in the basement, free of charge, for the use of tenants of housekeeping suites in storing unused articles of furniture, trunks, etc., these storage compartments being conveniently located with reference to the alley turnway and to the service elevator.

Reference to the printed plans of the typical floors illustrate the purpose of the architect to provide the occupants of the housekeeping suites with every comfort, convenience and luxury incident to the arrangement of the most modern and palatial residences and a continued study of the plans will constantly disclose new and striking effects and advantages in the disposition of the various apartments.

Bachelor Apartments

Each floor contains a limited number of apartments which are not provided with housekeeping facilities, and which are intended for occupancy by tenants who desire to avoid the care and responsibilities of complete housekeeping, and who may desire to take their meals in the excellent cafe provided for the purpose on the first floor of the building.

Such apartments are arranged to be occupied singly or en suite, and are so admirably planned as to enable the tenant to take one or more rooms, with or without baths, at will, so that it is possible for a suite to consist of one, two, three or four rooms, with one bath for the suite, or with a bath communicating into each room.

On the floors from the second to the ninth, inclusive, these bachelor suites occupy the most desirable space and location in the building, fronting directly on Ponce de Leon Square, commanding an unsurpassed view and affording constant and delightful breezes. Two passenger elevators and the broad entrance of the marble staircase immediately face the entrance to each of these apartments, and the receptacle of the mail chute on each floor is just at hand.

The tenth and eleventh floors are devoted exclusively to bachelor apartments, and the rooms and halls are so arranged as to permit the formation of convenient suites composed of two or more rooms, either with or without baths, living rooms or private dining rooms.

The altitude of these apartments renders them much in demand, as the building is absolutely fireproof and is served by fast moving elevators, and as their altitude lifts them above the strata of dust and smoke which may be found existing to a greater or less extent in every municipal atmosphere.

These rooms offer inviting opportunity for separate small families or bachelors engaging individual bedrooms and baths, to unite in maintaining joint living rooms. Special cafe arrangements may be made for the regular or occasional service of meals to private dining rooms attached to these suites.

Special Features

The roof garden which crowns the entire structure was designed not only for ornament, but for use, comfort and pleasure as well. It is the purpose of the owners of the building to provide in the roof garden an acceptable substitute for the famous yard gardens of southern homes, and the summer months will doubtless find the Ponce de Leon roof garden the rendezvous of Atlanta's social circle.

The building is supplied throughout with vacuum cleaning process operated from a compression plant in the basement, and eliminating from the building the germ-laden dust which follows in the wake of the obsolete broom and duster.

Immense ventilating fans, also operated by the machinery in the basement, and on the roof through chutes extending from the basement to the roof, keep every part of the building supplied with fresh currents of ever-changing, wholesome air.

The building is screened throughout with the finest quality of copper fly screening, with metal rims, and copper weather strips protect each window against storms.

Each room is equipped with the best quality of Holland shades of uniform type and color, and electric fixtures are supplied to each apartment, at the expense of the building.

Extra Service

The basement contains a modern sanitary laundry, equipped with porcelain tubs, piped for hot and cold water and for steam, each individual equipment being separated by woven wire screen partitions, preventing the confusion of property.

The laundry is also equipped with a patent steam drier, with individual compartments, protected by lock and key, for each tenant.

A nominal charge will be made for the use of this service, the charge being merely intended to cover the actual cost of the service, including hot and cold water, steam and electricity.

An ice-making machine is installed in the basement of the building, and for those tenants desiring the service, cracked ice will be delivered daily in quantities desired, at the nominal cost of furnishing the service.

Many of the living rooms of the building are piped for gas logs, which may, when desired, be supplied and maintained by the tenants.

A limited number of rooms will be furnished to suit the wishes and taste of tenants desiring furnished rooms, and a small charge will be added to cover the expense incident to this additional service.

Mail service will also be provided for those tenants who do not desire to incur the expense and annoyance of maintaining personal servants, the cost of this extra service depending upon the hours for which the service is engaged.

The Cafe

Perhaps the most attractive feature of the entire building is the commodious cafe located on the east side of the first floor, specially constructed to afford the maximum of light and ventilation, equipped with the most attractive outfit that can be supplied, and especially designed to produce upon the eye the restful impressions of simple elegance and quiet comfort.

Everything suggesting the conventional discomfort of the hotel dining room has been studiously eliminated, the purpose of the owners being to afford to the patrons of the cafe not only the menu but the atmosphere enjoyed by those who "live at home." This cafe is conducted for the benefit of tenants of the building, on which account the rate for monthly meals has been fixed at a minimum price only sufficient to cover the actual cost of the service, which is exclusively table d'hote.

A private dining room has been provided in connection with the cafe, in order that dinner parties and similar entertainments may be given, by patrons of the cafe, in the atmosphere of privacy necessary to the success of such functions.

The cafe is operated by Mrs. Ella Wright Wilcox, who was placed in charge of this department by the owners on account of the eminent reputation she has justly acquired in the previous conduct of similar enterprises, on a smaller scale.

The reputation of Mrs. Wilcox affords sufficient guarantee that the cafe will maintain at all times the highest standard of excellence, in thorough harmony with the type and quality of every department and appointment of the building, which has been pronounced the finest and most complete apartment house of the size in the world.

The Management

No feature of construction, equipment or decoration has been accorded greater care by the owners than the management of the building.

Mr. R. L. Swett, for many years chief engineer of the Georgian Terrace Hotel, and whose entire experience has been devoted to similar work, is superintendent of the building.

His office is conveniently located on the first floor, and he will be at all times accessible to tenants, as his residence apartments are located within the building. He will appreciate prompt and explicit complaints of any nature.

The greatest care has been exercised in the selection of every employe whose duties require contact with tenants and their guests, and every effort has been made to provide the building with every modern facility essential to the complete and perfect home.

The Tenants

While the arrangement of the apartments on each floor insures absolute privacy to the household of every tenant, the management has exercised a commendable conservatism in passing on applications for space.

No publicity can properly be given to the names of the tenants who already occupy apartments in the building, but the list, which will be open to inspection, demonstrates the high standard of patronage the Ponce de Leon has already acquired and which it will maintain.

It will be the painstaking aim of the management to maintain, at all times, throughout the building, the decorum and atmosphere that distinguishes the American home and lends peculiar charm to the social life of the Southern States.

The Rates

The rates quoted on all apartments are absolutely fixed, no reduction being made except as quoted in the rate sheet, as determined by location or by the combination of suites.

TAX COMMISSIONER HART DISCUSSES THE NEW TAX EQUALIZATION LAW

Delivers a Striking "Farewell" Address to His Homefolks in the County of Greene Assembled at the Courthouse to Bid Him "Good-Bye"—Analyzes the New Law and Shows Its Plan and Purpose in So Striking a Manner as to Carry Convincing Appeal to All Patriotic Georgians.

Greensboro, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—Judge John C. Hart, Georgia's new state tax commissioner, took formal leave of his home folks in the county of Greene at a public meeting held in the courthouse today, at which he delivered an address on State Tax Equalization law.

Judge Hart's friends from every part of the county gathered at the courthouse to bid him adieu as he left for the capitol to assume his official duties. He has already rented a residence in Atlanta and hence will be removed from daily association with those of his county folks who have been thrown so intimately with him all these years.

He proposes to give every day of his time to the great work which has been placed in his hands and which in his opinion means more to the state of Georgia than any one piece of constructive work ever undertaken for the state.

It will be recalled that only two years ago Judge Hart refused an offer for appointment to the court of appeals at a salary of $4,000 a year. One of his neighbors asked him today how it was that he turned down that offer and accepted the position of state tax commissioner at a salary of only $2,500.

"Because," was his prompt reply, "I have a chance here to do my state a service and I did not feel that I had a right to decline the call. I have studied the tax question and I know what Georgia needs. I am willing to consecrate the balance of my life if necessary to this great work and the matter of money does not figure with me in the slightest degree in connection with it. If the legislature had not appropriated a dollar for the work and had asked me to undertake it I would have felt it my duty to do so."

Judge Hart was asked to meet his friends today in order that they might tell him "goodbye" and was requested to take advantage of the occasion to deliver an address on the scope, purpose and effect of the new law. This he did in a very remarkable address, given in full as follows:

THE ADDRESS IN FULL.

Fellow citizens of Greene county—I appreciate your turning out in such large numbers to bid me goodbye. This manifestation of your esteem is very gratifying. As the duties of my office will carry me from the seat of government, and my family will accompany me, I expect in time to return to Greene county. The county is very dear to me. My people have lived with it from the time when the Oconee river, hard by, was the dead line between the white man and the Indian. My father and my father's father sleep in the bosom of Greene county, and when the labors of life are ended for me, I desire too that it shall be my final resting place.

I understand why you should want to know what my duties are, because of your interest in me personally, and your interest as citizens of Georgia in those public duties. Unexpected to me Governor Slaton tendered the appointment of state tax commissioner, which has to do directly with the state's fiscal affairs. Knowing the need of reformation in them, and the present distressing condition of the state treasury, indulging the hope that I might be of some service to the state, I accepted the office. My idea is the state's case should be carried directly to the people, who in the last analysis constitute the state, and lay before them all of the facts, asking them to consider and weigh them, and do what is right in the emergency. My office will connect me directly with the state's system and enforcement of our revenue laws, the most important of all governmental functions.

Taxation is a political and economic question. Taxation is a science, and lies at the very foundation of organized society. It is the life blood of the state. Government deprived of this function would perish. Whatever advance civilization has made in the past is attributable to the exercise of the function of taxation, and whatever its future progress may be is essentially dependent upon a wise system of taxation, fairly and justly administered. Since the hope of the race is wrapped up in organized society, and since organized society cannot exist without some system of taxation, every member of that society is vitally interested in the subject of taxation. We know the problem of taxation has been a vital question for six thousand years, and it is not unreasonable to say that it will be equally vital sixty thousand years hence. The problem will always be with us. It would seem that a subject so vital, so important, would receive at the hands of the people taxed the greatest consideration. Yet people generally have concerned themselves but little in the study of its underlying principles.

It Is Not a Popular Theme.

Taxation has never been popular. Our politicians in pressing their claim for political preferment rarely mention the subject, except to assure the voter that if elected to office he would "reduce the burden of taxation." And that is a very catchy phrase. The average voter of this country looks upon taxation as a "burden," enacted of him by an (often) ill-considered government, and for which he gets nothing in return. Feeling that way towards the state the result is he contributes sparingly and grudgingly of his means of its support, and many citizens have grown absolutely indifferent to the state's claims, contributing nothing whatever. The citizen is wrong who so feels and acts toward his state.

Education the Remedy for These Wrongs.

I believe the effective way to cure these wrongs is to make plain the truth to the people. That the annual tax levied for the support of the state is a contribution to a friendly government, and that the taxes which the citizen pays are in effect levied by the people and for the benefit of the people. The erroneous impression so general that the state is one thing and the citizen another, that the one is independent of the other, that each can get along without the other, has led as might have been expected to reckless serious and embarrassing to the state. Conditions exist today in this state which are painful to contemplate, the result of this heresy. If I controlled alone my own feelings as a son of this dear state I would add no further publicity to her embarrassment by dwelling these conditions. But it is your right to know, for in its last analysis the people constitute the state, and I conceive it my plain duty to discuss openly and frankly the conditions which confront the state. I wish you to understand and appreciate the spirit that moves me to talk plainly in this conference.

It is Not in a Spirit of Criticism.

First of all, I wish it understood that I speak in no spirit of censure. I blame nobody. The good men whom you have elected in the past to fill your offices of trust and honor should not be blamed. No censure is to be attached to your past governors. They are good men who loved Georgia and faithfully executed their trusts. Governors do not make laws and are clothed with no function beyond the duty of the execution of the law. You are your legislators to be blamed. From year to year they have made appropriations, in many cases, I think beyond what was considered absolutely necessary for the people's happiness, progress and prosperity.

Where Do the Taxes Go?

The total revenue of the state for 1913 is estimated by the comptroller general, Honorable William A. Wright, one of the most conservative and capable men that ever held an office in Georgia, at $5,673,000. The appropriation to pensions is $1,188,000. The appropriation to the common schools of the state is $2,500,000, exclusive of the appropriations made to those institutions of higher learning fostered by the state. An analysis of the figures will demonstrate that the two items named, the payment of pensions and the appropriations to education, take 75 per cent of the state's total revenue. The balance of the state's revenue is applied to the payment of the interest on the public debt and the creation of a sinking fund amounting to $383,000, and the maintenance of the civil establishment, including the administration of justice and the support of the public institutions. One of the largest appropriations made under the latter head is for maintenance, support, care and keep of the unfortunates in the state sanitarium, Georgia's greatest charity. The state has been trying to meet these appropriations, but her revenue has proved insufficient. Yearly the deficit has grown until it now amounts to approximately one million dollars. Your treasurer, Mr. Speer, cannot pay the debt for the good and sufficient reason that you have not given him the money with which to pay it. Your governor cannot borrow the money with which to pay the debt, for he has no authority to borrow any such amount. Our credit is carried mostly by the school teachers of the state, who I have no doubt need their money. Now if the state was poor and unable to meet her debts no censure would be visited with and censure would be improper. But the state is not poor. The state in fact is rich. There are but few states in this union which can boast of a better financial condition, viewed from the standpoint of her assets and her liabilities. The attitude therefore in which the state finds herself is not unlike that of a rich debtor toward a servant who had faithfully served him, consulted his service, needing the stipend to clothe and feed himself, to supply his wants and the wants of others dependent upon him, perhaps a helpless father, an aged mother, or orphan brothers and sisters,—withholding, promising, procrastinating, till the poor servant, pressed and harassed by creditors and pinched by want, is forced to discount to the money lender the state's promise to pay, as if the state were an unconscionable liar or an insolvent trader. No brave man will justify the state in such conduct.

Light is Slowly Breaking.

When your legislature met recently the very last thing your retiring governor said was, "The state should pay her debts;" and the very first thing the incoming governor did was to send a message to the legislature that the state's debts must be paid; and I hear now the message—and bless the people of Georgia—proclaimed by thousands of voices, from the mountains to the seashore, in harmonious acclaim sweet to me as the music of the heavenly choir, The Debt Shall Be Paid. You are right, people of Georgia. Nobody who knows your blood would have expected you to take any other position. I feel emboldened here and now to say to Georgia's sister states that no commonwealth in this union may boast of a more patriotic citizenship, and that Georgia will on or before the 25th day of December, 1914, be redeemed, and will claim her rightful place in the sisterhood of the states.

The People of Georgia Will Take the Matter in Hand.

The people of Georgia when advised of the situation will pay the debt. It only remains to point the way back of the door. It is not a hard thing to do. It is an easy thing to do, and in doing it benefit yourselves. The debt cannot and should not be paid by any particular class of persons, but should be paid by both classes, natural and artificial, individuals and corporations. It is the debt alike of the citizen in the country and the man in the city. No discriminations or exemptions should be made in anybody's favor because of his habitation, but every taxpayer everywhere should be governed by the same rule of honest valuation and should bear his part in bearing the burden. The end hoped for is that every taxpayer shall do his share which is to be determined by the value of his property. This is the essence of justice. No fair thinking man will object to this rule, and if it rule is observed by all taxpayers in Georgia the debt can be paid and taxes would cease to be a burden. But when taxpayers withhold their property from taxation, or make incorrect returns and feel that such things can be done consistently with common honesty, the result is inequality, and one man is made to bear the burden of another.

Unreturned Property for Taxation the Principal Cause of our Trouble.

There is enough property in Georgia today in the form of invisible porperty, consisting of bonds, of money, of notes, mortgages, and like securities, paid in, to raise, at 5 per cent of tax, to raise, if put upon the digest where such property rightfully belongs, sufficient revenue to pay off the state's debt, and in another year result in reducing the present tax rate of five mills from two to three mills. I make the further statement, if the unreturned property located in this state, subject to taxation under the laws of this state, were put upon the digest, and the property already returned was well entered at a just and fair valuation, it would raise sufficient revenue to enable the state to pay her debt, to liberally support her starving public institutions, and to lower the present tax rate of five mills to two mills. In other words, it is to the interest of every citizen in Georgia to see that every species of property pays its just proportion of taxes. The financial interest is to be honest. We ought to be honest even when it costs us something to be honest, but no man can claim that his mind or his heart is right when he argues that it is preferable to be dishonest at a financial sacrifice.

Unreturned Property Must Be Put in Digest Open.

Does any fair minded man object to placing upon the digest proper property which is contributing nothing now to the support of the government, and yet receiving the government's protection? The man who has paid his share of taxation justly ought to insist that such property be taxed. The man who has only half way done his duty in returning his property for taxation should insist that the fellow who has done nothing should take a hand in the work. It is not only the duty devolving upon a man who has concealed his property to do right towards the state, but it is a duty he also owes to his fellow citizen. The man who has done his whole duty as well as the man who has done his duty only in part, should insist that the man who has done nothing should now come across.

Land Owners Greatly Interested in a Fair and Just Tax System.

The man who owns lands should be the earnest advocate of a just system of taxation. His property is always in sight. It cannot be hid or concealed. It will always be taxed at some price. Not so with wealth in the form of invisible property. At tax gathering time we "pass around the hat" and the owner of this class of property returns as may please him. It is entirely with his conscience under our system of voluntary returns. The tax receiver does not see the money, the bonds, the notes and like securities. The owner of real estate therefore, should be zealous in the advocacy of a tax system which will enable the state to reach every class of property for taxation. Such a system divides the cost of maintenance of government fairly between the tax payer who is the owner of visible property and the taxpayer whose wealth is in invisible property. This is not meant to advance any prejudice against the man of wealth, or to suggest that wealth need have any corrupting influence on a man's character. A man who has made his money honesty deserves, and I give him my greatest respect. I wish there were more men of wealth in this state. The illustration is merely for the purpose of showing how the average taxpayer is treated in a fair and just system of taxation.

Some Localities Set Up a Law of Their Own as to Returns of Property for Taxation.

There exists in some localities a rule or custom among the people of returning property at a fixed and arbitrary valuation, confessedly an unfair valuation to the state, and the system is defended by some on the idea that the question of value is a matter indifferent to the state, and the rule is applied to all alike equally as the result. This is a specious argument. Here for illustration are two citizens of that locality. One is worth a thousand dollars, the other worth a million dollars. They agree to return their property at an arbitrary valuation of say 50 per cent of its fair market value. The thousand dollar man pays tax on a valuation of $500, and the man worth a million pays tax to the state on $500,000. The thousand dollar man beats the state out of $2.50, the million dollar man beats the state out of $2,500. The result is the thousand dollar man has saved $2.50 apparently, but the millionaire has saved $2,500. Bearing in mind that taxes are laid for the benefit of the people in that community, the thousand dollar man has made possible by the observance of that rule to withhold from the treasury of that locality $2,500 which the millionaire ought to pay. The point this illustration is intended to make clear is that the man of small means is the greatest beneficiary of a fair and just tax system.

Taxes Are Not Always Properly to Be Classed as Burdens.

We speak of taxes as a burden. It is only the truth to speak of certain taxes at least as an investment. Take the case of the thousand dollar man referred to. The state spends an honest return of his property for taxation could collect out of him only $5. What does he get in return? First, the state protects him in return for his investment in the enjoyment of life, liberty and property. Nor is this all. He may be the father of half a dozen children, to whom the state gives the benefit of an education far from five to eight months of a year. What other investment of $5 would prove so remunerative?

The Man of Wealth Should Insist Upon a Fair System of Taxation.

Wealth is greatly interested in a just system of taxation, fairly enforced. More than half of the money paid by wealth to the state goes to the education of the children of the state. We are building up a splendid citizenship, the outgrowth of our systems of education, fostered by the state. An intelligent citizenship increases property values, enhances, as ignorance casts its blighting shadow over the state property values shrink. If you were to close the doors of the school houses in this state today and announce that it was to be the policy of the state in the future to turn its hand against education, property values would be cut in half tomorrow. Education is the one hope in sight for escape from socialism and anarchy, which has already made its appearance in portions of the United States and given notice that it is aroused and has a giant's strength.

Taxation the Life of the State.

The farmers of our constitution were wise when they said: "The right of taxation is a sovereign right, inalienable, indefeasible, the life blood of the state." You might as well expect the limbs of the body to retain their activity and perform their functions without your taking food, as to expect the body corporate, the state, to live without revenue. Without food the body weakens, withers and dies. Without taxation the state must withhold the administration of justice, and by word right and race would truly "be to the swift, and the battle to the strong."

The Legislature Acts.

The last legislature, realizing the state's financial condition, has made a start towards relieving it. The bill which has become law may not be perfect. Legislation rarely is. Where there are conflicting views of the legislators all legislation is more or less a compromise. We will, as we proceed under the new act, note its defects, remedying them where possible, and administering the law in the spirit of absolute fairness. The local assessors to be appointed in the several counties of the state should be men of the highest type. Men worthy to have and holding the respect and confidence of all the people of the county. The office of county assessor should be looked upon as carrying with it the gravest responsibility. It will be necessarily a hard office to fill. These officers are required to equalize taxes among the citizens of the county so that each man takes his part of the burden, no more, no less. They have the authority and it is their duty to see that the invisible property in the county is likewise placed on the tax digest. They have authority, and it is their duty, where property has not been returned for taxation, to examine and inquire of the taxpayer why the omission. Don't get mad with the local assessors. Remember they are your servants and working for your good. Hold up their hands. And the local assessor in the discharge of their duty should remember and appreciate the delicacy of the situation and do with the highest regard and consideration for the feelings of others. With the county board of assessors the success of this new law lies. Let them administer it in the spirit of Georgia's motto, with wisdom, justice and moderation. These are potent words, all three, but the soul of all moderation. Moderation combines wisdom and justice.

State Tax Commissioner.

The principal duty of the state tax commissioner is to equalize taxation among the counties. If one county should return like property similarly situated at a lower valuation than is returned in adjoining counties, to inquire into and see why the difference. If there is in fact no reason for the lower valuation, then to raise it on a parity with like property in the adjoining counties. There can be no objection to this. The rule which requires taxpayers of the county among themselves to be fair applies with equal force that the counties should be fair to the state. It is a fact that in Georgia there are at least 125 counties drawing more money annually from the state treasury than they pay into the treasury under the state's levy. This is mentioned as a fact but does not carry the implication that such counties are getting more than they are entitled to under the law, nor does it prove that those counties which pay into the treasury the money have done more than their share. There are local conditions in counties which make property more valuable in one than in the other. Even in a county property of the same nature may differ in value influenced by environment. This principle will be recognized in the administration of the law. It applies in administering equality between the counties of the state. Land in some localities in Georgia is sold by the acre or lot, and in others it is sold by the foot. It is the environment which reflects values and makes a difference in similar property differently located.

The Conclusion.

I have already spoken longer than I intended. I am deeply interested in this work. Speaking frankly in conclusion, I feel that I and you and the other citizens of this state have not been exactly fair with the state. We have allowed a false sentiment to overcome her good name. We forgot for the time being that "a good name is better to be desired than great riches" applies with equal force to a sovereign state as to an individual. The state's good name is her best asset. It should be kept unblemished. It is the duty of every citizen to seek to preserve it with all of his might and to defend it if he be necessary with his life. His money and his life should be held subsidiary to the state. Let us feel and act as the Virginian did standing on the dock at Hampton Roads witnessing the world's display of battleships, holding by the hand his young boy who evinced the greatest interest in the grand spectacle, asked his father, as he pointed to the passing ships of the world, "Pa, is it from and whose flag does it display. The father answered, "It is the flag of the King of England." "And whose flag is that?" asked the boy as the Japanese ship passed. "The emperor's flag," he replied. "And whose flag is this?" "The czar's flag," as the Russian boat went by. And then there hove in sight a dreadnought, carrying at its mast-head "Old Glory," and the boy with eagerness asked, "Whose flag is that, father?" The old Virginian straightened himself to his full height, and, raising his hat in love and reverence, said, "My son, that's OUR flag." So let us feel towards Georgia. THIS IS OUR GEORGIA.

NEW COLUMBUS HOTEL WILL COST $250,000

Columbus, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—Bids are now being invited for the erection of the new quarter-million-dollar hotel by the Columbus, Ga., Hotel company. The plans have been completed by the architects, Ludlow & Peabody, of New York, and the preliminaries have all received attention. It is expected that the contract will be awarded in a short time.

The building will be eight stories high, of steel and concrete. It will be erected at the northeast corner of Twelfth street and Second avenue, convenient to both the business section and the union passenger station.

This has been a banner year in Columbus for the building of homes. More residences have been erected here since January 1 than in quite a number of years. The older sections of the city are built up rather solidly, and most of the new residences are in the suburban sections. The number of handsome bungalows is a conspicuous feature of the building. Wynnton, Rose Hill and East Highlands have all been building centers during the summer months.

Advice to Those Who Have Lung Trouble

Pulmonary Lung Trouble is said to be curable by simply living in the open air and taking an abundance of fresh eggs and milk. Do all you possibly can to add to strength and increase weight, eat wholesome, nourishing food and breathe the cleanest and purest air, and then, if health and strength do not return, add the tonic and beneficial effects of Eckman's Alterative. Read what it did in this case:

"Gentlemen: In January, 1909, I was taken with hemorrhages of the lungs. I took eggs and milk in quantities, but got no cure, and Mr. A. Lipsomb, my employer (Lipsomb & Co., Department Store, 206 to 214 Market street, Wilmington, Del.) recommended to me Eckman's Alterative, and upon his suggestion I began taking it at once. This was about June, 1909. I continued faithfully, using no other remedy, and finally noticed the clearing of the lungs. I firmly believe Eckman's Alterative saved my life."

(Affidavit) JAS. SQUIRES.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' Drug Stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

Gossip of Georgians in the Metropolis

(By R. S. Carraway, The Constitution's New York Bureau.)

New York, August 23.—(Special.)—In view of the division of opinion which still has been displayed this month, as to the probable course of American business affairs, and of American prosperity generally, this autumn, The New York Evening Post has made telegraphic inquiry from a number of merchants and financial correspondents all over the United States, as to just what their individual expectation is. Until a month ago predictions were generally gloomy. There was a wide spread belief that the tariff changes would seriously hurt the autumn trade. There was also great uncertainty as to what would be the state of the money market—an uncertainty which, at one time, went so far as to cause prediction of another panic.

The questions telegraphed by The Evening Post to interior merchants asked for a frank expression of opinion on the autumn outlook. The replies indicate a strong consensus of opinion that the good points far overtop the bad, and that a prosperous season is ahead of us.

John Silvey & Co., of Atlanta, sent this message: "Business outlook in Georgia is unusually good. We notice steady improvement in trade at present, and we look for this to continue during the fall. It is our opinion that the corn crop and money market will not to any extent interfere with business in this section. Crops have been made on an economical basis. Secretary McAdoo's offer to the banks of the south is very helpful."

George W. Tideman, one of Savannah's largest merchants, had this to say:

"In this section the business outlook is exceedingly bright for fall business. The cotton crop indicates a yield about normal, and of good quality. Most of our farmers have made fairly good crops of corn and oats, and are in a position to feed their debts. Money in this section has been very tight all this year. Farmers and people generally have economized, and, in my opinion, after the marketing of this cotton crop, money conditions in this section will ease up very much."

C. G. Lambert, of Atlanta, who comes to New York every few months, says he is not in the habit of pardoning property belonging to hotels in which he stops, nor is he such a devoted student of the Scriptures that he feels he must carry about a Bible with him wherever he goes. But when Mr. Lambert arrived at the Hotel Imperial one day this week he called for the assistant manager, opened his suit case, and solemnly handed the other a book at which the manager recognized as one of the kind kept in every room of the hotel.

"I swipe it," said Mr. Lambert, "but inadvertently. I am not in the habit of stealing Bibles. I remember that when I left here the last time, some two months ago, I packed my bag in a hurry. This is about the size of my safety razor case, and I must have put it in without looking at it."

The Rev. Dr. C. B. Wilmer, of Atlanta, is expected to take an important part in the controversy in the Episcopal church over the proposal to change its name, when the triennial convention of Episcopalians is held in this city next month. Leaders in the movement wish to drop the name for any party in the Episcopal church, and to prevent an unseemly wrangle in the convention. It has been agreed that strictly speaking, only bona fide clergymen and eight laymen, shall carry on the debates, and Dr. Wilmer has been chosen as one of this number. Dr. Wilmer was leader of the Lows three years ago, and was among one of the first chosen to represent the debate against the change of name.

The Rev. James H. Owens, who for the past twenty years has been pastor of the Presbyterian church at Paterson, N. J., has accepted the call tendered to him by the congregation of the Vineville Presbyterian church in Macon. He will leave for the Georgia city about October 1.

Dr. Owens is brother-in-law of T. C. Parker, of Macon, and while on a visit in Macon the congregation of the Vineville church heard him and extended a call to assume the pastorate of the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Doughty announce the engagement of their daughter, Juliette Berry Doughty, to Hoxt Brown Evans, of New York, the wedding to take place in Louisville, Ky., in October. Mr. and Mrs. Doughty and their daughter formerly resided in Augusta, and Mr. Evans is the grandson of Edward J. Brown, of Atlanta, and a cousin of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. The marriage will unite two of the most prominent southern families.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Lasch, of Poughkeepsie, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Joan Lasch, to James Robert Walters, of Macon. The wedding will take place the latter part of this month at the home of the bride's parents in Poughkeepsie.

An interesting wedding will take place in Calvary church in this city some time next month, when Miss Madeline Downing, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Columbus Downing, of Brunswick, Ga., will be joined in wedlock to Raymond Demore Knight, of Jacksonville, Fla. The bride-to-be is now traveling in Europe, and upon her return will be met in New York by her fiance and many relatives and friends, and the wedding will be solemnized by the Rt. Rev. Alton Knight, of Cuba, brother of the bridegroom. A large delegation, of Brunswick, Savannah and Florida friends will come on to New York for the wedding.

Among the passengers sailing on board the liner America Wednesday was Max M. Lowenstein, of Atlanta, who will spend several months traveling in Europe.

Major Hall T. Graves, brother of Colonel John Temple Graves, will spend the remainder of the summer at Newport and Narragansett Pier, His father, General James Porterfield Graves, who has been his house guest for some weeks, will go to visit friends in Bar Harbor.

Mrs. J. E Delannoy and her sister, Mrs. J. A. Gross, of Savannah, have arrived in New York to visit their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Reither, in Brooklyn.

Miss Nellie Halle, of Savannah, arrived in New York Monday on her way to Connecticut to visit friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Lewis, of Thompson, Ga., are spending their honeymoon at the Hotel Shelbourne at Brighton Beach.

Mrs. James S. Wood, Miss Rosallind Wood and Radford Wood, of Savannah, arrived in New York Monday, and after spending several days in the city left for Lake George to spend the remainder of the summer.

Miss Claudia Lancaster of Macon is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Benner, at their home in East Orange.

Buyers continued to flock to the Metropolis during the present week, and Georgia, as usual, was well represented. The manager of one of the large hotels yesterday placed a conservative estimate on the number of out-of-town business men now in New York. He said fully eight thousand. The hotels where the buyers generally congregate, such as the McAlpin, Navarre, Grand, Albert, Victoria and Georgian, are turning away guests by the hundreds daily.

Shrewd, self-reliant and capable, these men have brought with them statistics on the crop conditions in the west and south, and they have decided views on the probable effect of the reductions in the tariff on business, the state of the money market, the significance of the pending currency bill and the peculiar needs of their home localities.

C. J. Bloodworth, of the Chamberlain, Johnson, DuBose Co., of Atlanta, who has been stopping at the McAlpin, explained the situation in Georgia to The Constitution's correspondent.

"The only thing I am considering in making my purchases," said Mr. Bloodworth, "is the crops. Business conditions in my state have not been as good as they might be, but the indications now are for a very good year. We depend very largely upon the cotton crop. My purchases are as large as they ever were, and we are expecting a year of good business. We have no fears whatever of the effect of the revision in the tariff."

Atlanta buyers in the city this week included: J. D. Bellah, J. E. Collier, Miss M. Brown and W. H. Brittain, for J. M. High & Co.; F. A. Sheran and Miss M. Cabannis, for M. Rich & Bros. Co.; J. F. Meador, for Meador-Cauthorn Co., and Miss A. W. Richards and Miss Esgriola, for Davison-Paxon Stokes Co.

From other Georgia points were: L. J. Hofmayer, Albany; B. R. Orr, L. Orr, Jr., and B. W. Boone, Newnan; H. M. Newman, Gainesville; L. Irvine, Macon; C. Kuhn, Jr., and Miss Judge, Savannah; C. P. Dismukes and J. A. Kirvin, Columbus; M. E. Kelly, J. A. Mullarkey, J. McElwee and C. W. Wise, Augusta.

Atlanta Has Royal Hosts At White Sulphur Springs

Greenbrier, White Sulphur Springs, August, 23.—(Special.)—Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, of Atlanta, entertained their daughter, Miss Margaret Grant, and the Georgia girls here, including the Misses Harriet Calhoun, Katherine Ellis, Martina Burke, Martha, Sue Phinizy, Nell Phinizy and Marguerite Wright at a lawn fete, which was followed by a cotillion when many beautiful favors were distributed. A buffet was served on the lawn under markees, before the company which numbered nearly 200, adjourned to the ballroom where dancing continued until long after sunset. The decorations were American Beauty roses and palms, which were banked high enough to obscure the walls, and screen the musicians. Mrs. James H. Preston, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Frank Ellis, of Atlanta, assisted Mrs. Grant at the fete table. Thomas B. Paine, of Atlanta; E Pendleton Turner, of Washington, and Jo Lane Sterne, of Richmond, led the cotillion figures.

All the prominent southerners here were invited to the Grant party.

The most attractive dinner given by Mr Stevens for the Misses Stevens, Young Moulton and Godwin was very attractive. The invitation list numbered very nearly 300, while only about half danced in the german, while the others occupied chairs arranged in semi-circles around the ballroom.

At the annual fancy dress dance for juniors on Tuesday evening the youngsters from Atlanta made a big hit. Some of those whose costumes attracted attention were Rankin Manley, clown; Doughty Manley, a daisy; Frances Ellis, morning star, and Valley Manley, Fannie Manley.

Evening Cotillion.

Probably the most attractive affair ever given here was the subscription cotillion of Monday night when the hosts included Thomas B. Paine, of Atlanta, who was the chairman of the committee, and the Messrs. Doughty Manley also of Atlanta; Billups Phinizy, of Athens, Ga.; Marion Wheatley, of Charleston, S. C.; Garrett B. Wall, Jo Lane Stern, Henry W. Anderson and John Aiken Branch, of Richmond and Mr. H. Snowden Marshall and Dr. John Herndon French, of New York.

The Messrs. Paine and Stern alternated in leading the figures which were unusually beautiful. During the seated supper which was served in the Grill at midnight before tangoing one stepping and "fish-walking" were resumed in the ballroom, toasts were drunk to the leaders and the hosts who had given a particular table in the middle of the room, which Madames Paine, Phinizy, Wall, Whaley, Marshall, Manley, and French, while the one hundred couples who danced and the honor guests, numbering fifty, were invited to see the affair, sat in congenial groups at small tables. Thomas Nelson Page, who arrived last Friday to attend the annual morning german given by George W. Sevens, for his daughter, Miss Helen Stevens, and her guests, the Misses Alice Young, Mary Moulton and Nan Godwin, was present. Miss Mary Curtis Lee came in with Mr. and Mrs. Decatur Axtell and joined the Chief Justice and Mrs. White at their table. Mrs. Lewis Buckingham, Mrs. John W. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. John Kerr Branch, Colonel and Mrs. James Ransom Branch, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Blain Elkins, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Cabaniss, Mrs. A. W. Calhoun, Mrs. Stephen Phinizy, Leon Phinizy, Mrs. Everett Coleman, Mrs. John Somerville, Mrs. John Chisholm, the Misses Whiting, Stevens, Moulton, Young, Torine, Orme, Haywood, Hearin, Branch, Allen, Bobb, Ross, Kohlaast, Burke, Ellis, Calhoun, Crail, Grant, Hamilton, Nott, Phinizy, Preston, Walters, Godwin, Foss, Lewis, Hathaway, Thom, Higgins, Helm, Roach, Hager and the Misses Hanewinckle, Ross, Birdsall, Gray, Cochran, Scovil, Blandy, Dunlap, Lewis, Haywood, Sams, Robinson, Ridgeley, Turner, Helm, Stevens, Dabney, Buckingham, Nottingham, Gilmore, W'Elmer, Stone, Hearin, Capito, Eskew, Lambert, Rumbolt, Lory, Hasell, Louise and Martha Dunlap, Henderson, Boyd, Royster, MacMullan and many others.

College Men to Organize for Woman Suffrage in Georgia

A group of college men, among the best-known young men of the state, will organize in favor of woman's suffrage, this fact made known at a meeting of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage association in Carnegie library Wednesday.

Mrs. M. L. McLendon introduced several young college men, the first speaker being Mr. Victor Victor, of Atlanta. He believed that suffrage was not the inalienable of right of either man or woman, nor was it a privilege. Much time had been lost by the suffragists in combatting the theory that the ballot in the home would be lost if women had the ballot, and by other fallacious arguments. Women should cease to beg for votes. If they would demand them they would be benefactors.

Student From Virginia.

The next speaker was Mr. Hewitt Chambers, a young student of the University of Virginia, who testified that he was a co-operator of women's suffrage, as were many of his fellow students. That women did not need sympathy, but assistance, and that is what the men they were fortunate to get Miss Jane Addams to lecture for the benefit of the public who know little about this great movement. That the men did the "hustling." Leagues had been organized at Harvard, Yale, Princeton and many other well-known universities and colleges. In Philadelphia there are four.

A Word From California.

A rising vote of thanks was given these young speakers by the audience for their interesting and instructive talks.

Dr. Grace Kirkland, formerly of Atlanta, but now of California, gave an amusing talk on the feeling the antis have in California when the "rascals" in their party now hear that some matter of importance in politics is pending. They almost collapse, and ask each other, "What are the women going to do to us now?" Many men who were against it now are glad, for the ballot means "Home," and that whenever a good measure is wanted to be carried they have the women's vote to carry it through.

Nothing terrible had happened because women could vote. They meet in their parlors and discuss what is best for man or woman, nor are they escorted by their husbands, who formerly were against it. Instead of the voting place being in the back of some garage it is now in some school house. Many women vote contrary to the other member of the family, and to their employer, there was no sex antagonism which was a good example for the daughters.

Charter Presented.

The most gratifying event that has happened to the association was the tending to it of the Georgia State association's charter by L. G. Grossman, its legal advisor. It is the first charter of its kind in Georgia. In delivering it Mr. Grossman paid a beautiful and deserved tribute to Mrs. McLendon for the noble and untiring work she had done for the cause of women.

At the close of the meeting Mrs. McLendon announced that there would be a state-wide rally for three days at Taft hall in September. They will be a suffrage meeting in the hall of representatives on Monday evening, September 1, to which the public is invited.

TWO MEN ARE BEATEN BY ENRAGED HUSBAND

Believing They Had Used Improper Language to His Wife, He Knocks Them Out.

While riding in his automobile by the corner of Whitehall and Mitchell streets Saturday night at 9:30 o'clock, with several of his officers as passengers, Chief Beavers noticed a crowd collected on the corner and stopped his machine to investigate.

T. J. Forrest, 607 South Ashy street, and W. L. Duncan, 14 DeSoto street, were found lying on the sidewalk badly beaten and nearly senseless. They did not know the name of the man who had attacked them, but stated that he had started in to beat them without any provocation whatsoever. According to the story told the officers by bystanders it appears that some man was walking down Whitehall street with his wife and heard some vile language used.

Apparently thinking that Forrest and Duncan were the men who did the swearing, the man struck first one and then the other with his fists, knocking them to the pavement, and then disappeared before the officers arrived on the scene. The two men were arrested and taken to police headquarters, where a charge of being drunk and disorderly was lodged against them when it was found that they had been drinking.

ARENDALE ARRESTED ON AN OLD CHARGE

Will Arendale, a white man, 25 years of age, was arrested Saturday afternoon for an offense committed three years ago. At that time Will Waldrop, a farmer, living near South River, Ga., was walking on a downtown street in Atlanta, and held a $20 bill in his hands. Some one snatched the bill from his hand and disappeared in the crowd. Arendale was arrested for the crime, and was positively identified by Waldrop as the man who snatched his money. In some way Waldrop's address was mixed up, and he was not notified when the case came to trial and Arendale was released.

Saturday afternoon Waldrop met Arendale, who was recently paroled from the chaingang, where he was serving a term for highway robbery, and immediately had him placed under arrest. Arendale will be given a hearing in the recorder's court Monday.

Jacobs' Drug Store Robbed.

Burglars entered the Jacobs drug store at Mitchell and Madison streets early Saturday morning and secured $22 from the cash drawer, according to a complaint lodged with the police Saturday afternoon. The burglary was effected by breaking the glass from the side door of the store. Nothing else was disturbed in the store, and absolutely no clue was left for the police to work upon.

PLAYGROUND RALLY EXERCISES SATURDAY

Grant Park Athletes Already So Far Ahead They Are Assured of Victory.

The remaining events on the program of the playground rally, begun Friday afternoon at the Grant park ball grounds, will be contested next Saturday afternoon, it is understood. On account of the time consumed with the first events, more than half of the contests had to be postponed, and must be decided before the championship of the city parks can be officially given to any one playground.

According to the records made Friday, the Grant park playground athletes are so far in the lead that it will be almost impossible for any other team to beat them to the handsome pennant which has been offered to the playground scoring the largest number of points in all of the contests.

The six playgrounds now stand as follows in the contest for the big flag: Grant park first, with a total of 50 points; Pine Hill second, score 15 points; Mims park third, score 11 points; Joyner park fourth, score 10 points, and English avenue fifth, with a score of 8 points. The field representatives of the Stewart avenue playground failed to score a single point in Friday's contests, and are hopelessly out of the race.

Keen disappointment was experienced by the witnesses of the exercises who gathered more than 500 strong, in spite of the rain which threatened all day, because of the postponement of the "Ace of diamonds folk dance," along with other numbers scheduled for Friday.

The events which were postponed and which will be contested on next Saturday are as follows:

Circle Lodge—Playground game in which selected teams from each of the parks will be pitted against each other.

Relay Race—To be contested by en runnersfrom e ach plaqground.

Rope-Jumping—Free-for-all contest.

Acrobatic Work—Boys of Pine Hill Against boys of Joyner park.

"Ace of Diamonds Folk Dance"—Three couples from each plakground.

Playground games—"Bum, Bum, Bum," by Pine Hill; "Slap Dare," by Stewart avenue; "How Do You Do?" by Grant park; "Three Deep," by Joyner park; "Whip to the Right," by Mims park; "Drop the Handkerchief," by English avenue.

The Fifth Regiment band, which furnished such excellent music for the exercises Friday, will again be engaged for the postponed events next Saturday.

W. T. Fields, Athens.

Athens, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—Just two weeks after his father was buried, W. T. Fields, a foundry man of Athens, weighing more than any other man in the county, with one exception, will be interred Sunday in Oconee cemetery.

GODBEE GAVE PROPERTY TO DAUGHTER MAGGIE

Deed of Estate to Child by First Wife Eliminates Contest Over Will.

Savannah, Ga., August 23.—(Special.) Visions of a hand-fought legal battle over the estate left by Judge Walter S. Godbee, who, with his wife, Mrs. Florence Boyer Godbee, was shot and killed Monday by Mrs. Edna Perkins Godbee, his former wife, vanished when it became known that in 1907 Judge Godbee deeded all of his property to Maggie Godbee, of Augusta, a daughter by his first marriage.

After temporary administrators had been appointed to take charge of the property of Judge Godbee and his murdered wife, all of the prospective heirs retained counsel. It was learned that a contest was imminent. Discovery that the property had been deeded to Miss Maggie Godbee, however, has largely put an end to the speculation, as some of the prominent lawyers here say it will be impossible to set aside the deed.

Leaped Far to Death.

Chicago, August 23.—A man believed to have been Henry Koethagan, a painter, jumped to his death today from the roof of the 19-story Masonic temple. The body landed among persons thronging State street, but none was hit.

CAMINETTI APPALLED AS HE THINKS OF FUTURE

Companion of Diggs Says That He Must Leave California.

San Francisco, August 23.—F. Drew Caminetti foresees a gloomy future. He professes not to be worrying over his approaching trial for alleged violations of the Mann act for which his companion, Maury I. Diggs, has been convicted, but he appears to be appalled by the prospect of trying to live down the scandal caused by his trip to Reno with Diggs, Marsha Warrington and Lola Norris.

"Suppose," he said today, "the indictments against me were dropped. What could I do? There is nothing in California for me—I must go where the name of Caminetti is unknown.

"When public opinion is against a man it is just about his finish. After I was indicted I went back to Sacramento and tried to get a job. I didn't care what kind of a job—anything to keep my mind off my troubles. But nobody would have me around.

"You think it's easy for me to see myself pointed out and whispered about? Well, it's not, and I have a hard time trying to appear as if I didn't mind it."

Caminetti denied that he had become reconciled with his wife. He said that they had had dinner at the same house once since he had been in San Francisco and that he had been once to play with his little daughter.

IN FIT OF JEALOUSY HE THROWS PEPPER IN EYES OF RIVAL

Columbus, Ga., August 23.—(Special.) In a fit of jealousy, it is alleged, Cooper Oliver threw a handful of pepper into the eyes of Louis Greer this afternoon during the course of a heated argument. The two at the time were at their boardinghouse kept by Mrs. M. Norris. It is said they are both very fond of their boarding-house keeper, and that it was due to jealousy on this account that the pepper was thrown.

Oliver was placed in jail on a disorderly conduct charge, while Greer was placed in the hands of a physician, who picked the pepper from his eyes. He has suffered a great deal from the effects of it.

First Bale in Wilkes.

Washington, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—The first bale of cotton of the 1913 crop was marketed Thursday by H. L. Aycock and his son, who produced a bale of good middling cotton weighing 420 pounds, for which they received 13 cents per pound. Wilkes county's first bale this year was just one week earlier than the initial bale last season, despite the prediction that the crop would be fully two weeks later in moving this year than it were in 1912.

THE SOUTHERN STATES LIFE ANNIVERSARY CLUB ADJOURNS

Sixth Annual Meeting of the Leading Producers in This Strong Southern Company. Every Man Has Written Over $100,000 Worth of Business in the Past Year. Many Fine Papers Read.

Over One Hundred Prominent Guests Attend Brilliant Banquet at Hotel Ansley Last Night—Speaker Burwell, Hon. Cyrus B. Brown of Alabama, Hon. W. S. Witham and Clark Howell Among the Speakers.

Believing in the old song, "Always Leave Them Laughing When You Say Good-Bye," W. S. Witham, the well-known farmer and financier, brought the Sixth Annual Convention of the Anniversary Club of the Southern States Life Insurance Company to a close, when, at the Hotel Ansley last night, he responded to the toast, "A Toast, Like a Text, Is Given to Talk From."

Toasts Delivered.

Clark Howell, Speaker W. H. Burwell of the House of Representatives, Hon. Cyrus B. Brown of Alabama, and the officers of the Anniversary Club were the speakers at this brilliant gathering.

The first session of the Sixth Convention of the Anniversary Club met on Friday morning at the Hotel Ansley, with large attendance, and one of the most interesting sessions in the history of this splendid organization was held.

Strong Membership.

Its membership is composed of those agents of the Southern States Life Insurance Company who have produced over $100,000 worth of paid-for business during the twelve months, which ends June 30.

President Wilmer L. Moore, of the Southern States Life Insurance Company, extended cordial greetings to the Club and congratulated them upon the splendid showing they had made and upon the wonderful beginning for the next year, as the July business was a record month for production in the history of the Company.

Offices Are Won.

Office is won, not given, in this Club, and the agent who produces the most business is automatically elected President. The runner-up is Vice President, and the leading producers in each state are State Vice Presidents.

J. C. Walden, State of Alabama, produced the most business, and was installed as President. J. R. Williams, of South Carolina, followed a close second, and was installed Vice President.

The leaders in each state were named as Vice Presidents as follows: T. Peters, Jr., for Georgia, B. B. Murray for Florida, H. Clay Smith for Alabama, G. J. McDowell for South Carolina.

The other members of the Club to qualify were H. N. McAfee of Georgia, a member for six years; H. Willis Hogg of Georgia, a member for three years; J. T. Weems of Georgia, the oldest member of the agency force of the Company in point of service, for the sixth time; Fred Hines of South Carolina, for the fifth time, and L. E. Black, Jr., C. S. Gurr and J. R. Munroe for the first time.

Vinson is Absent.

Joe W. Vinson, of Georgia, whose absence from the meeting owing to illness is greatly regretted by all present, completes his fifth year of membership. He also signalized his intention of making his election for next year sure by not only leading the agency force in the month of July, but by beating his own and all other previous records of written business in any one month, and thereby establishing a high mark for agents to aim at.

Brief addresses were delivered to the Club by the President and Vice President of the Club.

Moore Re-Elected.

Robt. F. Moore, Agency Secretary, was unanimously re-elected Secretary of the Anniversary Club, which position he has held with credit since the beginning of the organization.

Following the roll call of the Anniversary Club, badges and certificates were distributed, after which the first "Keystone Degree" was conferred.

"New Policy" was the subject of an interesting paper by Supervisor of Agents W. S. McLeod, which was followed by discussion and questions.

Agency Secretary Robt. F. Moore followed, with an interesting paper on "Items of Expense Charged to First Year's Business—Economy, What It Means to the Agent and the Policyholder." His paper was followed by discussion and questions.

The photograph of the Anniversary Club, which appears on this page, was taken, after which the Club was entertained at luncheon at the Capital City Club by President Moore. Friday afternoon the Club attended the baseball game and Friday evening occupied boxes at the Forsyth theater.

The concluding session of this interesting convention was held on Saturday morning, at which time a symposium of talks, entitled "Confidential Chats With Medical Department," was participated in by E. M. Veatch, Dr. Gaines, Dr. W. S. Kendrick and Samuel Barnett, Actuary. This was followed by discussion and questions.

Strong Address.

"The Company's Method of Payment of Death Claims—What It Should Mean to the Supervisor, the Agent, the Company and the Beneficiary," was delivered by Supervisor Frank E. Brodnax. This was followed by a discussion on the analysis of this subject under the following heads: (1) "Bankers' Agents Contracts," (2) "Local Advertisement," (3) "Draft on Local Bank" and (4) "Follow Up of Prospects From Payment."

J. E. McLaughlin, Director of the Metropolitan Agency, followed with an interesting talk on "Systematic Following-up of Prospects."

A symposium of actual experience by all agents came next and the formal addresses of the convention were concluded with a most interesting address by Hon. Hervey W. Laird, former Assistant Insurance Commissioner of Alabama, and now Assistant to President Wilmer L. Moore.

Entertained at Luncheon.

The Club was entertained at luncheon at the Hotel Ansley and again attended the baseball game in the afternoon.

The banquet at the Hotel Ansley last night was probably the most brilliant gathering held in the history of the Club and of the hotel.

Over 100 guests were entertained. The colors of the Southern States Life Insurance Company—Red, Blue and White—and the Keystone Arch, the insigna of the Company, were carried out in the flowers, lees and placecards.

Moore Presided.

President Wilmer L. Moore presided as toast master and introduced speakers. J. C. Walden, Sr., President of the Club, was the first, and his response to the toast, "The Anniversary Club, the Top Rung," was warmly received.

He was followed by J. R. Williams, Vice President, whose subject, "The Southern States Life—Confidence Begets Loyalty," was handled in a splendid manner.

G. J. McDowell, a member of the Anniversary Club, and a familiar speaker at these banquets, responded to the toast, "The Keystone Degree—An Incentive to Work."

Speaker W. H. Burwell, of the General Assembly of Georgia, delivered a splendid toast in response to President Moore's cordial introduction on "Success Is Measured by Ambition."

He was followed by Hon. Clark Howell, who responded to the toast, "Civic Duties—Every Man Has His Part."

Hon. Cyrus B. Brown, Assistant Commissioner of Insurance for the State of Alabama, represented that commonwealth, and responded to the toast, "Alabama—Her Part in the Nation's Progress."

Witham Concludes.

Hon. W. S. Witham concluded the evening's gaiety with a wonderful potpourri when he was presented to his hearers with the following title for his toast, "A Toast, Like a Text, Is Given to Talk From."

ROBERT F. MOORE,
Secretary.

ATLANTA'S STRIDES FROM DAY TO DAY

All the News of Real Estate and Building.

The old adage to the effect that "it is an ill-wind that blows nobody good" is true in the south at this season of the year. While the crop conditions of the west and southwest are appalling on account of their poor condition, the south, and Georgia in particular, is preparing to reap the benefits of the bumper crop of years.

The average droughts in Texas and Oklahoma have practically reduced these states' crops to nothing. A portion of the delta country has experienced the boll weevil with severe effects, but none of these conditions have been apparent east of the Mississippi.

Georgia boasts the best corn crop in years, her crops were never so diversified before, and King Cotton will be heard from in Georgia as one of the record crops of the years.

This, combined with the bad luck of the west, will boost prices high, oversteps sky and in return, will bolster up the financial situation of Georgia.

And with the addition of the government funds to move the crops, Georgia should enter such an era of prosperity not seen for several years.

Faith in the brightening of the situation is shown by the fact that the big eastern and southern insurance companies are turning loose their money on easier terms than for some months past.

The outlook in the city's real-estate field is promising. Building activity is brisk, more structures are being put up than at any time during the past summer months, and with the opening of the fall rental season, good times and easier money are promised.

Ansley's Farm Sales.

One of the most unique auction sales ever held in Georgia will occur at Dakota, Turner county, on August 28, at 10 o'clock in the morning, when the Edwin P. Ansley agency will offer to the highest bidders sixty small farms in that fine farming section of the country.

The terms on the land will be only ten per cent down, with from one to five years to pay the balance. This will give an opportunity to many men to own their own farms, who never before could have done so.

Nearly every farm has good improvements, and sufficient cleared land to begin the new crop with high class farming. Wood and water are sufficient on each tract to meet necessary requirements.

The town of Dakota is located practically in the center of the property, and good schools, churches, etc., are near at hand.

Phenix Investment Sale.

The Phenix Investment company has sold to Mrs. Emma E. LaHatte a lot at the corner of Washington and Bass streets, for a consideration of $14,250. This lot has a frontage of 52 feet on Washington street, and a depth of 150 on Bass street.

Ralph O. Cochran Notes.

The Ralph O. Cochran company has rented and leased the following places within the last few days:

For Mrs. Gertrude Ogletree to E. L. Parker, 129 Davis street; for Constantee and Trust Banking company to E. J. Coleman, 112 West Peachtree street; for Mrs. Susan Jones to Miss C. E. King, 249 Rawson street; for R. L. Crenshaw to W. S. Ellis, 122 Chestnut avenue; for J. A. Miner to T. L. Corbett, 34 Boulevard avenue; for O. B. Stevens to C. F. Wright, 212 West North avenue; for Dr. J. W. Roberts to O. B. Tanner, 557 Highland avenue; for Miss Ella C. Stevens to George Rucker, 219 Capitol avenue; for Miss Annie Jones to John Forlidas, 12 Alice street, and for J. C. & M. Oil Company to Mrs. G. L. Shinker, 188 West Peachtree street.

Wight Goes With Kiser.

George Wight, formerly with the Wight-Davis company, made a commission merchants, has gone with the M. C. Kiser Real Estate agency as a salesman.

Mr. Wight has done considerable dealing in the local real estate field from time to time, and is well versed on property values. He is well known in the city, has a host of warm friends and should prove a valuable addition to the Kiser agency.

Fall Prospects Good.

The L. P. Bottenfield agency reports the following sales of subdivision lots:

In Peachtree Highlands: Lot 8, block E, $950; lot 25, block E, $750; lot 17, block E, $800; lot 23, block E, $750.

In Clairemont park: Lot 2, block 7, $1,100; lot, 7, block 1, $1,200.

In Oakwood terrace: Lot 26, block 4, $400, and in Woodlawn park, lot 19, $800.

The outlook for a good business in all lines of real estate activity this

Unlike Bryan, British Cabinet Ministers Don't Have to Lecture

Advisers of the King of England Get Fat Salaries and Have a Lot of Fine Perquisites Besides—Homes Are Furnished Some Ministers.

(Copyright, 1913, by Curtis Brown.)

London, August 23.—Up to date, no cabinet minister in this country has threatened to go on the lecture platform on the ground that his official salary is inadequate to his needs, although the Rt. Hon. David Lloyd-George recently assured an investigation committee that he was a poor man on the $25,000 a year—or over twice as much as is paid to any member of President Wilson's official family—which he receives as chancellor of the exchequer.

Ministers of the crown over here are in receipt of salaries and enjoy "perquisites" which must make the mouths of American ministers water if they know about them. One of them draws an actual stipend of $50,000, or as much as the presidency of the United States was worth until a few years ago, while another gets $30,000 a year and fees in addition which more often than not amount to more than his official pay. Three others live rent-free, at the expense of the public, and one of these latter, the first lord of the admiralty, has at his disposal, besides a private yacht, which costs the British taxpayer something like $50,000 a year to keep up.

If William J. Bryan, for example, instead of being secretary of state for Uncle Sam, had Prime Minister Asquith's job, he would be earning more than three times his present salary, and would also enjoy, rent free, an uncommonly comfortable as well as historic official residence.

Normally an Unpaid Job.

The premiership of England, it is true, is an unpaid job, the only real perquisite in connection with it being its holder's privilege of occupying the famous mansion, No. 10 Downing street—now the goal of suffragettes and Scotch bailies—which often has been described, perhaps justly, as "the most interesting house in the world." Whoever becomes premier when a new administration comes into being, however, seldom contents himself with that office, but takes unto himself also the portfolio of some other minister of the crown, usually as in the case of Mr. Asquith or Mr. Balfour before him, that of first lord of the treasury, which carries with it the yearly emolument of 5,000 of the best," as they would say over here, meaning sovereigns, or, in our more democratic currency, $25,000 a year.

It must be a lot of satisfaction to be able to receive one's guests in a mansion that is absolutely unique—and unique of course, No. 10 Downing street is. Comparatively few persons in this country know, by the way, that the dingy little street in which this, to outward appearances, dingy little house stands, was built by and is named for an American in the person of one George Downing, a rather shady graduate of Harvard who flourished in the time of Charles II.; but such is the fact. As for No. 10, while far from being a palace, being renowned for its winding passages and funny little, old-fashioned rooms—in one of which Nelson and Wellington met for the first and only time, and another of which was Gladstone's favorite "den"—it boasts several superb apartments.

Chief of these is the famous banqueting hall that was built by William Pitt, and others, the historic old cabinet chamber—now used only for clerical work—with its long windows looking across the long garden terrace, the first lord's reception room, where the cabinet now meets, and the dining room and the cabinet room famous for its paintings and candelabra, which holds more than fifty lights.

Directly next door is No. 11 Downing street, an infinitely less luxurious and historic, but eminently comfortable house, where, rent free again, lives the chancellor of the exchequer. It is rather a striking coincidence, by the way, that Lloyd-George, who, like W. J. Bryan, has come to be regarded as the tribune and advocate of the "plain people" should, like his distinguished contemporary on the other side of the Atlantic, be the only member of the present cabinet to allege that his official salary is inadequate to his needs.

The Best Feathered Nest.

Of all the well-rewarded members of the British cabinet the first law officer of the crown, Sir Rufus Isaacs, has the best feathered nest. To begin with, he draws a salary of $53,000 a year, as compared with the $12,000 with which Attorney General McReynolds is rewarded yearly, this sum, moreover, being his emolument merely as legal advisor to the government. Unlike the American attorney general, he also appears in the courts on behalf of the crown and gets whopping big fees for so doing. Of course the yearly aggregate of these fees varies according to the number of cases in which the first law officer of the crown is engaged, but they invariably amount to enough, plus the attorney general's official salary, to enable the government to get a man at the top of his profession for the post.

Sir Rufus Isaacs, present attorney general, is, for example, one of the ablest of English barristers and more than given up practice as K. C., or King's counsel, worth from $150,000 to $250,000 a year, to accept the attorney generalship. Last year, which brought with it the long-drawn-out Titanic investigation, the state prosecution of Mrs. Pankhurst and the Pathick Lawrence, the Olympic-Hawke collision case and the suit for $100,000,000 brought against the government by the National Telephone company, was a rich one for the attorney general, who pocketed, in fees and "refreshers" between January 1 and December 31, the goodly sum of £9,764, or just short of $50,000, which makes his annual income work out at a little less than $80,000. For his appearances in the Titanic inquiry alone, Sir Rufus Isaacs received £2,438, or, roughly, $12,200, this sum representing a brief fee of 500 guineas, or $10,000, and "refreshers" at the rate of 50 guineas, or $250 a day.

THE LORD CHANCELLOR—LORD HALDANE AND PRIME MINISTER ASQUITH.

DRAWING ROOM AT 10 DOWNING ST. WHERE THE PRIME MINISTER LIVES RENT FREE.

A PUNCH CARTOON OF WINSTON CHURCHILL AND PRIME MINISTER ASQUITH.

Big Salary and Fees.

The second law officer of the crown, officially known as the solicitor general, gets a salary of $30,000, and—like his distinguished chief—fees. Those getting the present incumbent of the post, Sir John Simon, amounted last year to $32,075. Like the attorney general, the solicitor general sits in the house of commons and in the absence of his chief, or during a vacancy, he may perform the functions of attorney general in all their extent.

Legal luminaries are well recompensed the world over, and the members of the British cabinet with the fattest official salary, or "screw" as it is colloquially termed over here, is that distinguished if not picturesque personage, the lord chancellor. DeWolf Hopper has been taking him off quite latterly in the American rival of Iolanthe, into which opera with characteristic irreverence, W. S. Gilbert, himself an ex-barrister, introduced the dignified equipment of the famous Woolsack in the house of lords. In the United States, we have no exact counterpart of the lord chancellor who, besides acting as speaker of the upper house, is supreme head of the English judiciary and who draws an annual salary of $50,000. When he retires, moreover, he immediately enters upon a life annuity amounting to $25,000 a year. The present holder of this office is, of course, Lord Haldane, who was secretary of state for war before his elevation to the Woolsack, and who is crossing the Atlantic next month to be present, by special invitation, at the great gathering of the American Bar association, which is to be held in Montreal.

He Has No Snaps.

Nobody ever has accused the lord chancellor of having a snap. Besides sitting, clad in wig and gown, on the Woolsack as speaker of the house of peers, he sits as a judge in that house in the privy council, the court of appeal and the chancery division of the high court of justice. He has the appointment of all judges of the superior courts, except the lord chief justice, who is nominated by the prime minister. Incidentally—owing to the fact that the lord chancellor of days gone by was an ecclesiastic—the present one controls no end of ecclesiastical "patronage" in the shape of crown livings, and he is supposed to be the general protector of all infants, idiots and lunatics and has the supervision of all the charities of the kingdom.

Perhaps most important of all the lord chancellor's functions, however, is his custodianship of the great seal of England. This seal, the specific emblem of sovereignty, is attached only to the most important class of public documents, such as writs summoning parliament, treaties, and official acts of state. A new one is made for each sovereign, the old one being solemnly broken, and this seal is delivered to the lord chancellor on his appointment and relinquished by him on his retirement (he resigns when the party of which he is a member goes out of office.) Never, in fact, is the lord chancellor supposed to let the great seal go out of his possession, and this was Lord Haldane's chief difficulty in accepting the recent invitation to visit America. It has, however, been solved by reverting to an ancient custom, which consisted of putting the seal into commission, as the phrase goes—i. e., appointing certain commissioners to administer it during the lord chancellor's absence from the realm.

"Rules of King's Navie."

If there is no counterpart in the American cabinet for the lord chancellor, neither is there an exact one for the first lord of the admiralty or the "ruler of the king's navy," as W. S. Gilbert, who was fond of poking fun at high dignitaries, called him. As a matter of fact, however (and here's where the Anglo-Saxon love of office and the U. S. A. American secretary of the navy), the first lord is not actually the "ruler" of Britain's sea forces. That post goes to the navy man the lord high admiral, who no longer exists, but whose ancient office is in commission," to use the phrase once more—the commissioners in this case consisting of the first lord of the admiralty and four sea lords, in the person—at present—of one admiral and vice-admiral and two rear admirals of the fleet, who each gets 1,500 pounds or $7,500 a year—all, that is (excepting the third sea lord, Rear Admiral Briggs, who is also comptroller and receives $7,750.

The first lord of the admiralty, as a political officer, can make suggestions to the sea lords, but he cannot order a change of policy on their part. If he tries to they resign, and there is no end of a pother! The first lord now, of course, the Right Hon. Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill, gets $12,500 a year, and has the use, as a residence, of the Admiralty building itself, which contains, among other handsome apartments, the finest private ballroom in London. This, by the by, is the only one of the rooms at the Admiralty which the present first lord, who has a house in Eccleston square, utilizes personally, the other having been turned over to the clerical force of the department.

"Enchantress" for a Perquisite.

Winston Churchill makes frequent use, however, of that other "perquisite" of the first lord of the admiralty, the steam yacht "Enchantress," on which he and the prime minister recently returned from a cruise in the Mediterranean. "Punch" had an amusing cartoon showing them lolling back in deck chairs, imbibing cooling drinks, and commiserating their less fortunate colleagues in London with "votes for women" fanatics, strikers and various colored "perils" on their hands.

The "Enchantress," which was built at Belfast, in 1894, does not compare, of course, with the "floating palaces" of some American and other millionaires, but she is a mightily comfortable craft, which carries a crew of 193 officers and men, and costs a little over $45,000 a year to maintain. The "Enchantress" is at the service of the first lord whenever he wants her, and Churchill has wanted her often, but every effort, and they have been many, that has been made in parliament to convict him of making pleasure cruises at the public expense has resounded boomerang-like on the head of its sponsor. Quite recently, in fact, Churchill, goaded at last into making a detailed reply to his inquisitors, not only admitted that he had not entertained private guests on the Enchantress," he had paid for them out of his own pocket, but demonstrated that the official visits of inspection paid by him to different departments of the fleet had exceeded both in number and in their usefulness those of any first lord of recent years, this vindication of his administration being greeted with cheers from all parties in the house.

"PEACH" OF A DANCER FOR UNITED STATES

Lydia Kyasht, Who Followed Genee in London, Signed by American Manager.

London, August 16.—America as captured another London possession. It is now some years since Klaw & Erlanger slipped behind the wings of the Empire theater here and coaxed Genee's signature to a three years' contract at five times the salary she was receiving in the Leicester Square house. We have never forgiven the American managers for that. How great an asset Genee was few of us realized until she had left and we attempted to fill her pink silk hose. The Empire has never recovered from her loss, and ed. it has almost deserted ballet for the more popular revue, with indifferent success.

She Followed Genee.

When Genee left, Lydia Kyasht, the first of the Russians to visit London, stepped into the gap. But although she is a splendid dancer, she never seemed to reconcile the Empire regulars to the loss of their darling Genee. After all, it is a difficult task to follow the finest of the world's dancers.

I do not think that Lydia has been by any means happy at the Empire. To be sure she has been seen now and then in "interludes," but that is somewhat of a tonogram for a premiere danseuse who has been in the habit of occupying the place of honor in the evening's bill.

The condition of affairs—and another—made Lydia lend her ear to offers of seasons in the United States. The other we be coming to presently. Her contract at the Empire runs out at the end of the year and quite naturally she gently but firmly stated that seven seasons of one she was entitled to a generous boost. The management could not see its way clear to meet the wishes of the lady in question, so Lydia appended her sign and seal to the contract of the American manager.

Why She is Famous.

Lydia Kyasht has aspirations to be another Pavlova, as have, I suppose, countless other dancers with much less ability back of them. She is really a very finished dancer with a technique possessed by few performers. Moreover, she is one of the most beautiful of the many girls who depend primarily up the activity of their feet, legs and arms for their livelihood. In face and in form she is what used to be known in the United States as "a peach," but which probably is by this time known by some even more expressive term.

Lydia was married before she came to the Empire; otherwise it is safe to say, she would have fascinated a coronet or two and captured one for keeps long before this time. But beauty is not everything in the stage, and Lydia lacked that distinctive personality which is the great charm of Genee and Pavlova, and without which the highest places in popular favor are denied to a performer. However, she is coming to see you next January for a six months' season, so you can check what I have said.

Germany and Prussia Are Constantly Fighting

Quarrel Is One Between Country and Town, Agriculture and Industry, Land and Sea—Prussia Keeps the Upper Hand.

Reactionary Party Runs Prussia, and Almost Runs Germany—Prussia Likes a Large Army, But Dislikes Navy.

(Copyright 1913, by Curtis Brown.)

Berlin, August 23.—Prussia is victorious in another round of her secular fight with Germany. The recent Diet elections ended without any material party change. The solid Conservative party, which is the bulwark of Prussian hegemony in Germany, came back nearly as strong as it started, and its center ally came back actually as strong. In the old Diet the Conservatives had 215 members out of 443, so that they lacked only seven for an absolute majority. In the new Diet they have 208. The 105-strong Catholic center, which tradition declares cannot be changed in strength, confirmed the tradition by returning with 102. The National-Liberal gained a few seats, and the Socialists who started with six members have now ten. But roughly, Prussia's Diet retains the party division which were established nearly thirty years ago. For practical purposes it is a Conservative Diet. And the meaning of that is that Prussia, which is essentially the Conservative state, will continue to rule all Germany, and to baffle all efforts to modernize and liberalize the German constitution.

Prusso-German Fight.

Briefly stated, the battle fought at all such elections is a fight between Prussia and Germany. It is this unceasing fight which, more than any factor, explains the complete consolidation of the empire. The states of Germany and the mass of Prussians themselves resent the domination of Prussia in imperial councils. A certain domination, they admit, is inevitable because Prussia owns 134,558 of the empire's 208,780 square miles, and 40,165,000 of the 64,925,000 population. But the perils of too much Prussian domination were suggested by Bismarck himself, though he was devised special safeguards in order to prevent Prussia from ever becoming really the dominant partner. He based the Reichstag on universal suffrage, thus putting a democratic counterpoise to the bureaucratic Prussian state. He gave public assurances to Bavaria and Saxony that the rights of the separate states would be respected, and he laid down financial rules to prevent the states feeling their association with Prussia to be a burden. Despite Bismark's measures, not one of these questions is finally settled. Prussia—by which is meant the dominant Prussian Tories—openly shows her desire to abolish universal suffrage which she sees is responsible for a socialist Reichstag, and to replace it with a property franchise like her own. The separate states are persistently chafing at alleged incursions into their domains by the empire, and Bismarck's financial principles are being thrown overboard. And all this makes for a Prussian hegemony which forty years ago was so little in men's mind that Bavaria seriously proposed that the imperial crown should belong alternately to Prussia and to herself.

Prussia is unpopular with Germany. This does not mean merely in the non-Prussian states, but throughout the whole entity known as the empire, including Prussia herself. Probably jibes and jeers at Prussia are used more often by Prussians than by non-Prussian Germans. In the Prussian diet the word "Prussian" was last year used as an abusive epithet; the left parties when they desire to stigmatize any act or law as reactionary call it "Prussian," and for rough police methods know one "Prussian" is the word "Simplicissimus" and other political comic journals make bitter war on "Prussian" "Prussianism," as an all-German grievance, sometimes comes before the non-Prussian diets. In Saxony the issue of "Prussia or Germany" was openly raised in the diet, in the sense of despotism versus free government. And often Prussia's politics and the ideals of Prussian conservatives give an excuse for this reasoning.

Prussia's internal policy, compared with the policies of the south German states, is distinctly retrograde. In south Germany progress has gone so far that even the social-democrats are making peace with the government. Where Prussia has influence on the small states it is always of a reactionary character. She lends reactionary ministers to these small states, and sometimes borrows reactionary ministers from them. The present state's ministers, Schwarzburg Rudolstadt, is one of Germany's socialist diet majority, and the present Prussian Minister of Interior, Dallwitz, are cases in point. Prussia's Agrarian-Conservatives who fill all ministerial and high administrative posts are Prussian in spirit and are indifferent to the imperial idea. They are, in the old German sense, "Particularists." Their ideal is an Agrarian territorial state with a big army, which will provide officers' posts for their sons and buy at high prices their horses and grain. For manufactures, commerce, finance and the fleet they have no understanding—these things they regard as Jewish innovations; and being anti-Semites to a man, they have no room for such innovations.

Country Against Town.

The quarrel between Prussia and Germany is a quarrel between country and town, between agriculture and industry, between land and sea. Prussia is unfriendly to the fleet, and resents the manner in which Kaiser Wilhelm has backed it up. When Kaiser Wilhelm first publicly appeared in naval uniform, and thereby violated the Prussian tradition that the sovereign should always appear as a soldier, a courtier who could afford to take liberties, looked at him surprise. "What's the matter, Prince?" asked the Kaiser. The courtier's lips twisted into inexpressible irony, and he answered: "Oh, nothing! I suppose Majestat has been at the aquarium." To such Prussians Wilhelm II. is too German. Not only has he created the fleet, but he has made friends with commerce, liberated high finance and become bosom friend of Ballin, Rathenow, Simon and other Jewish merchant princes. In these respects the Kaiser is a German rather than a Prussian, and Prussians of the old school condemn him as a backslider.

But that is only in politics. In personal matters the kaiser backs the Prussian idea against the German. He has given the Prussian Crown Prince the right of leadership given by the constitution to the king of Prussia, and he has injured the imperial idea by his collision with other courts. For years Wilhelm II. was on bad terms with the late Bavarian prince regent; he quarreled openly with the court of Lippe, and strained his rights (Lanne as commander-in-chief of the army) and he lately had a quarrel over court etiquette questions with the young duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha. The larger German states have more than once privately protested against unjustified pretensions of the court of Prussia. At present the leader in this protest is the new Bavarian Prince Regent Ludwig. Ludwig's distrust of Prussia's pretensions has always been marked, and seventeen years ago he showed this distrust publicly. This was during the coronation of Czar Nicholas, when at a Moscow banquet a careless speaker implied that the German representatives present were sent by the kaiser. "Let me make clear to the speaker," said Ludwig sharply, "that the German sovereigns are allies of the king of Prussia and not the king of Prussia's vassals."

Why the Germans Complain.

Germans complain that Prussia's leadership in legislation goes far beyond the leadership provided for by the constitution. The constitution recognizes a Prussian veto in certain legislative branches, but nothing more. Prussia elects 236 members to a reichstag of 397; but in the federal council she has only 17 representatives out of 61. To balance this weakness in the federal council Bismarck claimed for Prussia the right to veto new laws concerning army, navy, taxation and tariffs. He claimed nothing more. The practice, however, has grown up of taking Prussian initiative into council before imperial bills are submitted to the legislatures. Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg last March admitted

To Discard Freckles, Tan, Pimples, Wrinkles

(From Feminine World.)

The use of cream on the face sometimes causes hair to grow. You can avoid the risk of acquiring superfluous hair by avoiding cosmetics and using mercolized wax instead. There is nothing better for any condition of the skin, as the wax actually absorbs the offensive cuticle. The latter is naturally pale, of course, smooth and healthy complexion, full of life and expression. Use the sensible way to discard a sick, sallow, freckled, blotchy or pimpled skin. Get an ounce of mercolized wax and druggists and apply nightly like cold cream, erasing in the morning with soap and water. Let take a week or so to complete the transformation.

The ideal wrinkle eradicator is made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. Bathing the face in the solution brings almost instantaneous results.—Adv.

SOCIAL LIFE IN MACON

Macon, Ga., August 23.—(Special Correspondence.) — Two weddings broke into the quiet of last week's social life, and while they were neither one large affairs, they were of widespread interest to the many friends of the popular young people. The first, which united in marriage Miss Ethel Ruth Davis and Mr. Harry Andress, of New York, occurred Monday evening at 8:30 o'clock at Lakeside, the suburban home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. W. A. Scott. The home was attractively decorated in white roses and ferns. Rev. William Burke was the officiating clergyman. The twin sisters of the bride, Misses Caro and Susie Davis, were the only attendants, both wearing dainty white lingerie gowns made over white charmeuse and carrying armeful of pink gladioli. The bride, who is a beautiful young woman with rich brunette coloring, was lovely in white crepe meteor, hand-embroidered in roses and trimmed with exquisite lace. Lilies of the valley held the bridal veil in place and showers of the same fragrant blossoms with white roses composed her bouquet. Only the relatives and a few close friends were present, and after the informal reception which followed the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Andress left for Savannah, sailing from there to New York to spend some time in the Catskill mountains. After September 15 their residence will be 4320 Maryland avenue, St. Louis.

The marriage of Miss Ruth Patillo and Dr. Thomas Hardeman Clark, of Leesburg, took place Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Patillo, on High street. The drawing room, where the ceremony was performed by Rev. W. N. Ainsworth, was artistically decorated with white flowers and palms and ferns, the improvised altar of white roses in tall floor vases and feathery ferns being lighted on either side by tapers in cathedral candlesticks. The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Maude Patillo. Mr. Robert Heath, of Leesburg, was the groom's best man. The bride was stylishly gowned in a black and white traveling suit trimmed with cut velvet, hat, a black Fallin toque, trimmed with white aigrettes. Her flowers were a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid wore white charmeuse draped in embroidered voile and carried a basket of pink roses tied with pink tulle. Misses Genevieve and Constance Smith, on the piano and violin, played Mendelssohn's wedding march on the entrance of the wedding party and Schubert's "Serenade" during the ceremony. Light refreshments were served in the dining room, which was beautifully decorated with pink roses and smilax. Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mrs. Sidney Smith, Miss Genevieve Smith, Dr. and Mrs. Alexander. Miss Juliette Alexander and Gilbert Alexander, all of Forsyth; Messrs. Robert Heath and Robert Forrester, of Leesburg.

Miss Meta Schley, of Augusta, and Miss Marion Nicholson, of Athens, are being pleasantly entertained while guests of Mrs. Fred Waters. A most enjoyable affair given in their honor was a bridge party Friday afternoon at which Miss Anne Page Turpin was hostess.

Miss Claude Estes was hostess at an informal sewing party Monday morning complimentary to Miss Ruth Pender, of Forsyth, the charming guest of Miss Gladys Stone in Vineville. At 1 o'clock the guests adjourned from the shaded porch to the dining room, where a seated luncheon was served. Miss Ponder returned to her home in Forsyth.

Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Robert L. Smith entertained at a 42 party in honor of her guests, Miss M. A. Lindsey, of Atlanta, and Miss Gertrude Smith. Mrs. Smith was assisted in receiving her guests by Mrs. Shepherd, Mrs. G. T. Cunningham and Mrs. Church Berryman, and in serving by little Misses Helen Bramby and Consuelo Proudfit. The flowers used profusely in the various rooms were Japanese sunflowers and white clematis. Miss Bernice Wright rendered some delightful musical selections. There were five tables of players, the list of guests including Misses M. A. Lindsey, Genevieve Smith, Martha Andrew, Lucia Conn, Marguerite Sherman, Helen Freeman, Gertrude Hay, Carita Pendleton, Ruth Oberry, Elizabeth Riley, Addie Small, Elizabeth Baker, Mildred Sloan, Mary Maude Gibson, Adeline Small, Dora Dunwody, Annie Willingham, Ruth Adams and Bernice Wright.

Tuesday afternoon Mrs. C. E. Guilford entertained at auction bridge, her guests being the members of the Cherokee Heights Bridge club.

Miss Lenore Hunter, of Savannah, returned home Thursday after a delightful visit to Mrs. J. D. Comer. Among the pleasant affairs given in her honor was a dance last week at the Country club.

Major and Mrs. J. O. Varnedoe, of Valdosta, are guests of Miss Julia Rogers and Mr. W. R. Rogers on College street.

Mrs. T. C. Parker and Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Wheeless are at home after an extended trip west.

Mrs. Chester S. Johnson is in Gainesville, Ga.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Ramsey and M. A. Ramsey, Jr., are in Boston, Mass., for a couple of weeks.

Misses Annie and Lella Rogers, who have been traveling with some friends on the continent, will return to Macon about the first of September. Miss Annie Rogers will spend two weeks at home before leaving for Cincinnati.

Miss August Burghard spent Tuesday in Griffin with Mrs. T. E. Patterson.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Peavy and Mrs. Ira D. Greene left Wednesday for an auto trip through the mountains of north Georgia.

Washington Seminary

ITS BOARDING DEPARTMENT

In the formative period of the life of girls who are away from home at school, proper home influences must be exerted in the school. To meet this need, Washington Seminary, Atlanta, maintains a strictly limited boarding department for girls from thirteen to twenty years of age.

It provides for them an elegant home, as beautiful in all its appointments as the most expensive private residences. The rooms are large, nicely furnished, and almost all have private baths connecting.

Students and teachers live together as a family, under a family method of government, and the faculty is thus able to exercise a careful oversight of all the girls' interests—health, amusements, studies, and moral training.

PREMATURE GRAYNESS CAN BE AVERTED

THE hair turns gray because it has lost vitality, due to sickness, nervous strain, deficient nutrition and sometimes hereditel causes. To pull out the hairs when they begin to turn white is simply to enlarge the cells, coarsen the hair and cause it to whiten more quickly than if left alone.

The best and only satisfactory treatment for premature grayness is a pure, reliable hair restorative, such as Rehinsaire Hair Dye. This restorative is prepared in our own laboratory, a scientific formula, and we guarantee it to be non-injurious. It is not to bleach or change the original color, but is to restore faded or gray hair to its natural color and lost vitality. Its tonic effect makes the hair soft, lustrous and beautiful, and keeps it in a healthy condition. Does not stain the scalp and its use cannot be detected.

Don't let gray hair stand in your way either in the social or business world, for thousands of others are using this splendid restorative with best results. We have sold it for over a quarter of a century without even one complaint against it. It is a pure, beneficial restorative and cannot harm you. For light, medium and dark brown and black hair. At druggists and toilet goods departments, 75c; by parcel post, $5c.

Send us the name of your druggist if he cannot supply you, and we will send you THREE samples of Rehinsaire Face Powder and Cold Cream of Roses. Jacoby Pharmacy, Atlanta, Ga.

The Well Dressed Woman

Some of the Newest Fashions for Autumn from Paris Modistes

A three-piece costume by Redfern, the short bolero coat has a wide cape collar, the skirt a single seam at the center back, which is concealed by the plaited back panel of chiffon.

Cheruit is responsible for this costume, which was designed from the Balkan military dress. The skirt of blue and green cloth is cut very narrow and slightly draped. The coat is short and hangs loosely from the figure. It is of navy duvetine, and has collar and cuffs of the ribbed material from which the skirt is made.

The third gown is of crepe tussah, and shows some very unique features. The skirt is made on a deep yoke, and is slightly draped at the sides. The simple waist has a half low neck filled in with a lace guimpe. The sleeves are of chiffon of the same shade of beige as the gown. Four large buttons adorn the front of the gown.

A black velvet suit by Paquin is made with an elaborately embroidered vest. The jacket is of long cutaway style, the skirt scant and slightly draped. Black satin cuffs and collar, and gorgeously colored buttons add to the beauty of the costume.

An afternoon dress also of Paquin is shown here. It is of crepe tussah, in brilliant strawberry red, adorned with jet buttons and black velvet ribbon.

New Modes That Have Appeared

By Marion Morris

AMERICAN FASHIONS? NO! FRENCH FASHIONS? YES—by adoption! For we must not forget that Paris dictates to New York, and that the latter does likewise to America. This fact alone explains why American women are only rivaled by the Parisiennes in understanding the art of good dressing.

Even though a well-known sculptor has said that the Summer fashions were exceedingly beautiful—"in that more of the human form was visible"—it is a pleasure to know that Dame Fashion has ordered quite a chance in modes. The clinging and transparent modes of a few weeks ago were delightful until they were vulgarized. Indeed, the leaving-off process could not go much further, for many women who did tolerate the pneumonia blouse refused to wear the pneumatic skirt!

Of course, the new and more modest modes are charming and their chic is decidedly pronounced because there is no suggestive touch to detract from their beautiful and smart styles.

No particular period that is notable in the history of dress has influenced the new fashions. However, old ideas have been revived from the costumes worn during the Louis periods and the years that followed up to and including the Directoire. In doing so the dressmakers have endeavored to create the most wearable apparel—and they have succeeded.

First—the Tailored Suits for Autumn.

THE introduction of Scotch plaid fabrics has caused quite a commotion and a difference of opinion. Some people do not take the mode seriously, because so many attempts have been made to launch it successfully—and without any notable result. But, I think that those who are now pessimistic about plaids will have a great surprise, for I am sure that the richness of the colors and the chic ways they are fashioned will bring them triumph. However, I think that the plaid silks will be much more popular than the worsteds, because their color tones are softer and richer, besides the silks are more supple and easier to drape. Of course, the smart suits are not entirely of plaid, for women weighing more than 130 to 140 pounds would look like cartoons in such coats and skirts. The cloth suits with plaid skirts—generally green and navy predominating—and plain blue or green coats are the most favored. If one of these suits should be your choice, be sure that there is a plain-color skirt to match the coat, for even the best of plaids become tiresome if worn all the white. Even though the coats of these suits may be trimmed with plaid, they are perfectly all right when worn with the plain skirts, for the Scotch color combinations are always effective.

Compose suits of every description are now the fad, but it is a question whether they will remain at the top of Fashion's list during the Winter. Some tailors are so sure of their success that they are making luxurious suits with white or citron faille silks skirts, and black or a harmonious color velvet coat trimmed with skunk. Time alone will answer this question! But if you are selecting a suit now, count ten before you decide on one of these.

Although the regulation cutaway coat is approaching the period of being passe, it is suggested in many of the new models. Quite the best of these is a jacket that follows the directoire lines—being cut away in front at the high waistline and then taking a straight, downward line, which continues in a slant to form a deep point in the back.

THE charming skirt with the tunic is also much in evidence. It is particularly smart when it repeats the cutaway lines of the coat, and when it is made in triple effect. I do not think that the predictions for the tunic model can be too glowing, because it is effective and has a certain chic that can only be given by straight and clearly defined lines.

However, there are many tailor-mades that have draped skirts. The peg top style, which was not a success last season, has influenced one of these new modes to such a degree that it should be called the perfected peg top. In the front, it is draped downwards and upwards, to give the baggy effect at the hips, but in the back it is quite straight and flat so that it will not break the long line of the coat. This skirt in white pencil striped black velour delaine, is very good-looking with a plain black coat of the same fine fabric.

THE Russian blouse jacket is again on Fashion's list. This time, it is more charming, for it is fashioned with the natural waistline and its regular stock collar has been replaced by the graceful de medici collar of lace.

Nearly every suit has a waistcoat—either separate, attached or in effect! For this reason, there are many suits with jaunty one-button jackets, that permit the waistcoat to be quite visible. These waistcoats generally have the collars and revers attached to them. Then, there are some Russian waistcoats of fine silks and rich embroideries, that invite the taking off of coats in restaurants or at matinees.

Sashes are also an important factor! Nearly all the coats that are designed in the Directoire mode have wide crushed sashes extending from the very high to the normal waistline, and finished with large bows in the front. The loose draped sash that Paul Poiret introduced on a gown a little while ago is now seen on coats—it is inset at the side seams and hangs loose until it is tied in a large bow near the end of the coat in the back.

THEN, there are plain girdles that are used to hold in place the extreme short fronts of jackets that have medium length loose backs. These coats are quite unique.

Trotteur costumes are very plain and yet they can't be called severely tailored, as their lines are too uncertain. For instance, the skirts of some are gathered or simply pressed in box pleats about the waistline. The bodices are generally quite plain, with frillings or the Medici collars of lace about the low pointed necks to give the only touch of daintiness. Of course bright colored sashes are added to make the dresses more dashing and effective.

The new dresses deserve a chapter of their own.

The tunic mode heads the list, because it is quite different from the draped styles of the last year or so. Although there are tunics and tunics, the one with the points that was created by Callot is the most unique. This tunic, which extends to the knees, is edged with tiny points and is set on in points, so that it flares like a lampshade. Then there are short tunics that flare—some embroidered around the edge, others edged with skunk, ermine or other short pelt furs. The pleated tunics are very delightful when of chiffon or voile, but are quite the opposite when fashioned of a heavy material.

OF COURSE, draped modes are much in evidence, too. These show quite an improvement, as they are more artistic and graceful. The drapery that suggests a pannier will surely be quite popular, because it is not extreme and because it gives excellent lines to most every figure. The draperies that swathe the hips in Oriental fashion are worn by the woman who can stand vivid contrasts—for instance, a foundation of a white clinging silk, with draperies of black to match the bodice.

The mode with the straight skirt whose fulness is mostly in the front (in a cluster of pleats), should always be finished with a wide girdle and large pump bow—the latter centered at the pleats.

Flounces will be the craze for the early Autumn. But when Winter comes they will be mostly seen on evening gowns and dancing frocks. Many of the gowns with skirts of numerous flounces are generally of a fine silk or net, with flounces of lace or tulle. While this is a mode of simplicity, it gives opportunity for elegance, as it is lovely when its flounces are of exquisite lace. The slender woman looks best in the model whose flounces are set on straight, but other women should make certain that the flounces dip in the back.

The "Tango" gown has made a greater sensation than any of the other evening modes. But whether it will be a brilliant success is yet to be determined. Of course, its Turkish pantaloon trousers make it extreme, but nevertheless they make it practical for its purpose. As a matter of fact, it is much more decent to dance any of the new steps in this costume, as one's limbs are securely covered to the ankles, where the pantaloons are fastened close on jeweled bands. And above the knees it looks quite like a dress, for it is fashioned with a double tunic. When of silk crape this costume is the most effective.

Evening gowns are gorgeous! However, they are not burdened with trimmings, as they are made of luxurious brocaded silks and rich satins. Sashes of silver tissue are among their simple but very effective adornments.

Scotch plaid silks are causing quite a furore at the present moment. True it is that they have been introduced at the beginning of several seasons and that their popularity was but for a little while. But now there is every indication that they will be a success this Autumn, for they are perfectly adapted to the new modes. Quite the most stunning dress that I have seen had a foundation of plaid silk, with tunic of plain charmeuse and a combination bodice of the two silks. Besides plaids are much used for trimmings.

The Amateur Dressmaker Tells of the Autumn Wardrobe

BY FIRMLY resisting the temptations to be extravagant which assailed us whenever we went shopping during the Summer months we had quite a tidy little sum to spend upon our Autumn outfits. This was fortunate because there were three tailored suits to be made and the materials for them were rather expensive—as really nice fabrics usually are.

As diagonals are going to be smart this Autumn for young girls, Louise bought four yards of that double width material in a walnut shade. Its skirt is seamed down the center of the back and straight down the front as far as the knees, where it separates over a V of self-colored soutache-braided walnut brown faille. Across the back and sides the skirt is gathered on to the waist band, but in front it is set on without fulness and is a trifle overlapped by a broad, straight brown velvet girdle that frills in the inverted V-shaped space caused by turning back the jacket's corners below a pair of cord-joined olives that close its fronts. The full length conventional sleeves of the jacket are cut-in-one with the shoulders, which form a yoke going straight across a seamless back that curves a trifle below the hips. The other two sections of the yoke slant from the neck toward the under-arm seams and into its lower edge the short, cut-away fronts are slightly gathered. The narrow turned-over collar, the broad band cuffs and the half belt crossing the back are of soutache-braided faille. Louise searched the shops until she found a walnut brown straw sailor of the narrow-brimmed, moderately high-crowned new shape and trimmed it with brown wide moire ribbon and a single quill. The ribbon, loosely folded, goes round the crown to the back, where it forms a single wired loop bending downward toward the left, while the quill, rooted in the loop's knot, slants upward in the opposite direction. When this straw hat begins to get shabby, Louise can cover it with brown faille.

MILDRED'S new suit is stunning and very inexpensive, considering its appearance. Its skirt of biscuit-colored serge criss-crossed with fine dark green lines is seamed at the back and front centers to within three inches of its lower edge, but as her patent leather boots have biscuit-colored cloth tops, her insteps are not conspicuous. Its dark green serge coat, opening over a mannish looking biscuit colored vest, is forty inches long all round and hangs straight from the shoulders at the back. Its fronts, finished with a narrow, turned-over collar and pointed revers, are held in but not brought together, by a wide belt in green patent leather closing with a metal buckle. The only buttons on the suit are the small ones of biscuit-colored cloth fastening the attached vest. With a remnant of the biscuit-colored serge, Mildred covered the crown of a turban having a broad, closely turned-up brim of dark green velvet, at the back of which she stuck a green feather fancy.

My new suit is black broadcloth made with a severely plain skirt that is far from wide, but still is not so narrow that its only seams—at either side—need be split. Its coat slants away from the fronts immediately below the waist line, covers the hips at the sides and runs into rather a long point at the back. It has conventional coat sleeves and its only trimming is the black silk tailor braid binding its edges, its turned over collar and mannish lapels. It's the sort of suit that looks well at any hour of the day and which may be worn for almost any purpose the year round. That's why I've made it that way. As my last Spring's black satin and straw turban still looks almost like new—because I had worn it scarcely any through the Summer—it will do nicely for the early Fall. After all there's nothing smarter and more becoming to a middle-aged mother than an all-black chapeau.

RUTH will be so cunning in her Autumn outdoor garb—a tan and dark brown striped worsted ratine full length coat with panel back and front, cross-over side forms, collar and cuffs and big, self-covered buttons fastening the left edge from that shoulder to the hem. She'll wear with it a coarse brown straw hat resembling the "sundown" shape, trimmed with a brown and white striped ribbon.

Louise has just joined a dancing class, not because she particularly cares about mastering the newest steps and figures, but because so many of her young friends belong, that each lesson is like an informal party. Her little new frock for these dances is very simple. Just a China silk in a pale yellow shade made with a gathered-to-the-waistband skirt that is split from hem to left knee to show a sham petticoat in white net. The kimono blouse has elbow sleeves finished with narrow lace frillings matching the edging of the deeply-curved front, which is filled in with a tucked maline gumpe. All round the high waistline the bodice blouses prominently over a broad girdle of corded pink silk fastening at the left back under a single sash end.

Please don't imagine that we've discarded our last Autumn's suits. We haven't. On the contrary we've relined the coats, put on new collars, cuffs and buttons and refaced the hem of the skirts. We've found a preparation that removes almost any sort of a spot and much experience has almost perfected us in the art of pressing. Consequently those suits which we're going to wear for general running about look as fresh as when originally purchased. Having been unable to afford new ones we should consider ourselves very fortunate to have these year-old suits to look back upon.

CRACKERS NOW IN SECOND PLACE

Second Place

Crackers Take Three Out of Four Games From the Billikens

Dent Invincible—Bisland Has Great Day—Nixon's Debut Great—C. Brown Driven From Rubber—Score 8-1.

By Dick Jemison.

The Crackers climbed into second place Saturday when they trimmed the Billikens for the count of 8 to 1, making three out of four in the series, and evening up the count in games played for the season, each team winning ten.

One of the best baseball crowds that has ever attended a ball game in Atlanta was on hand to witness the drubbing of the Billikens and they saw what they knew when they got through was an error, despite the fact that the official scorer credited the Crackers with but five hits, but they saw a ball game when he was spoiled.

Carlee Brown, pitching for the Billikens, was driven from the box early in the second inning. He was relieved by Dent, who pitched air tight ball for four innings, allowing but two hits. Everything breaks the right way for his favorites, but neither can they be tagged up as being accidental in their occurrence.

The Crackers scored the first run at the sixth inning. Bisland was safe on an infield hit. All he had to do from then on was to keep going, and that was but very little.

Bisland's Great Day.

No scientific baseball was played the great bulk of baseball at Ponce de Leon that the Crackers played on Saturday. Everything broke right in the most sensational manner, but be that up as it may, it is record for the most part that counts.

Fifteen times the ball was hit to Bisland's territory, half of them were hard chances, and he made every one of them look easy, showing clever judgment as well as fast fielding.

Bisland also had a real day at the bat. He got two hits, one a double and scored a run.

Nixon made his first start in left field for the Crackers and played with the dexterity of a veteran. He made a great catch of Manning's fly in the fifth inning, running back to the fence and pulling down the ball over his shoulder. He also made a pretty throw to right field. Despite the assistance to the pitcher, he did not make an error while in the game, and he made a drive that would look well in print, but not be anything to write home about.

But it was the fact that Nixon starred in the field that made the Cracker fans think that he will be a valuable addition to the team. He also made a couple of raps he hasn't struck since he left Atlanta.

The Billikens showed a little of pep in the first two innings, and in the first one they got a man to third on drives went to Bisland and Nixon, plays that would have won Manning state. Lindsay is the apt for Welchonce appeared a little flighty over backwards, but settled down to work when playing in time to double Long at first.

How Runs Counted.

The Billikens scored first. They counted their only run in the fifth inning. Manning smashed a liner to right field, which Nixon made a great try for. The ball took a false bound and went for a triple. Manning scored when Snedecor hit to Bisland and Dunn dropped the ball after tagging him out.

The Crackers tied it in their half. Bisland led off with a single and went to second on Holland's sacrifice and sacrificed him to third, and Nixon smashed one through Manning for a binge, counting Bisland.

Then came the round that routed Mr. Brown, and put the Crackers in second place. There were no many sixes. There were six runs and six hits in the sixth inning.

Acler led off with a hit to Snedecor, which he beat out. Long beat out a bunt. Welchonce smashed a single to left scoring both men and counted himself on Smith's long fly to center, which on any other field in the circuit would have been over the fence.

Bisland drew a free ticket. Holland singled and Nixon drove Rolland home by bunting one Elwert will. Then down the left field foul line. Both Holland and Nixon advanced on the throw to the plate. Dunn hit to Brown and Holland was run down.

Elliott Dent then proceeded to make things certain by smashing a triple to the scoreboard scoring both runs. But he cut second base and was called out by the umpire when the ball was relayed there.

Acler got two bases in the seventh when Manning dropped his easy fly. Long beat out a hit. Welchonce forced Long at second. Acler counted when Wallop Smith poled another to the tall uncut, which McDowell ramped under right near the centre field fence.

CLEARING OFF THE GROUND FOR LOCAL AUTODROME

Work has started on the local autodrome. The accompanying photograph was snapped Friday afternoon, and shows a part of the large force of men that are engaged in clearing off the ground.

As will be seen in the photo, weeds, higher than the average man's head, are growing all over the large acreage that the board waiver will cover. Secretary Frank Weldon, of the Atlanta Autodrome Athletic association, that will control all sporting events that will be held here, started a force of men to work Wednesday, in the manner shown above.

The clearing of the ground of these unsightly weeds will take about a week longer. More men are being added to the force daily, and the work is going to be rushed to the limit.

As soon as the ground has been rid of these weeds and the few trees are raised, the stumps dynamited, etc., that will control all sporting the little filling and grading that is necessary will be started at once.

The filling and grading will require about 30 days. By the second week in September actual work on the saucer itself will be started.

Orders have already been placed for the 2,000,000 feet of lumber and the 50 tons of nails that will be necessary to complete the track.

The surveying crew of the roadway department of the Georgia Railway, the great track, that promises to do and Power company have gone over the ground over which the spur track from Peachtree street direct to the entrance of the autodrome will be laid. They will start work in ample time to have the spur finished before the track is.

Five minute car schedule from Five Points direct to the autodrome entrance and return will be run.

Slowly, quietly, but surely, all arrangements are being perfected for more towards advertising Atlanta than any one thing has done in the past.

All existing track automobile records are sure to fall. All the best drivers, all the biggest and fastest cars will be brought here.

Tentatively, the first race meet is set for the latter part of October. The track owners plan to have their track finished in time to give the drivers at least ten days' trials on the track before the actual meet.

Only 2 Weeks

Crackers Have But FifteenMore Games UntilSeason Ends

Turtles Here This Week for Four. Then Pelicans Come for Three Doubleheaders.

Only two weeks of play remains, and the southern league pennant race for the season of 1913 will be a thing of the past.

Locally but fifteen more games remain to be played, with the Memphis, New Orleans, Mobile and Chattanooga clubs, as the opponents of the locals, the teams appearing here in the order named.

The Turtles will be here Monday, playing a four-game series, which will be brought to a close with the game Thursday afternoon. It will be the final meeting between the two teams this season.

The Turtles and thee Crackers have engaged in sixteen battles this season, the Crackers winning 9 and the Turtles 7. At Poncey the Turtles have only been able to win 1 out of the games played. At Red Elm they copped 6 of the 10 engagements.

Three Double Bills.

The latter part of the coming week will be a strenuous one. The New Orleans tail-end Pelicans will be the opponents of the locals, with doubleheaders Friday and Saturday, and then three games the following Monday, which will be Labor day.

Despite their tail-end standing, the Pelicans have been hard nuts for the locals all season. The teams have engaged in sixteen battles. The Crackers have won 5, the Pelicans 6, and 5 have been ties. Two of the ties will be played off this time. The Crackers have won 4, lost 4, and tied 4 with the Pels at Ponce. At New Orleans they won 4, lost 6 and tied 1.

Starting with Tuesday of the following week, the Mobile Gulls, the league leaders and the team that the Crackers will have to overhaul to win the pennant, will play four games with the locals.

Gulls Win Easily.

To date the Crackers have been just as easy pickings for the Gulls as the Barons were for the Crackers, but despite the big handicap, the locals are going to go after the Gulls hard in the four games. It will be absolutely necessary if we hope to overhaul them.

In the sixteen games the two teams have played the Gulls have copped eleven, and but five have been won by the locals. In Mobile we only won three out of the ten played, while at Ponce we have the better, winning two and dropping four.

By the time these two teams lock horns, there will be considerable at stake, as the Crackers are climbing and the Gulls are just about breaking even.

The Final Game.

The final game of the season will be played Saturday, September 6, with the Chattanooga Lookouts as the locals' opponents. Manager Coveleskie probably decoltating the mound once more in his role of "Putting the Jinx on Jackson."

These teams have battled 21 times this season, the Crackers have won 12, the Lookouts 7 and 2 have been ties. At Poncey the locals have won 6 and lost 3, tying 1. At Lookoutville we copped 6 and dropped 4.

The Old Time Fan Talks

HENRY GRADY'S PART

Of Old Southern League

By Charles A. Lamar.

Just thirty years ago—August, 1883—the Brennans, a team of professionals under the management of Sam Brennan, of Pensacola, played a series of games at Pensacola, Pilot, Columbus and Augusta, Ga. It was the first team of all professionals to right Dixie. Despite the assistance of the contestants, it did not make an error while in the south, and it made a drive that would make it could not be anything to write home about.

But it was the fact that Nixon starred in the field that made the Cracker fans think that he will be a valuable addition to the team. He also made a couple of raps he hasn't struck since he left Atlanta.

Walker. That, with the superior team work of the Stars and the game behind them, was enough to give the Atlanta continent and there was nothing to it but a through ticket to the home yard. The Stars were invincible.

The last three games of the season were played between the two teams was very strong, lasting been accentuated by the fact that the Columbus team, of which reference is made above. But the Stars which was established in Atlanta in the were and also the better team.

This ended the bitterest series of baseball the games ever played in Georgia, either before or since, so far as my knowledge goes.

"Corner in Beets."

After the first game was won by Columbus Jake Burrus, then sheriff of Muscogee county and demon fan, sent a telegram to Atlanta, which was sent by express. After the second game he sent a bushel of beets and after the third game a bushel of cabbage, a barrel of same commodity. It may be said that Jake was strong on "hay."

When Johnny Hayes won the Marathon race at the Olympic games in Stockholm several years ago Lieutenant Pensacola youngsters and what they did to the Brennans was an elegant sufficiency.

Mundinger Hard Loser.

Landry and Mundinger made up the battery for the Brennans. After the Pensacola game Mundinger, who was a hard loser, couldn't be consoled, so he sent the following laconic telegram to friends in New Orleans.

"Pensacola 4; we gets nodings."

But if Mundinger was inconsolate at Pensacola, he rejoiced at Columbus and Augusta. The Augusta amateurs were easy work, but the Columbus stars, with Ruhl and Walker the battery and "Hub" Collins a professional infielder, on second, gave them a stiff fight, but the Brennans made a clean sweep at that.

Ruhl and Walker were professionals from Louisville, and Wolfe, who covered left field for the Brennans, subsequently made a brilliant record as an outfielder for the Louisville National league team. Still later "Hub" Collins went to the Brooklyns, where he was killed in a collision with another player while going at top speed for a fly ball.

In 1884 the Columbus Stars retained Ruhl and Walker and also Collins and the amateurs had about as much chance against the Stars as a canary bird in a gas house. Henry Grady, organized Atlanta team with a professional battery and went after the Columbus outfit hammer and tongs.

Columbus v. Atlanta.

To say that the battles between Columbus and Atlanta on the ball field engendered an incipient war every time they twang, met would be well within the truth. There were no casualties worth mentioning, although the melees often got to the jumping off station and entirely too rough for all hands and then the police came on the run. And it's well they did.

One day in Atlanta "Hub" Collins, of Columbus, then playing first, held an Atlanta runner on the bag. That brought on pandemonium that would make a tin shop on dress parade sound like a twitter from a humming bird.

Even the old-timers quit keeping cases and surged on the field twisting their pipes with outbursts of indignation. But the police relieved the situation by escorting Collins from the ball yard. The Atlanta directors then barred him from the park.

But they couldn't bar him in Columbus. Heinzman and Leighton were the battery for Atlanta, but they were far inferior to Ruhl and Dixie League.

It is none of my blasted business, but it's a clinching that the Dixie league is in for a year-snapping time of it from start to finish. Think of organized ball in the south; it's enough to make the angels weep. There isn't the ghost of a chance for success because "continuous" ball would be a frost even in New York not to mention Shreveport.

The new league is in bad from the getaway and its road is up hill all the way and paved with buzz saws and dynamite cartridges. Take it from an observer.

TENNIS TOURNEY IN SEMI-FINALS

Wallace Johnson Faces Champion McLoughlin and Nat Niles Meets Norris Williams Monday at Newport.

Newport, R. I., August 23.—Wallace F. Johnson and R. Norris Williams II. won their way into the semi-final round of the Newport tennis championship today, defeating R. Strachan and W. M. Washburn, respectively, in the sixth day's play of the annual tournament of the United States National Lawn Tennis association.

Johnson defeated Strachan 2-6, 6-2, 6-3, 6-4 and Williams eliminated Washburn 6-4, 7-5, 6-4. Both matches scores indicated clearly the superiority of the victors. Williams and Johnson will meet Maurice E. McLoughlin, champion, in the semi-final round Monday. The winners in turn will play Nat Niles and Johnson on Tuesday. As the field stands Johnson is considered the best of the four stars, but after his wonderful play against Clothier he is an overwhelming favorite to win the championship again.

Johnson Started Slowly.

The tournament committee allotted the grand stand court today to the Johnson-Strachan match. Johnson started slowly and for a few minutes the stocky Californian appeared to be making a runaway match of the play. The Philadelphian found the visitor's intention to his opponent's style of play than to the ball and Strachan quickly ran out the set 6-2.

This was his only opportunity to shine, however, for Johnson had solved Strachan's game and proceeded to run out the succeeding three sets with only occasional stands by the California youngster.

On earned points Strachan had a slight advantage over Johnson, the score standing 29 to 28, but on the unearned side of the card Strachan was a long loser, for he gave up points to Johnson, receiving in return but 6.

Williams' Easy Win.

Williams made short work of his match with Washburn, winning the first and third sets with ease. Washburn made his stand in the second set, which he carried to deuce on account of careless play by Williams.

Williams' record against Washburn was 29 games to 16 points to 9 games and 75 points.

During the day's arrangements were completed for the banquet to be tendered the winning Davis cup team in New York city next week. It is planned to hold the celebration of the return of the international trophy to the Delmonico's Wednesday night of the tournament ends here Tuesday. Dwight F. Davis, donor of the cup, will deliver a speech of congratulation to the victors.

DISTURBER III. WILL REPRESENT AMERICA

Chicago, August 23.—Disturber III., the 40-foot hydroplane owned by Commodore James A. Hugh, of Chicago, today had been named as the one of three boats which will be sent across the Atlantic in an effort to regain from England the Lord Farnsworth trophy. The selection was made following the Disturbers performance yesterday in the preliminary heats for the free-for-all speed boat championship, run under the auspices of the Associated Yacht and Powerboat clubs of America. It will be sent with Count Manowsky's Ankle Deep and one other, not yet selected.

Ty Passes Joe.

Cobb passed Jackson when he gained four points on Saturday. Here are the figures of the "big three, including Saturday's games:

Players—	G.	AB.	R.	H.	pc.
Cobb	90	367	83	122	.397
Jackson	115	407	85	161	.396

Forty Games Won in Ninth

RED SOX ARE BEST

In the American League

Boston fans probably have a perfect right to complain of the showing of their Red Sox in the pennant race this season, but they have no reason to hint that the world's champions owe their present position in the championship standing to lack of recuperative powers.

The Sneed boys have proved to be the best ralliers in the American league this season, having won seven games in the ninth inning and only having let three contests escape from them in the final spasm. The Nops and the Senators have also captured seven battles in the last regularly scheduled round, the Clevelanders following with defeat seven times in the final chapter and the Washingtons have been bested five times in the wind-up period.

Latest records of the other American league teams in games decided in the ninth inning is as follows: Detroit, won 5, lost 3; St. Louis, won 4, lost 3; Chicago, won 4, lost 4; New York, won 3, lost 4; Philadelphia, won 2, lost 5.

Forty Won in Ninth.

In 35 of the 40 American league games decided in the ninth this season the winning run was made on a hit or an error, either on a hit or an out, in three contests errors turned the tide, one by a steal of the plate in the last things, and in another the pitcher forced the deciding count over by issuing a pass.

Only one American leaguer has succeeded in twice winning the winning marker in three contests. He is Tris Speaker, of Boston, who won the Clevelands or Detroit in the most valuable player in the younger organization last season.

The trophy winner has caused defeats to be marked up against Chief Bender, Wilcy Mitchell and Earl Hamilton this season by striking telling blows in the ninth chapter when the count was knotted.

Players who have won two games for their teams by producing timely hits in the last inning this year are Duffy Lewis, of Boston, Ivan Olson of Cleveland, Maurice Rath of Chicago and Pete Compton of St. Louis. The Philadelphians and Washingtons have capacity on each occasion he made himself popular with his boss, George Stovall. Other ash wielders who have won games in the ninth this year are Carlsch of Cleveland, Brief of St. Louis and Williams of Washington.

The players responsible for their teams' ninth inning successes are enumerated below:

Heroes of the Ninth.

Boston 7—Speaker, 3; Lewis, 2; Carrigan, 1; Gardner, 1.

Washington 5—Ainsmith, 1; Moeller, 1; Morgan, 1; Williams, 1; Milan, 1. One of the Senators' ninth inning victories was due to a steal home by Gandil and another to an error by Lapp, of Philadelphia.

Cleveland 4—Olson, 2; Lajoie, 1; Carisch, 1; Graney, 1. The winning runs in Cleveland's other ninth-inning victories were due to errors by Bodie, of Chicago, and Dauss, of Detroit.

St. Louis 5—Compton, 2; Brief, 1; Agnew, 1; Johnston, 1.

Detroit 5—Crawford, 1; Moriarty, 1; Gainer, 1; Cobb, 1; Greer, 1. Cleveland, forced in the winning run in one of the games won by the Tigers in the ninth.

Chicago 4—Rath, 2; Collins, 1; Eastley, 1.

New York 3—Peckinpaugh, 1; Middleton, 1; Sweeney, 1.

Philadelphia 3—McInnis, 1; Lapp, 1. The pitcher who has figured in the greatest number of ninth-inning reverses this season is Tom Hughes, of Washington. He has been the Senators' mainstay in three games that the enemy have grabbed at the finish. Walter Johnson has not let any games escape in the ninth. On the contrary, the Senators have rallied four times in the period in which the Idaho phenom this year and pulled games out of the fire. The American league pitchers entered with ninth-inning defeats this year follow:

Beaten in the Ninth.

Cleveland, 7—Steen, 1; Cullop, 1; Gregg, 1; Kahler, 1; Falkenberg, 1; Blanding, 1; Mitchell, 1.

St. Louis 6—Hamilton, 2; Stone, 1; Baumgardner, 1; Leverenz, 1; Wellman, 1.

Detroit 6—Lake, 2; Bush, 1; Dubuc, 1; Willett, 1; Klawitter, 1.

Washington 5—Hughes, 3; Groom, 2.

Philadelphia 5—Bender, 2; Brown, 1; Plank, 1; Bush, 1.

New York 4—Keating, 1; Ford, 1; Fisher, 1; Shultz, 1.

Chicago 4—Scott, 2; Russell, 1; Walsh, 1.

Boston 3—O'Brien, 1; Wood, 1; Hall, 1.

CLINTON PROUGH LEADS TWIRLERS

Barons' Star First; Coveleskie Second — Three Crackers, Price, Conzelman and Dent, in First Ten.

Clinton Prough, the big right-hander of the Birmingham Barons, leads the southern league pitchers to date with twenty-one victories, five defeats and one tie, a percentage of .808.

Harry Coveleskie, the big Pole, of Chattanooga, is second with twenty-four victories, eight defeats and two ties, a percentage of .750. Pole Cavet, with twenty-one wins nine losses and one tie, a percentage of .700, is third.

Here are the leading pitchers of the league, up to and including the games played Friday, August 22. Atlanta has three, Birmingham, Mobile and Montgomery two each, and Chattanooga one man in the first ten:

MADISON CLAIMS AMATEUR TITLE

Thirty-One Games Have Been Won and Only Ten Lost, Playing the Strongest Ball Teams.

Madison, Ga., August 23.—(Special.) The Madison baseball team claims to have won the amateur pennant of the state. Here is her claim, which cannot be disputed, she having been up against some of the best amateur talent in the state.

She has won from Social Circle, 1; East Point, 3; Lithonia, 3; Decatur, 3; Emory college, 3; Georgia, 3; Greensboro, 4; Elberton, 4; Washington, 3; Newborn, 4.

This makes thirty-one games Madison has won.

She has lost to Covington, 1; Social Circle, 1; Greensboro, 2; Elberton, 2; Washington, 3, Newnan, 1.

This makes ten games lost. There were forty-two games played, one being a tie to Newborn and one for 11 innings. This record gives Madison 780 per cent, and places her at the top of the list as the undeniable amateur champion baseball team of Georgia.

BOB MESSENGER FAST ON PATHS

Baron Outfielder Leads Base-Stealers of the Southern League—Tommy Long Is Among First Ten.

Bob Messenger, of Birmingham, leads the southern league in base stealing, the Semi-forced Baron having purloined fifty-six bases in 124 games to date.

Dave Robertson, of Mobile, is second, with fifty-two steals in 119 games, and Clyde Wares, of Montgomery, is third with forty-eight swipes in 116 games.

Here are the ten leading base stealers of the league, up to and including the games played Friday, August 22:

Players and Teams.	G.	SB.	P.C.
Messenger, Birmingham	124	56	.451

PUGH'S DISTURBER WINS MOTORBOAT TITLE

Chicago, August 23.—Thirty thousand spectators today saw Disturber III., owned and piloted by Commodore James Hugh, of Chicago, win the American motorboat championship.

Disturber III. covered the fifteen laps over a distance of 30 miles in 42:47, while Baby Reliance, of Canton, Ohio, was second in 43:02.

The championship, which carries with it a $2,000 trophy, was open to boats of all sizes and the Pugh boat, Baby Reliance, Barnacle, Gregon Kid and Baby Hawk II. were the only ones to contend in previous trials. Barnacle failed to start.

Disturber III. is among those that will represent the United States at the international races in England. Disturber III. had 24 cylinders with 600-horse power and takes 100 gallons of gasoline an hour.

HOMELESS CHILDREN, RESCUED FROM HUT, WANT TO FIND SOMEBODY TO LOVE THEM.

BY J. WALTER LECRAW.

In a rude, unfurnished, one-room hut near Moultrie, Ga., eight little neglected children were huddled together half-starved. There was no floor but the cold, hard ground—no bed but a patch of straw! Worse than that, there was nothing to eat! Yearningly these eight forlorn brothers and sisters, the oldest only 17 years old, waited for the return of their father, with whom they lived in this squalid hovel. Their mother was dead, and the father, being poor and ignorant, provided little indeed for his hapless brood.

Mary Ansley, who was the brightest of the girls, was only ten years old but a little mother to her younger brothers and sisters. Mary was a resourceful girl and when on this particular day they had waited far into the evening hoping for father or somebody to come and help them, Mary decided to start out and find help of some kind.

So she set out on the highway to tell her story to whom she might meet, leaving her seven brothers and sisters back in the empty hut that for many months had been all they had to call "home."

NEIGHBORS FIND THE CHILDREN IN HUT

Mary found that the world was willing and anxious to listen to her tale of need, for the world wasn't so bad and indifferent after all—it just didn't know. The guardian spirit that keeps watch over the lives of little children guided Mary to the home of kind people, who took her in and then followed her to the bare hut with its lonesome, needy children. Until Mary went out and told them, the people of the neighborhood had no idea of the destitution in which the family was living.

When friends were found to rescue these children from their barren surroundings, however, life opened up for them with a sudden burst of hope. The older children were given work and help in the neighborhood, while the Georgia Children's Home society was called upon to help find homes for the four youngest, from three to ten years old.

The father, who was evidently making no effort to care for the children, was forced to sign a full release turning the four children over to the society for life. They were then brought to Atlanta, and within four days a home had been found for the youngest Ansley, a three-year-old girl named Perry Lee, who is now the pride of a prosperous home in a north Georgia town.

GEORGIA IS ASKED TO GIVE THEM HOMES

Mary Ansley and the other two—Mittie Belle, who is 6 years old, and Johnny, who is 8—are now at the society's receiving home, in Atlanta, where they were temporarily taken in, while all Georgia is being given the opportunity to give them homes. They are children with good blood in their veins, for their mother was an educated woman. They have already developed wonderfully in the two weeks since they were rescued from the hut, and with the surroundings of a good home they will grow into robust and worthy men and women.

But there are dozens of other homeless children, too, who are being offered to the people of Georgia by this children's home society, which is following one of the most constructive lines of work known to philanthropy today.

When the secretary, Robert B. McCord, made the trip to Moultrie last week to bring the Ansleys to Atlanta, he found another family of four children who were destitute and needy. They were the Hughes family, the children consisting of three boys and a girl, all under ten years. Their father was dead and their mother was totally unable to support them. What did Secretary McCord do but pick up the whole family of four children and bring them also to Atlanta. The mother agreed, of course, that this was the best plan. So the Hughes children and the Ansleys are now having fun together, playing in the yard of the receiving home in Atlanta.

CHILD CONSERVATION AIM OF SOCIETY

Conservation of the child, which is the noble purpose of this unique "children's home" society, is one of the newest but most important phases in the twentieth century development of social service.

"While you are conserving natural resources do not forget the child, the greatest resource of the nation, and of the world," is an oft quoted phrase from a speech of Theodore Roosevelt. The race is at last coming to realize that every child represents either a potential force for the increase of civilization and progress, or, if allowed to suffer from neglect, a potential addition to the destructive forces of the nation.

And though less than two years old, and with a working income of only about $5,000, the Georgia Children's Home society has already accomplished splendid results in "child conservation." Fifty children, gathered from every section of Georgia, were in 1912 provided with homes through the work of this society. This means 50 future citizens of the state rescued from unhappiness and want and placed in good surroundings, where they can grow and become good men and women.

"THE LEAST OF THESE, MY BRETHEREN"

The cry that is strongest in the hearts of the workers for this cause, as well as in the hearts of the foster-parents who take the little tots in, is the call of service to their helpless fellow beings. "In as much as ye have done it unto the least of these, my bretheren"—echo the words of the Master—"ye have done it unto me."

What means more to a child than love? The love of a father and mother—the ennobling influence of an ideal family circle—this is something that a child cannot get from an orphan home or any other kind of institutional life. And so it means far more to the development of the real "individual" in the child if it can be placed in a family home where it can receive this subtle influence of love.

Dozens of instances have come under the notice of the society where the adoption of a child has meant as much to the home itself as it has meant to the child! A bachelor in a south Georgia town recently wrote to the society that he and his mother had a good home together and they would like to have a brother and sister, both between the age of nine and eleven years. Two children were found to suit them exactly—a brother and sister from Valdosta—and the bachelor's home is now brightened by their childish laughs and the love which they are already feeling toward their "father."

A MAIDEN LADY TAKES A BABY, TOO

A middle-aged farmer living in central Georgia wrote to the society that he and his wife would take a baby girl. But when the secretary went to find out all about the home, before letting them have the child, he found that the person really most interested was their maiden niece who made her home with them. The uncle and aunt, with their niece, constituted the family in a rather luxuriant home on the farm. The niece had complained that she was often lonely in the big house and that she wished she had a baby to care for. They heard of the children's home society and concluded they would see if they could get one for her.

When the arrangements were finally completed and the maiden lady took the baby girl in her arms her face gleamed with a radiant joy, as she said, "I am the happiest woman in the world!"

Scores of people apply to the society who do not get them, as the child's welfare is the highest consideration in the question of its adoption by a family. Some of those who write betray so much ignorance that they only receive a kindly acknowledgement from the society. Others do not fill out the prescribed application form or the society sends it to them because they see that they do not get a child simply for the asking, but that they must be approved as having desirable homes for the children. Others are found on investigation to be undesirable homes. And so out of a hundred inquiries for children, usually, there are only ten or fifteen homes found. But if all goes to show how the whole world is willing to help—if it only knows the need.

THE TRAGIC CASE OF THE HORTON FAMILY.

Tragedy and pathos stalk supreme in the life stories unfolded in the work of the Children's Home society. A family that has lived along in comparative happiness in humble circumstances "goes under" when trouble and hard times come. The loss of a family's support throws the innocent children helpless upon the world. Sometimes it's the death of a father—or a mother. Sometimes, too, it's desertion. Maybe there's nobody to support the children but a struggling mother or an overworked elder brother—or, what is worse, an indifferent father. Then the struggles for existence that follow are indeed filled with the tragic irony of human life.

In the case of the Horton family such a story has recently come to light. The mother and three children, ranging in age from 3 to 9 years, were abandoned in Augusta by a drunken husband and father. The mother went heroically to work, but could earn no more than $6 a week, and so the oldest tot had to work to help her. The others lived in the street most of the time. They had never even had an opportunity to go to school.

A MOTHER STRUGGLES IN VAIN FOR HER TOTS.

Being ambitious for her children, the mother was filled with sorrow at their plight. For several months, though, she kept up the struggle. Finally she decided that she would have a better chance of finding help in a big city like Atlanta, so she bundled up her three little children and came. She reached here last week, penniless, landing at the police station, where she appealed for help.

Chief Beavers telephoned to the Children's Home society to ask that the case be investigated by the superintendent, and after a talk with the mother, Mr. McCord offered to take charge of the children and guarantee them good homes if she would place them in the society's care. Though it brought pangs to the mother's heart, she saw that this was the only wise course for the future of her children. Homes have already been found for two of the children, and they are now receiving love and careful attention. The third, a boy of about 6 years, is yet in Atlanta, waiting for somebody to offer him a home.

The mother was given a ticket back to Augusta by the society and has returned to her work, grieved at her parting from her children, but knowing that they are now on the right road. This is indeed an example of a mother's supreme sacrifice. If Georgia had a "mothers' pension" law, as some states have, there would have been a different climax to this story!

ONLY A FEW ARE BORN OUT OF WEDLOCK.

Superintendent Robert B. McCord has made some interesting observations during his service with the society on the problem of the child that is born out of wedlock, and he declares that it just as often turns out a good citizen as any other child.

"Many of those who learn of our work get the idea that nearly all the children we handle are born out of wedlock," says Mr. McCord. "But this is not the case. Not one out of ten of our children is born thus. Most of them are of legitimate parentage, and they also have in their physical and mental makeup the possibilities of splendid men and women. The squalor of dirt, the misery of ignorance and poverty, so easily give the impression that all this necessarily belongs to the physical and mental inheritance of the child that only those who look deeper than surface indications are not led astray in measuring the possible future of such a child when placed in favorable surroundings and under an influence of love and kindly leading.

"But the mere fact that a child is born out of wedlock" continues Mr. McCord, "is no sign that it has an evil inheritance. In fact, it very likely has as good inheritance as one born of parents who have married in the way prescribed by law or human society.

"We do not condone this departure from the path of accepted morals, but we do hold that the curse need not follow the innocent child born without securing its consent. In all cases of such children brought to us it is our policy to strive earnestly to keep the child in the family in which it is born if this will do at all or can be worked out ultimately to that end. In some cases, too, we conclude after thorough investigation that it is best to take the child and let the mother be free to provide for her future without the hindrance. It is one of the world's most delicate problems, and one we are doing our best to solve whenever it comes before us."

STATE-WIDE SUPPORT IS ASKED FOR.

Completing now its second year of useful service in the state of Georgia, the society makes an urgent appeal for state-wide support. It has done splendid work this past year on an income of about $5,000 from friendly subscriptions, but with the urgent need for even greater work along this line the society ought to have $10,000 or $20,000 a year. And every dollar of it would return many fold blessings to its donors through the human life conserved.

There is no busier office in Atlanta, nor one where more momentous work is being done, than the office of the society in the Foote & Davies building at the corner of Edgewood and Pryor. Here is, in fact, the clearing ground for homeless humanity, and it is a work that commands the gratitude and the co-operation of all the race. Let us all help it today and do lend its increased and generous support to this great movement in "child conservation."

This is Roy, cheery and happy in spite of the fact that he has no place to call "home."

Look into the big eyes and open faces of these children and answer the question—haven't they an inalienable right to a home? They are the Ansleys and the Hughes children, from Moultrie, the Ansleys being the ones who were rescued from the barren hut.

Notice the serious face of Roy Hughes, in the bottom row. Looks like a philosopher, doesn't he? But the fact that he's got a sunny side, as well as serious, is proven by the snapshot of him on the left, which is the same Roy, though you'd hardly guess it.

Found Homes Thro' Newspaper

The Georgia Children's Home society found homes for these two pretty girl babies within twenty-four hours after their picture was published in The Constitution a few weeks ago. Their names are Helen and Ruth, and one of them is the adopted child of an Atlanta home, while the other was taken by a family up in Asheville, N. C.

They've Got a Chance, Now

These are six wards of the Georgia Children's Home society, snapped by the photographer just after their faces had been washed, upon their being brought to Atlanta by the society. The three in the top row are of the same family—the Bingham children—from a town in central Georgia. The other three are from separate families. All six have now been placed in homes and are doing splendidly. But for the chance of a new life given them by the society they would be living in want and roaming the streets even yet.

"Head 'Em Off" Campaign in Spring Better Than "Swat the Fly" in Summer

By Willard D. Price.
(Exclusive Service, The Survey Press Bureau.)

Mr. Fly, undesirable citizen, official distributor of typhoid, cholera infantum, dysentery, tuberculosis, spinal meningitis, is having the fight of his life in Cleveland. The city has gone "Swat the Fly" one better, and carried through an early spring "Head-em-off" campaign with results that are nothing less than sensational.

Cleveland has already been proclaimed a "flyless city." It is hardly that yet. But thousands of householders have found it possible to dispense entirely with screens at doors and windows, and a lone fly creates more excitement now than a swarm of flies would have a few years ago. In a recent inspection of the city markets, where quantities of meat and provisions are exposed, only two flies were found. Two years ago there were myriads.

The "Head-em-off" campaign was tried last year with such good effect that this year, with improved methods and a notable marshaling of forces, the war was a still greater success.

The present attitude of the community is pretty well expressed in this sentence from a letter by Mayor Baker to the city council: "The anti-fly campaign is a movement of more far-reaching importance and more promising of prolonged life and freedom from disease than perhaps any other single activity going forward in the community." From the beginning the movement has been under the leadership of Dr. Joan Dawson, professor of civic biology at the Normal school.

Prevention Beats Swatting.

The big emphasis has been on the elimination of breeding places. To be sure, hundreds of thousands of flies have been "swatted," but countless millions have been prevented, which is better. Miss Dawson began with the claim that 50 per cent of houseflies come from unclean stables. Owners throughout the city were forced to clean up their stables and keep them clean. Public opinion focussed sentiment, the board of health passed rules, and the "junnor sanitary police" say that they were enforced.

The "junior sanitary police" are boys recruited from the sixth, seventh and eighth grades of the city schools, in each school district the force is directed by a chief, an assistant chief and four inspectors. The principal of the school appoints the entire force. Needless to say, it is considered no small honor to be appointed a member of the "junior sanitary police." The official badge is prized highly. The girls have a part, too, some of them being made "sanitary aids."

The school district is sectioned off and each member of the force made responsible for one section. He must make regular inspections. When he finds a dirty stable, a rubbish-filled backyard, a heap of fermenting lawn clippings or a leaking garbage receptacle he has, of course, no power to compel the owners to clean up, but in nine cases out of ten he can persuade them to do so. And the children are proving splendid educators. Now and then persuasion fails, and the abuse is uncorrected. Then the case is referred to a boy inspector, and later to the boy chief. If the courteous efforts of these high officials also prove unavailing, the report goes "to the board of health, and a threat of a suit brings the offender sharply to time. He discovers that the alert consciousness of a whole city is back of these badged children.

The schools were further utilized as distributing stations for fly pamphlets and circulars. Each bit of educative literature as it came out was placed in the hands of every child in the schools of Cleveland and thence carried into the homes.

The striking fact about all this campaign was that it was waged not during the fly season, but before it. During a blustering March and a wild, weeping April, while flies were as scarce as straw hats, the battle was at its height. It was directed against the "winter flies"—the few which had survived the cold season and would soon begin laying eggs.

Reason for These Tactics.

The reason for these tactics was set forth in a "fly catechism" issued by Miss Dawson. One question and its answer read:

"How many flies may breed from a pair in spring?"

"Allowing six batches of eggs, of 150 each, supposing all to live and find filth to breed in, the number would be 191,010,000,000,000,000,000, enough to bury the entire earth 47 feet deep. Why not kill the fly in the winter or early spring?"

Even if the actual progeny of a fly does not nearly approach the possibilities, it is apparent that the killing of one sluggish winter fly means the prevention of thousands of summer-infesting insects.

An interesting ice cream company contributed 200,000 "swatters" and all the school children of the city, whether they were members of the "junior sanitary police" or not, were armed. A bounty of 10 cents a hundred was offered for all flies brought to Miss Dawson's office at the city hall. The campaign was financed by popular subscription. At first there was complaint that no flies could be found—but sharp eyes soon sought them out in attic windows, barn lofts and odd, out-of-the-way corners, and they began to pour in at headquarters at the rate of 10,000 a day.

Clergymen were urged to preach "fly sermons" and many responded. A picture film, "The Life of the Fly," was used to good effect in many churches and theaters. In addition to "Head 'Em Off!" and "Swat the Fly!" a triple slogan ran "Clean Your Yard, Make a Garden; Swat the Fly!" and in many a back yard gardens began to blossom where fly-breeding rubbish heaps had been.

When the winter campaign closed May 15, 490,836 flies had been accepted and paid for—and this before the beginning of the "season" and in a city which had suffered very little annoyance from flies during the preceding summer, thanks to the anti-fly campaign then in progress.

Famine in Flies.

"You have brought about a famine in flies," lamented one man who had six chameleons to feed. "My pets are starving. There are no flies to be had about my house and my neighbors can't seem to help me out. I'll pay, and pay well, for every live fly your children can bring me." And he did.

One of the best fruits of the movement has been a public demand for fly-free stores. Merchants have made quick to sense the demand. Recently one hundred Normal school girls inspected 511 grocery stores, confectioneries, meat stores, restaurants and milk depots. They reported that in 60 per cent of the stores not a solitary fly could be found, in only 35 per cent were flies at all numerous.

The early spring "Head 'Em Off" campaign is a remarkable success. One hundred towns and cities have written for information concerning the methods in Cleveland. The coming year will doubtless see the plan in operation in many municipalities. The more commonly it is adopted, the worse luck to Mr. Fly and all the diseases of which he is the herald.

That's Different.

(From The Kansas City Journal.)

"She is very ethereal. She can't eat such things as corned beef."

"Yes, I know her type. Can't eat corned beef, but I once saw her get away with twenty-two lettuce sandwiches."

NORCROSS, GA.

The camping party of Mr. and ...s. R. E. Skinner during the week was one of the most enjoyable of the summer entertainments. True southern hospitality was everywhere evident. Their guests were from four different states. Boting, swimming, target shooting and a fine barbecue kept the campers busy. A beautiful steel boat, christened "Blue Cat," was launched. Miss Eva Bennett, of Maveys, the house guest of Miss Hoyle Skinner, Miss Elsie Hay, of Dallas, Texas, and Mr. Clarence Nesbit, of the University of Irginia were the honor guests. Among the number enjoying the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Skinner on this occasion were Dr. and Mrs. Thornhill, of Atlanta; Mrs. W. C. Staples, of Mississippi; Miss Gradie Brooke, of Alpharetta, and a large number of young people from Norcross, Duluth and Toccoa. The camp was located on a hill overlooking the Chattahoochee river, and near the shoals, where the murmer of the water soothed the camp into slumber each evening. It is interesting to know that this old plantation home has been in Mrs. Skinner's family 150 years, having been inherited from her maternal ancestors.

Miss Mary McDaniels' picnic party on Thursday was a compliment to her guests, Misses Lillian and Edna Johnson, of Atlanta. Those invited were Miss Essie Hancock, Miss Ethel Sparks, Miss Sarah Webster, Miss Edna McDaniel and Misses Lillian and Edna Johnson.

Miss Bonnie Weems complimented Miss Eunice McGhee and her house guests, Misses Julia Prentiss, of Fitzgerald, and Eunice McGee, of LaGrange, with a "rook party, Tuesday afternoon. By making top score Miss Phannie Woods Rhodes won the trophy of the fete, a box of tinted stationery, and as mementoes of a happy occasion the honor guests each was presented with a hand-embroidered handkerchief.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Bosworth were hosts of a delightful dinner party Tuesday evening in honor Mr. and Mrs. Robert Nowell, of Monroe, and Miss Sallie Kimbrough, of Calhoun. Places were marked at the hospitable board for twelve and the sumptuous repast was served in six courses.

Interesting to the social world that remains at home was the pleasant diversions afforded by the Ladies' auxiliary of St. Peter's church in the silver tea of Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. H. Harrison. Mrs. Gordon Harrison, of Savannah, and Mr. Percy Rankin contributed to the success of the bheneit by rendering several solos.

Miss Susie Treadaway entertained Wednesday morning at her suburban home in courtesy to three fair visiting girls—Misses McGee and Prentiss, guests of Miss Eunice McGhee, and Miss Ruth Keener, guest of Miss Frances Randle.

Mrs. Donald Gillis, of Chihuahua, Mexico, is the guest for several weeks of her parents, Colonel and Mrs. Hamilton Yancey.

Doubtless you have heard the remark, "A woman is known by the tea jacket she wears." Certainly anything dainty and pretty in the way of a tea jacket reflects artistic femininity in the wearer. This, then, is why I have given to you a pattern which can be applied to any sized jacket, the floral part used in whole or part. White is by far the prettiest for a jacket. It seems impossible to acquire the habit of wearing colored morning packets which seldom correspond with the dress skirt worn. But a color is needed, and this is what gives the smart Parisian effect. Pink and green would work up nicely in this pattern. I suggest the most fragile shell pink for the flowers, and a lettuce green for the foliage. As silk bears any amount of stress in padding, you can pad these flowers, but not so heavily that the clever design is destroyed. There are no intricate stitches here. Use a single thread of floss when working the flowers to insure the contour of four-edged petals. You can gain time by working the leaves with double threads. Do not use a heavy needle when working silk. It should have an eye to conveniently carry the thread without leaving a large hole in the material. Use silk cotton floss. I prefer wash floss. As a rule the colors are fast and last longer. True, the all white patterns are beautiful, but seldom seen on tea jackets. Sincerely yours,

Winifred Worth

ODDS AND ENDS

IF black stockings are washed in warm, soapy water and rinsed in clear water with a little vinegar they will keep their color until worn out.

TO quickly cream butter and sugar use the wire potato masher and have the ingredients in a thick round bottomed crock. If the milk is added it creams more easily.

LEMONS will keep longer if placed in covered glass jars. By some it is said they will keep longer if the jars are filled with water. If wrapped in tissue paper and placed in bran they will last many weeks during hot weather.

GOOD laundresses, when washing white stockings, whether of silk or thread, add a few drops of oxalic acid to the water. The reason of this is that the acid has the effect of removing the stains caused by the boots and shoes, which are only "set" when washed with ordinary soap and water.

IRON rust on stoves which have not been in use this summer can easily be removed by going over the parts with coarse sandpaper, afterward covering the places with hot tallow or any warm grease. The next day wash with hot soapsuds in which there is a liberal supply of kerosene. Fenders, grates and stoves can be cleaned in this manner.

TO clean ivory that has become brown or of a blackish tint, dissolve rock alum in rain water; boil this and keep the ivory in the boiling solution for about an hour, taking it out from time to time and cleaning it with a soft brush; then let it dry in a damp linen rag, when it will be found thoroughly cleaned. Ivory is often bleached by the simple process of dampening it and exposing it to the rays of the sun, a process which must be frequently repeated.

BURNING accidents would be comparatively rare if mothers would have alum put in the last rinsing water for children's pinafores, nightgowns, etc., when these articles are washed. Two ounces of alum to each gallon of water is the right proportion, and it should always be used for garments made of the common flannelette, for otherwise this is so likely to catch fire that the wearer of it is in danger of being burned to death. Fires are often caused by muslin curtains being blown by the wind against lighted candles or gas, so it is wise also to rinse such draperies in alum water.

TO clean a stove pipe place a piece of zinc on the coals. The vapor produced carries off the soot.

WHEN a cake of soap has been used until it becomes so thin it is liable to break put it and a new cake in hot water for two or three minutes, then fit thin pieces onto the new cake and press firmly with fingers; it will adhere and become a part of the new cake.

AFTER using a knife to pare onions drop it in cold water and leave until the dishes are washed, then wash with hot soapsuds and no odor will be noticed. This rule holds good for utensils in which fish have been cooked. Scouring soaps will not remove disagreeable odors from knives and dishes, but this simple method never fails.

PUT up several shelves six inches wide over the drainage table of the sink. In wiping the dishes taken from the plate drainer place them in piles, the same kind together, on the shelves. This happy thought saves steps in wiping the things and at the end the already sorted dishes can be put away in the pantry with the least effort.

THE stock pot is the mainspring of a well-managed kitchen. In it should be collected bones, poultry, carcasses, trimmings and vegetables, for any scrap is welcome. A piece of shin beef may sometimes be added for extra strength. There will be no lack of soup, gravy and sauces if this is kept constantly going; it is the foundation for them all. Cotton cloth for pudding and dumpling bags will be needed; also bands for binding the beef roast.

VACATION BLEMISHES

BY LUCILLE DAUDET.

MUCH of the injury caused by sun, wind, and glare might be avoided if the owner of the sensitive skin would only protect her complexion according to the Frenchwoman's method. The face is covered with cold cream and powder rubbed into it thick. It leaves the face snow white, but wholly protected from the sun. A pink veil will restore the hue to the face, which might otherwise look ghastly. For the woman who is going to drive all day, this is the best way to protect her complexion.

It really takes weeks to get complexions which are liberally sprinkled with freckles or coated with tan back to normal condition, and if the dainty summer girl wishes to look her best for the trying winter season she must begin to treat her complexion immediately.

The girl with freckles should remember that it is not the outer cuticle, but the pigment underneath upon which the rays of the sun have their effect, and that any sort of lotion that takes off the freckles must take off the skin, too. Unfortunately, when the thin outer skin comes off it leaves an especially tender new skin to be exposed and the freckles come back larger and worse than ever. Only where freckles refuse to yield to bleaching with buttermilk, lemon juice, and cucumbers should the "skinning process" be tried.

The bleach is made by dissolving eight grains of bichloride of mercury in two ounces each of rose water and witch hazel; the mercury should be in coarse powder; the crystals allowed to slowly dissolve in the liquids. It is applied with a soft cloth night and morning and allowed to dry on the skin. Then cold cream is rubbed in and let remain ten minutes, after which a soft cloth is used to wipe the face thoroughly. Let the skin peel slowly, and not in great flakes. In this way it gets a little accustomed to the rays of the sun, and where the freckles are not too deep extra precautions will prevent their return. After the bleach has entirely removed the freckles never by any chances go out of doors without putting on a big brown veil of chiffon.

The buttermilk bath is excellent for taking off those freckles which are not too deeply burned in, as, for example, after a summer's outing, when hats and veils have been left at home. Sour buttermilk is not pleasant, but it improves the complexion wonderfully if used constantly. A basin is filled, the hands used and the face washed as in water. Then it is allowed to dry in and the skin soon shows the effect. Pale freckles will disappear almost entirely, while old freckles are bleached considerably, and by a liberal use of good cold cream and powder are scarcely perceptible. Lemon, cut in half and rubbed over the skin is good, but being an acid it will make the skin rough unless cold cream is used afterward.

For the freckles of temporary duration ripe tomatoes are excellent. Cut the tomato in half and rub well into the skin night and morning, letting it dry on the face. Another bleaching mixture is made by scraping horseradish fine until you get a teaspoonful. Mix this with a cup of sour milk and let it stand six hours. Rub this on the face two or three times a day.

Freckles may be taken off the arms and hands and kept off by using lemon juice or the buttermilk and then wearing long gloves or sleeves.

When sunburn has reached the stage where it stings and burns the natural inclination is to bathe it with cold water; and that only increases the depth and severity of the burn. If it is necessary to wash the face, water as hot as can be borne relieves the inflammation of sunburn. Constant application of buttermilk are also effective.

An excellent lotion for sunburn, but which is equally effective for mere roughness and redness is made of four ounces of oil of sweet almonds, ten ounces of fresh cucumber juice, three ounces of essence of cucumbers, one-fourth ounce of powdered white castile soap, and one-half drachm of tincture of benzoin. The cucumber juice is obtained by boiling the cucumbers in water. They should be sliced thin, skin and all, and be allowed to simmer slowly until resolved to a soft mush. Then strain through a fine sieve and then through a cloth.

The essence is made by putting an ounce and a half of the juice into the same quantity of alcohol. Put the essence and the soap in a large jar with a cover and shake thoroughly and when the soap is dissolved put in the cucumber juice and shake the bottle again. Then pour the mixture into a bowl and add the oil and the benzoin, stirring all the while till the liquid is creamy. Keep this lotion in small tightly corked bottles, and shake before using.

If tan is only superficial, buttermilk and lemon juice, with an occasional application of diluted peroxide will in time remove the tint. Where the skin is deeply tanned a lotion made of one-half ounce of lactic acid, one-half ounce of glycerin, and one-half ounce of rose water will soon bleach it. Apply several times daily with a soft tbe burning is severe—for any bleaching lotion is smarting—apply a good cold cream immediately afterwards.

For the skin that becomes dry and scaly from neglect and exposure, masday is of advantage. One of the best creams that can be obtained is made of one ounce of spermaceti, one ounce of white wax, five ounces of the best imported oil of sweet almonds, one sage with a good cold cream twice a and one-half ounces of rosewater, and twenty grains of powdered borax.

Dissolve the borax in the rosewater while you melt wax and spermaceti in granite pan over the teakettle or in a pan of boiling water. When thoroughly melted add the oil of almonds. Let it remain in the boiling water until all flakes of wax, caused by pouring in the oil, are melted. Then quickly pour rosewater into it, letting the mixture still remain in the water until all wax flakes are dissolved. Pour into jar and with silver knife beat the mixture until it is creamy. Do not let the ingredients get too hot; the oil and wax want to melt—that's all.

As to the hair which is streaked with salt water and injudicious basking in the sun while it is still wet, a nourishing tonic is required. One-half pint of castor oil, one-half pint of pure alcohol, one-half ounce of tincture of cantharides, and two drams of bergamot oil make an excellent tonic when the hair is dry and brittle.

SERVICE PLATES

"SERVICE plates" are those used on luncheon and dinner tables between courses.

The old-fashioned way was when a person had finished eating from a plate it was removed and the place before him left empty until another, containing the next course, was put before him.

Service plates fill this gap, and it is not considered good form ever to leave a place without a plate. The butler or maid, as he or she takes away the plate with which one is finished, put down an empty one, usually of a very fancy kind. This remains until the next course is served to each person. The service plate is then taken up and returned at the next interval.

Service plates are on the table at the beginning of luncheon or dinner, and at that time the napkin is folded on them.

They may be medium size or large, preferably the latter.

RECIPES FOR SWEETBREADS

BY MRS. McCUNE.

TO properly blanch sweetbreads you should clean and trim off the gristle. Then put them to soak for about two hours in cold water, changing the water two or three times. Remove from the cold water, drain and then plunge into boiling water into which you have put a heaping teaspoon of salt. Let them stand in this boiling water for five minutes. Remove, drain well and wipe off dry with an old napkin, and they are ready to use.

Creamed Sweetbreads—Take one pair of sweetbreads and cut into small pieces, half a pint of cream, one tablespoon of butter, one tablespoon of flour, salt and white pepper. Melt the butter in a porcelain-lined saucepan, stir in the flour, and when this is thoroughly mixed add the cream. This should make a smooth sauce. Now add the sweetbreads and about two tablespoons of chopped mushrooms—a good quality of canned mushrooms is all right—season and cook for five minutes. When cooked add a tablespoon of sherry wine.

Sweetbread Cutlets—One pair of sweetbreads, chopped fine with a silver knife. Boil a teacup of sweet milk. Rub together a tablespoonful of butter and two of flour, add to the milk, let it boil until thick, then beat in the yolks of two eggs and let it cool. Add the chopped sweetbreads, a half-dozen chopped mushrooms, salt, pepper and turn all in dish to cool. Now form into cakes or cutlets, dip in egg and bread crumbs and fry as you would croquettes. A porcelain kettle should be used always for sweetbreads.

Sweetbreads with Peas—Take three pairs of sweetbreads and cut each one into four slices, season with salt and pepper and roll in flour. Fry in porcelain-lined frying pan in butter for five or six minutes on each side. Remove and put on hot platter around the edge and cover with the following sauce: Mix together a scant ounce of butter, a half-teaspoon of finely chopped parsley, half a teaspoon of lemon juice, good pinch of salt and dash of white pepper. Mix together with a fork and spread over the sweetbreads. In the center of the platter arrange a can of French peas, which have been heated with butter.

TRAVEL BOOKS

EVERY girl should keep one of these, for in time to come it will prove an invaluable record of pleasant times and new experiences. A view, or set of views, of each place you visit, amusing or interesting incidents connected with your journey, your traveling companions, and the house in which you stayed, will bring back to you past experiences with a vividness they would otherwise lack, and in looking over such a volume you will be amazed to find the giant events that have sprung from trivial causes.

How little Elsa guessed that she would meet the man who was to be her fate on the fussy little steamer that plied between the banks of a Scottish loch. It was only "by chance" that she took that boat; "by chance" that "his" sister smiled at her when they met again on the summit of a mountain; "by chance" that he and she learned to know each other and that for good or ill he made his mark upon her life. A "Journey Book" may hold the secret of many a fair romance, and the sooner you start one the more interesting a record it will be.

FASHIONDOM

STYLISH light weight and becoming is a black tulle mushroom shape trimmed with a bow of black moire ribbon.

What is called Bulgarian grape is a good choice and in the new argent white is lovely for the summer coats of little children.

The newest laydown collars are narrow Ecru is the predominating color of them. Many of the collars are edged with extremely wide lace.

The woman who can afford to indulge in the fashionable caprice matches her footgear with her individual gowns; even the material and color are the same, so that the toutensemble is correct.

The broderie Anglaise bonnet, with a ruffle of valenciennes lace upon mousseline, is the prettiest of headgear for the perambulator girl. Even upon these models there is a blossom, just a single one made of pink or blue satin nestling among the lace at one side.

A LADY who likes fads, yet does not care for the accumulation of odd bits of bric-a-brac, purchased a plain silver napkin ring which she takes with her on her travels, and at each city where she makes an extended visit she has the name of the city, date, etc., engraved upon the ring. It is getting full of names and is very artistic.

GUNBOAT SMITH AFTER LANGFORD

"White Hope" Is Willing to Meet "Tar Baby." Palzer Laughs at Smith's Claims to Title.

BY JAMES J. CORBETT.
(Former Heavyweight Champion of the World. Written for The Constitution.)

New York, August 21.—Special.—Jim Buckley, who directs the pugilistic affairs of Gunboat Smith, a young man now making prominence in the heavyweight division, is peeved because Al Palzer and Sam Langford refuse to meet Smith in a bout for the championship of the world. Buckley insists that Smith is entitled to the consideration, owing to the consistent good showing he has made in the ring. Buckley says that he will sever the business relations of Jim Coffroth, San Mateo, or some other Pacific coast promoter, who has put forth sufficiently inviting offers.

Manager Buckley claims the "Gunboat" has Jeffries thoroughly and that the only fighters he has seen him and Jack Johnson. Buckley professes to believe Smith equal to the task and will immerse upon him and that for the "Gunboat" to secure a match over the "tar baby" will be the first step in winning the championship of the world.

Few will agree with Buckley over the latter point as to popular impression is Jack Johnson is through and that Langford is the best heavyweight in the ring today. As for his contention that there are no more white hearties left for the "Gunboat" to battle, well, there are several members of that division who can be presently.

Al Palzer Dissents.

Al Palzer is one who refuses to concede the "Gunboat" the position as premier white hope that Palzer is another. The latter, by the way, is doing a little claiming on his own account. Palzer said Tommy Burns bills him as the white heavyweight champion. "That's ridiculous," Palzer ran and Jess Willard, both of whom lost hairline decisions to Smith and whose complaints that the verdicts were unfair are backed up by a number of experts who witnessed both battles.

Admitting, for the sake of argument, that the "Gunboat" has established his supremacy over the rest of the whites the question arises what chance would he get against Langford. A canvass of ring experts would probably show a vote of two to one in favor of Langford to concede him a chance with the demon black. The popular belief is that the negroes color will be a handicap to his opponent in the matter of fighting and that the quality of the gunboat's class of white heavyweights is way below par.

Still there has never yet been a man so good that he could not be beaten. It may be that we white men are altogether too lenient and easy on ourselves in the matter of such men as Langford and Johnson.

It is true that Johnson has been anything like a real contest between the last men of the two races. The 20th round affair of little more than two minutes passed for one thing in favor of Johnson, which means the wonderful finish of the man who has led to believe at the time of his victory over Jeffries. The end of the last week's battle between Gunboat Smith and Sailor Billy Miske, who lasted but six rounds is used by some critics as a basis for the belief that Miske is entitled to be classified as one of the first rank.

Langford's Case.

Langford as he stacked up about the best big man we have today. Still when we consider Sammy's record carefully we find that he was defeated by Jeffries and Johnson, both of whom he had defeated. Jeffries was considered in his prime a better man than Johnson, but Jeffries, as I remember it, had been out of the ring for three years, and Johnson had been fighting all the time.

If the "Gunboat" thinks he is capable of a match with Langford, let him send a man to the front. Tiger Flowers, Sam Smith or Fred Fulton. The latter champion is a coming one, and there is only one thing against the Dakotan. The opponents he has been conceded to have defeated, and it is up to Fulton to show that he belongs to start something that will get the shared gentry interested to the point of the box office.

This thing of handing out bouquets to all and sundry is getting somewhat monotonous, and there doesn't appear to be anything in sight. There is talk of championship, and there is talk of championship fights. Jack Johnson, the present champion, and Jeffries, the retired champion, are the only fighters in existence who the title will be worth a thing.

The white fighters don't seem to lack courage, anyway. That's half the battle, too. Some of them have ability. Those critics who have been bewailing the reign of the negro in pugilism for several years should be happy now that these "Gunboat" Smiths have come my way. It may be deep water covering over rink affairs, for as long as not as sincere as it looks.

Go to it, Gunboat!

O'Rourke's Holler.

In the meantime, Tom Gillespie is writing letters to local boxing authorities in the hope that Jack McAuliffe is afraid to meet Al Palzer and that the challenger can be induced to sign up anxious to meet him. Jack Britton, Jack Smith, it seems, has passed, told O'Rourke he would be willing to arrange a match with Palzer unless he batter knocks out Frank Mantell in their coming match.

As Mantell has been able to box his ten rounds, and the same is true of Britton, it would hardly be necessary for Mantell to bring out Britton. Mantell, however, is asking altogether too much when he looks to have Britton step in and box any of the white heavyweights. Britton, in a short bout, might be the same, but will be out of his class in a match with the result of the most fearful punishment any opponent could inflict on him. Palzer, like Gunboat Smith, will have to ring a long time, and he will have to make good before he can look to matches. If he beats Mantell they will be time enough to get the "Gunboat."

Now that our white fighters are beginning to show up, it seems only fitting to be up to New York boxing commissioners to cancel that order prohibiting matches between whites and blacks. Such a ruling is an insult to the intelligence of colored people by the commissioners. If a white boxer is willing to meet a negro in nothing be permitted to do so. Some of the best boxers in the ring today are negroes, and local fans are denied of the chance to see them perform to-shoots except in matches with men of their own color. And it is a well-known fact that white men do not care much for matches between blacks unless the fighters are of the Johnson, Jeannette or Langford order.

Discrimination against colored fighters is not a popular move by any means. It is too late in the day to attempt to stop negroes from competing with white men in the ring. The time for that was years ago. Discrimination against black fighters at the present time is a joke.

Vandy Schedule Committee More Conservative This Year; Commodores Play 8 Games

1913 SCHEDULE.

October 4—Maryville.
October 11—Central of Kentucky.
October 18—Henderson college.
October 25—Michigan.
November 1—Virginia at Charlottesville.
Novebmer 8—Tennessee.
November 15—Auburn at Birmingham.
November 27—Sewanee.

By Jack Nye.

In forming the Vanderbilt football schedule for 1913 the games committee has pursued a more conservative policy than in several seasons, arranging for but eight games which is two less than the number played in 1912 and beginning the season a week later than has been the usual custom. The season will open on October 4 with Maryville college, and there are two other minor battles scheduled before the clash with the Wolverines on October 25—the first of the five big games, which will finish the season.

The reduction in the number of games played is due to the fact that many of the 1912 players were out of the game from injuries at different time during the season, and it is thought that with fewer games, better arranged, this handicap will be avoided this season.

Michigan Comes South.

Maryville, Central and Henderson will be played on the first three Saturdays of the season, after which the Commodores should be in grand shape for their fourth struggle with "Hurry Up" Yost's Michiganders. Every effort will be made to reach the period without being handicapped by injuries, and, if this can be done, Commodore fans will make a strong bid for their first victory over the westerners. Although they have on several occasions made it extremely interesting, Michigan, the Commodores have not been able to gain a decision out of the five times they have met. The results of their past engagements are:

1900—Michigan, 18, Vanderbilt 0. Played at An narbor.
1904—Michigan 12, Vanderbilt 4. Played at An narbor.
1907—Michigan 6, Vanderbilt 0. Played at Ann Arbor.
1908—Michigan 24, Vanderbilt 6. Played at Dudley field.
1911—Michigan 7, Vanderbilt 3. Played at Ann Arbor.

It will be noted from above that the Commodores have always made a better showing against the Wolverines on their home field, and this season they will endeavor to rise up their first victory.

On the heels of the Michigan game comes that with Virginia, and if the Charlottesville team is as strong as anticipated, the condition of the locals after a grueling game with Michigan may play an important part in the battle. McGuire will send his full strength in against Brother-in-Law Yost's henchmen, regardless of consequences, but will stand a good chance of crippling his men. The Commodores will have but a few days' practice after the game before they board the train for Charlottesville, and cannot hope to be in shape to battle. Tired from their long trip, the game at Charlottesville is sure to be a hard one on the team.

Meet Tennessee Again.

Upon returning from Virginia, a less important contest, but none too easy one, will be staged at Dudley field on the following Saturday, the University of Tennessee coming to Nashville for the first time since 1909, when Vanderbilt romped on the state institution by a 51 to 0 score. In 1908, however, Tennessee came to Dudley field with the best team in it history, and the Commodores nosed out a decision, 12 to 0, only after a brilliant and hard-fought game. The Knoxvillians will, in all probability, have the best football eleven to Nashville this fall, and may prove a hard nut to crack than is anticipated at present.

November 15 is the day that Coach McGuire and Captain E. Brown, as well as nothing of the other members of the team, are looking forward to with fond anticipations. On this date the Commodores will clash again with the Auburn Tigers on Rickwood field, Birmingham, and expect to get revenge for said disappointments in 1912, when Donahue's one point advantage, 13

SEED AND PET STOCK

H. G. HASTINGS & CO.,
Seeds, Bulbs and Poultry Supplies.
Both Phones 2568.

IF YOU live on the north or south side let us have your order before 9 o'clock or if you are in Inman Park or West End give your order before 2 o'clock and they will be delivered the same day we receive them. Please bear this in mind, it will insure you prompt service.

WE HAVE gotten in our first importation of bulbs and they are the largest and best we have had for years. We import all of our bulbs direct from France and Holland, and they come from the finest growers. It is time now to plant Paper White Narcissus, White Roman Hyacinths and Freesias. If you plant bulbs get your stock from Hastings and know you are getting the best.

THE BEST authorities on poultry raising claim that hens should be fed very little corn during the month and that wheat is the very best feed during the moulting season. It is usually pretty hard to get good sound wheat at a reasonable price. We have bought one hundred bushels of extra fine stock and as long as it lasts we will sell it at $1.50 per bushel. You had better get a bag of this.

IF YOU love canary birds it will pay you to come to our store and see the beautiful lot of songsters we have, they certainly are little beauties, and going at $2.50 each. Guaranteed singers.

SORE HEAD is about the worst disease that southern chickens are heir to. It should be endured no longer than it takes to get a package of Conkey's Roup Cure (Conkey's Chicken Pox Remedy), which will cure it in short order.

FLOWER pots and saucers, all sizes.

CANARY bird cages and fish globes.

PRATT'S POULTRY Regulator and Conkey's Laying Tonic just the stuff to keep the fowls building sound. It lasts on the moult and starts the hens laying again.

Phone Orders Given Prompt Attention.

AUTOMOBILE OWNERS, ATTENTION!
No more worry about punctures. PUNCTURE SEALO solves trouble.
PUNCTURE SEALO injected into your tubes will seal any puncture up to a twenty-penny nail, and leaves no trace. Will not injure the tube and leaves blow-outs by eliminating rim cutting. It will outwear tubes and tires. Will not gum, become hard or evaporate. Is not affected by heat or cold. Will not injure valves. Does away with the removal of tubes in order to vulcanize.
PUNCTURE SEALO pays for itself many times over in the first puncture and is guaranteed. We have less for PUNCTURE SEALO than 100 cents. Write for terms. Territory open to agents who write at once. We are in business to stay.
SAVE TEMPER, TROUBLE, TIME AND TIRES BY USING PUNCTURE SEALO.

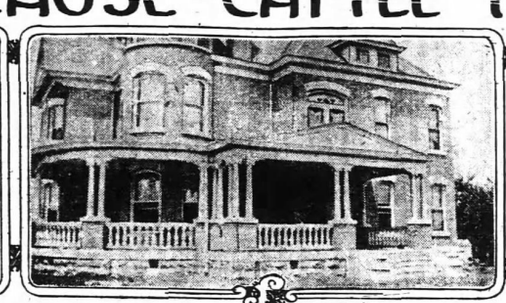
WHERE LUXURY LOOMS ON THE FARM= AND ALL BECAUSE CATTLE MAKES IT SO=

Here is the Tennessee farmer (the bareheaded man in the center) who lives in a splendid house with all the luxuries a farmer can want. He is H. A. Walker, of Wartrace, Tenn. The man on the left is M. A. Butler, of Wartrace, buyer for the White Provision company, who buys $300,000 worth of cattle every year to ship to Atlanta for slaughtering. On the right is Mrs. W. H. White, Jr.



Does this look like a farm house? "Not like the ones I know," answers a Georgia farmer. Yet this is the home of H. A. Walker, farmer, located in the middle of his 450-acre farm at Wartrace, Tenn., and built with the money he earned by RAISING CATTLE AND SELLING IT TO THE ATLANTA MARKET. This handsome brick residence would look far more appropriate in Ansley Park or on Peachtree.

A few of the "beauties" of Mr. Walker's herd, which consists in all of about 120 head of cattle. Mrs. W. H. White, Jr., of Atlanta, is standing in the foreground. These pictures were snapped on a recent visit of Mr. and Mrs. White to the model Walker farm in Tennessee, and Mr. White brought them home to show Georgia farmers how Tennessee will get ahead of them all if they don't watch out.

BY J. WALTER LECRAW.

Up in Tennessee, on the road to Nashville, is a model little farm of 450 acres, where a farmer is getting rich by raising grain that he feeds to cattle that he sells to the Atlanta market. And he lives in a mansion for a farm house!

Down in Georgia are hundreds of farms of the same size and of equal or greater fertility, having no cattle to supply the demand of their own state, which barely make ends meet from year to year. Their owners have to borrow the money to get their crops to market.

Far be it from the purpose of this article to say that Tennessee as a state is ahead of Georgia in farming, for such is not the case! Georgia has hundreds of farmers, though far from all, who are solving their problems as successfully as any farmer in Tennessee is solving his. But the point to this particular case of a Tennessee farmer that should make all Georgians sit up and take notice is the fact that he is making his money by raising cattle and selling it to Atlanta. He is traveling a road to success that the hundreds of Georgia farmers are neglecting. He and scores of other farmers in the same section of Tennessee are getting rich at the expense of Georgia!

BUILDS A MANSION WITH MONEY FROM CATTLE.

This Tennessee farmer is named H. A. Walker, and his prosperous 450-acre farm is located at Wartrace, in Bedford county, about fifty-six miles this side of Nashville. In the center of his closely cultivated tract stands a splendid 2-story brick residence, with slate roof, waterworks, bathrooms, gas lights, elegant furniture and everything else that the heart of a home-loving man can yearn for—and all built with Georgia's money which he earned by selling his cattle to Atlanta.

The pictures at the top of this story give only a faint suggestion of the air of prosperity that exists on the Walker farm, where every bit of land is cultivated intensely in corn, wheat, oats or grass, so that food the year round is ready to nourish and fatten the stock that bring the profit to the farm. Sixty fat steers, averaging 1,050 pounds each, were sold this month by Mr. Walker to the Atlanta packing house of the White Provision company, and there will be more to sell from the herd in the fall. The pictures were taken by W. H. White, Jr., of Atlanta, head of the packing house which bought the cattle, when he and Mrs. White recently visited the farm to see just how Mr. Walker was making such a success of his scheme.

As an index to the prosperity of the farms surrounding Wartrace as well as that of Mr. Walker, over $300,000 worth of live stock was bought for the White Provision company last year by their buyer at Wartrace, M. A. Butler, who is himself an experienced farmer and cattle-raiser. This is over half the amount that the company bought from Tennessee, and shows how a successful movement can be taken hold of by any community and carry it forward to prosperity.

Having long been a most ardent advocate of cattle-raising in Georgia, Mr. White brought the pictures back home with him, just as a vivid example of what cattle can mean to the success of a farm. And in showing them to the farmers of Georgia today his injunction is, "Tennessee will get ahead of you if you don't—watch—out!"

HALF A MILLION FOR TENNESSEE CATTLE.

Several times as much high-grade Tennessee cattle is brought to the Atlanta market for packing as is brought from the farms of Georgia. This is a fact which ought to have a deep significance to the farmers of this state. The books of the White Provision company, which bought Mr. Walker's cattle and shipped them to Atlanta for slaughtering and packing, show that this company buys over $500,000 worth of live stock every year from Tennessee. From Georgia the company buys only $100,000 worth.

Practically all this half million dollars now going to our neighbor state would go into the pockets of the farmers of Georgia if they would raise the cattle. The cheaper freight rates to Atlanta would alone be reason enough for buying from Georgia points. And W. H. White, Jr., declares for one that he would give the Georgia farmers the benefit of the cheaper freight rates—if they will but raise the cattle, and come up to the standard necessary.

Most of the cattle on Georgia farms, however, are "scrubby" and generally weigh about 600 pounds, instead of the 1,000-pound steers turned out by the farms of Tennessee through scientific methods of breeding. Only a few of the Georgia farmers have imported thoroughbred bulls in order to raise the quality of their herds, and right here they are being left behind, while their far-seeing brothers are attaining a high standard in their cattle, supplying the demand and coining the money.

GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY. OF "SMALL FARMER."

Did you know that all the big packing houses of the west, as well as the smaller packers of the east and the south, obtain practically all their cattle from the "ordinary farmers" of the nation? A vague idea exists that the packing houses are supplied from big "stock farms," where stock and nothing else is raised. Pictures of the immense stock yards of Chicago, where thousands of head of cattle are slaughtered every day, have tended to spread this erroneous idea.

But the great numbers of cattle gathered in these centers are only made possible by buying them in small numbers from the farmers, scattered everywhere, who raise them. The cattle are essentially a "by-product" of the farm, and are raised on the corn, oats, wheat and grass that form the main product of the soil. The "small farmers" get as good prices for their cattle as the "big farmers," and herein lies a golden opportunity for the smaller ones, whose expense of marketing a grain crop through the ordinary channels is greater proportionately than with their big brothers, and who gain in this way by turning their grain into cattle.

Thus through the medium of cattle a quick and safe method of marketing a crop has been discovered. The world seems never to have enough fresh meat. But there are many times when there is an abundant, or even a surplus, grain crop. In stock-raising, therefore, lies one of the greatest opportunities in existence for the "small farmers."

CATTLE IMPROVEMENT CLUBS ARE FORMED

As proof of the awakening that is about to take place among the farmers of Georgia on this vital question, a movement is now on foot to stimulate the organization of "Cattle Improvement Co-operation Clubs" over the state. Under this plan a dozen or more farmers join together and pay their pro rata part of the cost of a thoroughbred male, which becomes the property of the club, and is used in turn by the various members. This is a plan that is simple and inexpensive, but which brings results. It works toward the improvement of the standard of cattle in the entire state, and this is absolutely necessary before the Georgia farmers can begin to fill the demand which is at present going to Tennessee for its supply.

In a recent address before the merchants' convention in Atlanta W. H. White, Jr., who was asked to make a special talk on "Cattle Raising," declared that if the standard is raised in this way—by scientific breeding—it will prove a gold mine for the farmers of the state.

GEORGIA IS CRAZY ABOUT COTTON.

"The development of live stock in Georgia has scarcely started," he said. "Cattle and hogs produced in our state today, with some few exceptions, are a disgrace to our state, and the kind of live stock raised by the average farmer is a burden and expense rather than a profitable by-product.

"Everybody is crazy about cotton," continued Mr. White, "'Cussing' it and growing it at the same time, depending on cotton to pay for your lands, your education, your food and clothing, your mules, stock feed and doctor bills. If the farmer makes a good crop and gets a big price he can possibly pay the bulk of his bills. If the crop is poor or the price low he can't pay, and the merchants, are stung and can't help it, for they get all the farmer had except the cotton stalks, and they don't want them. Where are the by-products of that farmer? He had everything in cotton and therefore no by-products."

This, then, is the secret of the golden profits for the farmers in cattle raising—it serves to utilize every bit of the farm energy, part of which was waste product, and turn it all into a quickly marketable by-product.

And, then, it also results in producing a commodity that can be turned into money not at one month in the year alone—but at all different times of the year! The greater the diversification of crops, the more evenly the income is distributed through the different periods of the year. This means a sounder financial status to any farmer, and this in turn makes farm life more attractive and satisfying.

BEAUTIFYING THE FARM BY CATTLE-RAISING.

"Back to the farm!" has been the cry of economists and national leaders in thought during the past few years. The alarming rapidity with which people were deserting the farms and moving to the big cities caused a nation-wide warning to be sounded. "The fate of the country depends on the endurance of farm life," was the cry.

It was then realized that the only hope of turning back the tide of humanity toward the simple, healthful life of the farm lay in beautifying farm life and making it more attractive. Sociologists and other men of progressive thought began to institute extensive plans for stimulating rural education and bringing the people of the farm into closer touch with the civilization of the cities. Rural social clubs have been encouraged, school terms have been lengthened, and industrial education has been fostered. The automobile has become one of the strongest influences toward bringing the countryside in closer touch. The metropolitan newspapers, bringing daily the the happenings of the world to the very door of the farmer, combined to make country life more satisfying.

But probably the greatest influence of all toward revivifying the farm has been the education of the farmers toward diversification, which has brought them a varied crop with money at all seasons. The Walker farm in Tennessee is a glowing example—but there are many farmers in Georgia who practice it also. At every season of the year Mr. Walker is making money on some phase of his grain crop or his cattle. This is why he lives in a brick mansion and has all the luxuries he wants. Cattle-raising has proved for him to be a "golden calf" indeed. And it will prove the same for the farmers of Georgia if they will step in and supply Atlanta's market instead of letting the farmers of Tennessee beat them to it.

The Political Rights of Women

MRS. MARY L. McLENDON, Editor

President Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association

For the benefit of the people of Georgia who have been misinformed by the statement iterated and reiterated that "there is no Georgia Woman's Suffrage association and there are no state officers" the charter of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage association, auxiliary to the National American Woman's Suffrage association, is published by this department today.

Judge Pendleton has passed upon it and has stamped it with his official approval.

For twenty-three years a few faithful women and men have worked through this state association for the enfranchisement of women, but not until 1913 was it considered necessary to have it incorporated to preserve its name from being used by those who have no right or authority to do so.

PETITION FOR CHARTER.

Georgia, Fulton County—The petition of Mrs. M. L. McLendon, Miss S. A. Gresham, Miss Kate Koch, Mrs. Alice B. Daniels, Mrs. Amelia R. Woodall, Mrs. M. K. Matthews, all of the state and county aforesaid, respectfully show:

1. That they desire for themselves, their associates and successors to be incorporated and made a body politic under the name and style of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage association, auxiliary to the National American Woman's Suffrage association.

2. The term for which petitioners ask to be incorporated is twenty (20) years, with the privilege of renewal at the expiration of that period.

3. The location and principal office of said corporation shall be in the city of Atlanta, state and county aforesaid.

4. Said corporation has no capital stock and is not organized for pecuniary gain, but is purely educational in character.

5. Petitioners desire to purchase and hold such real estate as may be necessary for the conduct of its business, or to sell or encumber, by mortgage, lien, security deed or otherwise, the same for the purpose of the corporation.

6. The sole object of the proposed institution is to educate, agitate and organize for the unlimited enfranchisement of women, said institution to be a non-partisan, non-sectarian organization, and subject to all the restrictions incident to institutions of this kind and such as are defined and set forth in civil code sections 2836, 2837, 2839.

Wherefore petitioners pray to be incorporated under the name and style aforesaid, with the powers, privileges and immunities herein set forth, and as are now, or may hereafter be, allowed a corporation of similar character under the laws of Georgia.

LEONARD J. GROSSMAN,
Attorney for Petitioners.

Filed in office this the 9th day of July, 1913.

ARNOLD BROYLES, Clerk.

Georgia, Fulton County.

I, Arnold Broyles, clerk of the superior court of Fulton county, Georgia, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the foregoing petition for incorporation of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage association as the same appears of file in this office.

Witness my hand and official seal this 9th day of July, 1913.

(Seal) ARNOLD BROYLES, Clerk.

Georgia, Fulton county. In the superior court of said county. It appearing to the court that the petition of Mrs. M. L. McLendon, Miss S. A. Gresham Miss Kate Koch, Mrs. Alice B. Daniels, Mrs. Amelia R. Woodall and Mrs. M. K. Matthews for a charter under the name and style of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage association, auxiliary to the National American Woman's Suffrage association, has been published as required by law, and

It further appears to the court that the purpose of said corporation is legitimately within the purview and intention of the code of the state of Georgia.

It is ordered and adjudged by the court that the petitioners, their successors and assigns, be and they are hereby made a body corporate under the name and style of Georgia Woman's Suffrage association, auxiliary to the National American Woman's Suffrage association for a term of twenty (20) years, with the right of renewal at the expiration of that time, and that said corporation be clothed with all the rights, privileges and immunities conferred by law, subject to all the restrictions and liabilities fixed by law.

This, the 12th day of August, 1913.

J. T. PENDLETON,
Judge Superior Court, Atlanta Circuit.

MEN DON'T WANT THE VOTE.

In the primary elections in the state of New York last fall only 15 per cent of the voters went to the polls. In Tioga county there were 4,244 voters, but only 561 of them took the trouble to vote. In the village of Courtland there were 1,324 voters, and only 197 of them voted. Only 10 per cent of the voters went to the polls in Little Falls, only 8 per cent in Watertown and only 6 per cent in Ilion. In September, 1912, a general election was held in Ohio to vote on thirty-four radical amendments to the state constitution. Most of them were important, and one of them changed the constitutional law of the state with regard to the sale of intoxicating liquor. Less than one-half of the enrolled voters went to the polls, and the number who voted on the liquor law amendment was only one-third of the total enrollment.

George Kennan is responsible for these figures in an August number of the North American Review. They are used as an argument for the need of arousing men to a proper interest in politics and not as a proof of male unfitness for the ballot.

Do Men Want to Vote?

They say the traveling salesmen are making vigorous protests against their practical disfranchisement because of the registration laws.

One of their spokesmen, a Mr. Meyer, claims that, though the salesman is of great importance to the commercial life of the country, he is considered legitimate prey by railroads, hotels and various public corporations, because he is without representation in the making of the laws affecting him. He says it is because the salesmen have no vote and are therefore no use to the men who thrive on votes and through them on politics.

"A congressman or a senator," says Mr. Meyer, "has no interest in us for the same reason, for what good is a man without a vote to him?"

In my opinion Mr. Meyer has got sense like the old folks. His argument is conclusive to the woman suffragist's mind for she has agbred that out years ago as applicable to women.

Senator Charles Thomas, of Colorado.

It is always refreshing and encouraging for a Georgia woman to tell of good things accomplished by Georgia men. Senator Charles Thomas, who was born in Columbus, Ga., and concluded to act on Horace Greeley's advice to "Go west, young man, go west," became governor of Colorado and is now United States senator from that free state and is worth more than ordinary mention by the women of his native state. We should honor and revere him for his unfailing support of woman suffrage. Senator Thomas spoke the other day in the senate in favor of woman suffrage. He said in part: "Woman suffrage in Colorado is no longer an experiment. It has been tried and it has reached in full measure to the expectations of those who were originally its advocates. I think, therefore, I can speak as one with authority when I say that the extension of the franchise to both sexes simply extends the area of that privilege to the little which is demanded by the principle of universal suffrage."

What the Ballot Did for One Woman.

Mrs. Grace Caukin, of Sonoma, Cal., has been appointed receiver of the United States land office. She will be the first woman land agent in the United States and her salary will be $4,500 a year. Now that is much better than scrubbing floors, serving, cooking, washing and ironing and keeping the house clean with a broom! broom!! I expect she has a vacuum cleaner and sends her clothes to the laundry and raises her children without rocking and thereby addling the poor little things' brains. Mrs. Caukin was an active member of the woman's committee of the Democratic state central committee during the last presidential campaign. I think I would like her job better than that of the woman who is said to be the first woman ever placed in charge of a dining car on any railway in the world. She makes the round trip between Cincinnati and Dayton, and serves on an average of one guest every four minutes during meal hours.

Should Mothers be Teachers?

This is a live question to be decided by the board of education of New York at an early date. A "committee on the civil service of women" has been formed by a number of well known men and women of New York. The first work of this committee will be a protest against the recent report of the committee on elementary schools of the board of education, the report is adverse to the retention of married women in the public school system. Suffragists are moving to have this discrimination against the mother-teacher removed, because by its evident injustice to her and to the children of the public schools who always thrive and flourish under the care of women who are mothers. The names on the committee are Miss Helen Varick Boswell, Mrs. W. Gran Brown, Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, Mrs. Inez Haynes Gillmore, Miss Jessica Finch Cosgrove, Miss Fola La Follette, Mrs. Beatrice Forbes Robertson Hale, Mrs. Hutchinson Hapgood, Rev. Stephen S. Wise, Judge Frechi, Prof. William Noyes, Prof. Ellis Overstreet, and Dr. Henry R. Linville. Mothers are the natural teachers of children.

Action in Senate.

The United States senate has favorably reported Senator Chamberlain's resolution for amendment to the United States constitution, granting the franchise to women of the United States.

Fundamental Rights.

What are these "fundamental rights" of which one hears much from our would-be law makers.

They are embodied in the fundamental law brought down from the Magna Charta in these few words: "No member of this state shall be disfranchised or deprived of any of the rights or privileges secured to any citizen thereof unless by the laws of the land or the judgment of his peers. No person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law." The right to vote has been included among "property rights" which are protected by the fundamental law, yet woman can be deprived of this "property" if she marries an alien with whom she had been classed all her life until she enfranchised. She might have been elected to a "good, fat office," but she couldn't serve because she was no longer a citizen of the United States. It is a jag, a pack of nonsense, and men should be ashamed to let it stand for a moment.

"How long since you have seen a woman darning a pair of socks?" asks The Cincinnati Enquirer, thus offering an admirable topic for the historical societies.

Like Uncle Remus, She Tells Plantation Stories To the Children---Her Own Most Pathetic of All

She looks like Uncle Remus converted into an auntie, doesn't she? You can see she is telling the children a story, and they seem to be enjoying it.

It is not Aunt Remus, but she has more pathetic stories than even Uncle Remus ever had to tell.

This is Aunt Elizabeth Gibson, whose pathetic story has become familiar to a number of governors. She at one time owned considerable property in Atlanta, which she had had given her by her white folk and which had been supplemented by her own hard labor. But she made an unfortunate marriage, and through means which she has never been able to understand, her little property has been dissipated.

Not understanding the law, she has for several years been appealing to successive governors to restore her the property. They, of course, could do nothing, although she could never be made to understand why.

In the meanwhile she has made herself a familiar figure about the capitol, known to all the children who play on the capitol grounds. They gather around her at times, and she tells them stories of the old plantation just as Uncle Remus did.

It was in the midst of one of these stories to children that The Constitution photographer caught her. It is hard to tell which is more interested in the narrative, the old auntie or the children.

10 FRENCH FAMILIES REAR 132 CHILDREN

Paris, August 24.—A monograph recently published on the conditions of the department of Hautes-Alpes states that there are in that territory ten families with a total of 132 children, a case perhaps unique in France. One of the families have 17 children, all living, while other five died. It rest of the country would follow the same example, there would be no danger of German invasion.

You Can't Be Well When Constipated

"Keep Your Bowels Open" —Doctors Estimate 75 Per Cent of Sickness Due to Torpid Liver.

Some undigested food is left in the stomach daily, which the liver should clear away. A heavy or unusual diet, a change in water, may cause the liver to leave a few particles to ferment and clog, and the next day more are left over. So this waste accumulates, clogging stomach and intestines, and causing constipation.

That is not all. If the waste is not eliminated it ferments and generates uric acid, a poison which gets into the blood and through the system.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT immediately flushes the stomach and intestinal tract and washes away every particle of waste. It then neutralizes uric acid in the blood by dissolving what uric acid has accumulated and passing it off in the urine.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is much better than calomel, no danger of salivation, no need of an after-cleansing dose of oil. It acts quickly and mildly; never forces, griped or weakens. It effervesces agreeably. Take it before breakfast and in an hour you'll feel splendid.

Don't take an inferior substitute; some closely imitate the name, but none produces the same result. All druggists should have the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT, 25c. If yours cannot supply you, full size is mailed upon receipt of price, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(advt.)

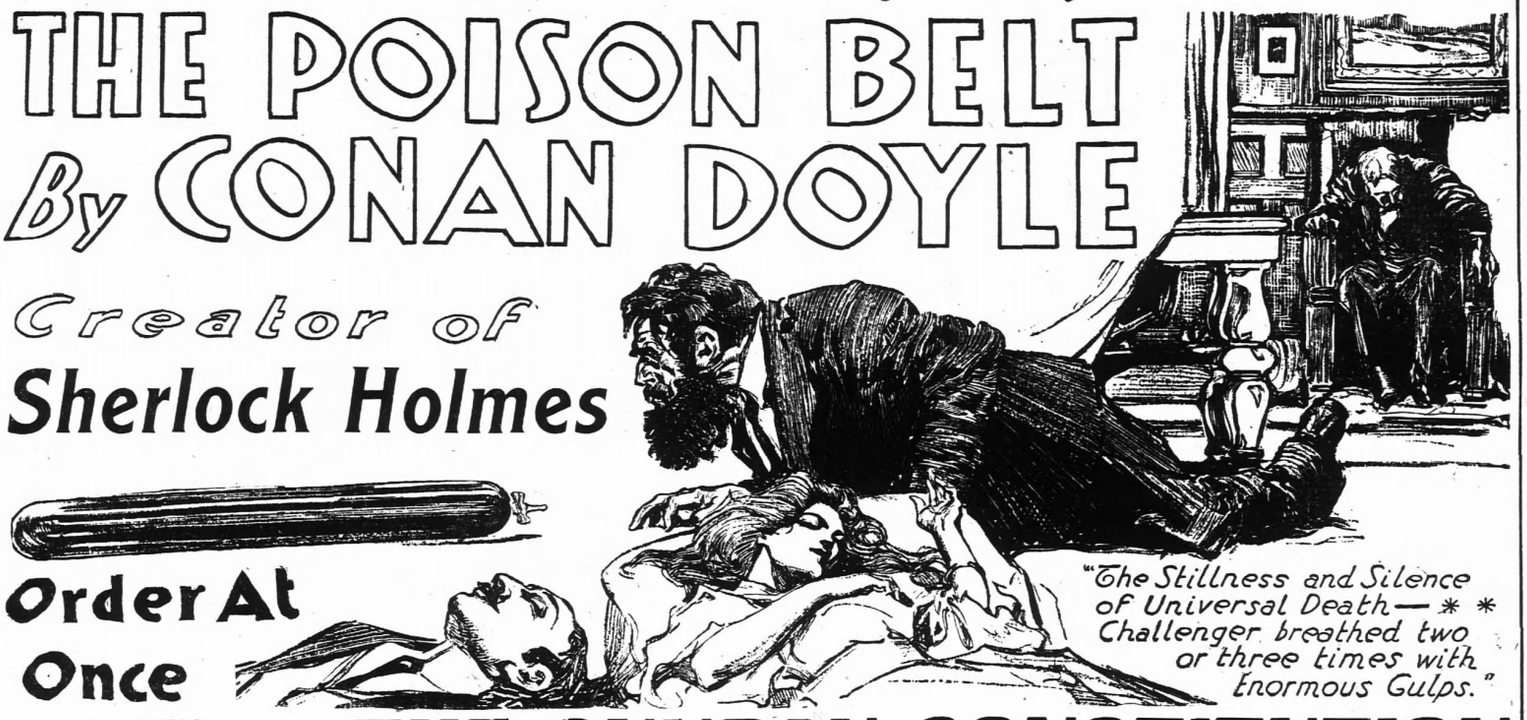
Most Amazing and Thrilling Story Ever Written!

THE POISON BELT

By CONAN DOYLE

Creator of

Sherlock Holmes



"The Stillness and Silence of Universal Death— * * Challenger breathed two or three times with enormous Gulps."

Order At Once

BEGINS SEPTEMBER 7, IN THE SUNDAY CONSTITUTION

WONDERFUL OPPORTUNITY AFFORDED READERS OF SUNDAY CONSTITUTION

"The Poison Belt," Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Latest and Greatest Story, Will Be Published in Generous Installments in the South's Standard Newspaper, Beginning With Sunday, September 7.

It isn't often that such a literary treat is offered to the readers of a Sunday newspaper as that now planned by the publishers of The Atlanta Constitution.

On Sunday, September 7, the first installment of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's latest story, "The Poison Belt," will be printed in The Constitution, and on each succeeding Sunday other generous installments will appear until this marvelous story is completed.

Stories by this gifted writer of fiction are so costly that only the most enterprising publishers care to make the large investment necessary to buy one of his masterpieces, and the people of the South are to be congratulated that they will have the first opportunity to read this entrancing story of mystery by simply buying The Sunday Constitution.

Sir Conan Doyle's price for "The Poison Belt" was $5,000, which stamps him at once as one of the highest-priced writers of the age—a writer whose words are veritable dollar marks, whose letters are nickels and dimes.

But this titled writer of mysterious romances and weird tragedies, of strange adventures and wonderful detective skill, cares little for the money end of the story business—he accepts it as a tribute to his genius as a word painter, as he accepted knighthood and the accompanying title from his king. His interest is in the strange characters he creates and the wonderful exploits he makes his fancied personages perform—in the weaving of mysterious plots of crime for a wonderful detective to unravel; in the delving into the past for characters to entrance and mystify the people of today.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle first became a great writer in the public mind through his creation of that mythical wonder—Sherlock Holmes—who at once became the model for detectives all over the world. The wonderful deductions of Holmes, which enabled him to solve mysterious crimes that baffled all other detectives, established among real detectives a new school of thought and action wherein a scientific basis was sought for the ferreting out of crimes of a mysterious nature.

SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE,
Creator of "Sherlock Holmes," "Professor Challenger" and Other Famous Characters of Fiction, and Author of Numerous Famous Masterpieces of Fiction.

Everybody knows about Sherlock Holmes, and almost everybody knows more or less about the man whose wonderful brain evolved the entrancing stories of which the famed sleuth was the central figure.

But Sherlock Holmes, great as he is or was, is only one of the peculiarly gifted mythical characters introduced to the public and made to seem as real persons of flesh and blood by this great English writer.

Sir Conan Doyle's stories of romance, adventure and mystery are numerous, and all have been highly popular, so popular indeed that he is now resting securely on that pinnacle of fame that inspires all writers to strive and strive in the hope that some time they will reach its dizzy heights and reap the reward they prize most—the acclaim of the world.

Most readers of The Constitution will vividly recall Sir Conan Doyle's marvelous story—"The Lost World"—which, for mysticism, adventure and romance, eclipsed that other wonderful story, "She," by H. Rider Haggard.

In this story, wherein his imaginary characters discovered a lost world in the hidden recesses of South America, he introduced a new character, at once as quaint and peculiar and as marvelous in his own particular way as Sherlock Holmes—Professor Challenger.

The story he told of the discovery of this lost world and of the adventures of the men who discovered it was so real that it seemed that it was recounting a historical fact, and it was difficult to believe that it was only a story.

And now this word-weaver, this marvelous picturer of things that might be, has written another great story of mystery that simply throbs with interest from the first word to the last.

Before the reader has glimpsed a dozen lines of "The Poison Belt," his interest is aroused; before the first chapter is perused he is absorbed in the mystery that beckons him on and on, and when he comes to the end of the installment he wonders why the entire story wasn't printed, even if it occupied the whole Sunday Constitution.

"The Poison Belt" will undoubtedly go down in history as the greatest of all the stories written by Sir Conan Doyle. Notwithstanding the many other entrancing mysteries he has evolved, and that each one eclipsed all other efforts, this last one seems to have embodied in its mystic interest the culmination of all his wonderful ability as a writer.

Professor Challenger, quaint, peculiar and interesting, appears in the first chapter with a proposition that simply sets the mythical world agog. And that's enough to say that the reading public will hang upon the words written by Doyle until they come to "The End."

The publishers of The Constitution urge the public to send in their orders early for The Sunday Constitution. Although many thousand extra copies will be printed in order to accommodate those who will fail to take advantage of beginning with the first chapter on September 7, it is the experience of all that thousands will be disappointed as the extra copies will go quickly.

Remember the date—Sunday, September 7.

BEGIN WITH THE FIRST INSTALLMENT SO YOU WILL MISS NONE OF STORY

Here Are the First of the Autumn Hats

THE center figure wears a hat of black and white velour, with a round crown and left rolling brim trimmed with tulip red ostrich fancy and ribbon in the same shade.

The one below that is of navy blue velour with wide upward sweeping back brim trimmed with an ostrich broom in green and blue, and which springs from the back brim. Green moire ribbon is also used.

The hat in the upper right corner is an imported model of blue satin with an elongated back brim and short visor front, trimmed with a circlet of black paradise graduating from short front flues to long ones curling over the back brim. An aigrette is posed at the back of the crown.

The next model is a small roll brim sailor with mustard color striped ostrich feathers crossed on the top and front of crown.

The last hat on this page is an elongated black velvet toque trimmed simply but effectively with a double curled pheasant quill.

THE millinery for this Autumn and Winter can be best described as chic, for while the hats are not particularly striking when viewed off the head, what a change when they are worn! But what a lot depends on the way they are placed on their wearers, for even the most beautiful may be made to look ridiculous, while the plainest may be transformed into something quite smart and coquettish.

The hat in the upper left corner is a semi-dressy model of cream and brown satin with shirred satin drapery, and double wings, one drooping over the back brim, the other curving over the high crown of this English walking shape.

The hat below it is a black velvet toque with elongated back brim, in the curve of which nestles a beautiful paradise tree, the new shape for the Fall.

The lower model is of berry red velour, with a high crown, and narrow roll brim. An ostrich fancy in a darker shade shoots from the edge of the left side brim.

DAUBERT GRABS BATTING HONORS

Brooklyn First Baseman in Front Rank of National League Batsmen — Passed McDonald Last Week.

Jake Daubert, the Brooklyn first baseman, grabbed the National league batting leadership last week, passing Charley McDonald, the Boston Braves' third baseman, who has held the lead most of the season.

Jake has supplied the most hits of any player in the National league. Tommy Leach, of the Cubs, is the leading run getter.

Here are the National league players who are batting .300 or better and who have participated in fifteen or more games up to and including those played Wednesday, August 20.

CAPTAIN W. H. CLOPTON CHAMPION RIFLE SHOT

Alabama Comes Third in Evans Skirmish Match at Camp Perry Shoot.

Camp Perry, Ohio, August 23.—By winning the president's match today, Captain W. H. Clopton, of the 130th United States cavalry, is the champion individual military rifleman of the United States. In this match he has a score of 266. Corporal C. H. Carey, of Massachusetts, won second place with 260 points. Last year's record of 235 was beaten 31 points.

The Herrick cup match, which opened Friday morning on the 800 and 900-yard ranges, was concluded today on the 1,000-yard range, resulting in a victory for the Iowa state team, which scored 1,727 points. The Massachusetts team was second, with 1,702.

The "Esterwasers" team, composed of eight of the best shots which the United States had lined up a few years ago, made a score of 1,726, but they did not shoot for prizes. This score beats the Palma score of last year, which was 1,720.

Shooting in the championship revolver match opened with three teams lined up. Colorado won with a score of 1,907, a world's record score for this match. New York was second with 916. This match was shot on the 50-yard range first and the 50-yard rapid fire with 15 shots each for record.

The final stages of the Evans service skirmish match today gave the victory to the Oklahoma team when it downed Oregon's first team, which landed second place. Alabama took third place. The match started Friday with eight teams. The twenty-two men who finished with the highest scores in the follow-up match will be lined up to shoot for positions on the Palma team early in the week.

Detroit Buys Baker.

Lincoln, Neb., August 23.—President Ernest Rowe, of the Western league club, announced this afternoon the sale of Catcher Delmar Baker to the Detroit American league team. The purchase price was not announced. Baker will report next spring.

Mattie W. Is Killed.

Des Moines, Iowa, August 22.—At the Great Western circuit races this afternoon Mattie W. stumbled during the third heat of the second day and was carried off the field with a broken leg, and later was shot.

McDermott Wins at Golf.

Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., August 23.—In a thrilling finish on the golf course with a fine seventy, John McDermott, of Atlantic City, national open golf champion, won the Shawnee Country club's open golf tournament today with a total score of 293. "Alleck" Smith, of Wykagyl, was second, with a score of 301.

Morris Rath Sold.

Chicago, August 23.—Morris Rath, second baseman of the Chicago American league club, was released yesterday to the Kansas City club, of the American association. Rath was drafted from the Baltimore club in 1911.

Didn't Speak Up.

(From The Pittsburg Post.)

"And you accepted Wombat last night? What could have possessed you?"

"You could have possessed me," retorted the girl, "but you were entirely too slow."

Colonel Peel Sweepstakes Feature Event Tuesday; McNeil Benefit Friday

Colonel William Lawson Peel will start the three heats of the feature event in the local motordrome Tuesday night, the sweepstakes that will be known as the W. L. Peel sweepstakes.

There will be three heats, with six riders in each heat. They will be 3, 4 and 5 miles and the winner will be adjudged by the number of points he gets, 10 being allotted for first, 5 for second and 3 for third in each heat.

Six riders will participate in all three of the heats and they promise to furnish local fans with the fastest time that has been made at the local track.

The second of the series of races to determine the southern champion in the mile and two miles will be the opening events. These events being known as the motordrome purse previously.

Twenty-five points to the winner, 15 points to the second man and 5 points to the third man will be allotted each night until by the middle of next month, the man with the largest number of points will be declared the champion and will compete against the stars of the east and west who are coming here.

Morty Graves and George Reiel will meet in a special match race, the best two out of three heats.

For Friday night the riders have planned a benefit night for Jack McNeil's mother, who is in Scotland. No passes will be acknowledged at the gate and everyone interested in the meet is donating his services free of charge.

Here is the complete program for Tuesday night:

Former Atlanta Boy WRITES OF HIS ADVENTURES AS LIEUTENANT ON U. S. SHIP In the Behring Sea

LIEUTENANT STEPHEN YEANDLE AND SCENES OF RESCUE OF PASSENGERS FROM STEAMSHIP YUKON.

At the top, left: Entrance of Isonotski straits, taken as the Tahoma passed out to the rescue of the Yukon's passengers and crew. This picture was taken near midnight and shows the midnight sun. On the right: The S. S. Yukon, a total loss on the reefs of Petrof, Sannak, Alaska. At the bottom, left: The Tahoma's lifeboats bringing the survivors from the Yukon. On the right: The U. S. S. Tahoma, to which steamer Yeandle is attached. In the center: Lieutenant Stephen Yeandle, U. S. N.

BY NED McINTOSH.

Twenty years ago the youngsters about town, who are now the young business men of this great city, knew a youthful buccaneer, whose craft plied the billows of the city waterworks pond, which has since become dignified by the name of Lakewood.

Many and bold were the deeds of this young pirate and his crew, and strange were the [illegible] bullrush ports they raided. Full many a frog and her helpless children went by the board at the hands of this dashing leader and his band.

But years passed and the crew dispersed. This member became a clothier, the other became a lawyer and another is a physician, and the leader alone was left. The lure of adventure was in his blood, and so he took to the sea.

This is not to state that Stephen S. Yeandle, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Yeandle, of 312 Capitol avenue, is today a buccaneer upon the high seas. Those dreams died with the days when he had to hide the yellow-backed dime novel from his dad.

Far from that, he is a very reputable and respectable officer in Uncle Sam's navy. The love of adventure and the water, though, never left him, and the letters to his mother today read like a chapter from a novel.

Many of Lieutenant Yeandle's friends, perhaps, have not heard of him since the days when he was chasing oyster pirates around the Carolina sounds in the revenue cutter Pamlico in company with that excellent good-fellow, Lieutenant Johnnie Mahr, or when he was cruising off the Georgia and Florida seaboard in the Yamacraw, and are not aware that he is now on the other side of the world from Georgia and his friends in Atlanta.

It was last February that he received orders detaching him from the Yamacraw and dispatching him to Seattle to join the Tahoma for a cruise in the Behring sea.

Accordingly, early in April, he joined the Tahoma and set sail for Arctic waters. Away from the giddy whirl of society, autos and clubs, he says in his letters home, that life is far different from what it was loafing lazily down the warm Atlantic coast, dropping in at this port and that, where friends were many and cozy good cheer flowed like wine. Nevertheless, he says that life is not bad out there, even though he does not find it necessary to ply the razor more than once every few months! For where adventure is there is Stephen Yeandle happy.

Here are some of the things, which, according to a recent letter, Lieutenant Yeandle is doing today:

"I received my United States deputy marshal's commission, also appointment as official photographer, besides feeding the crew, running the department store in the ship's canteen, carrying on target practice and building a range, standing eight hours a day watch. I haven't much to do, and am studying wireless and the Aleut language on the side."

In addition to this he finds time to run out and rescue sixty people from a wrecked ship and do various and sundry other interesting things, which he tells about in his letters to his mother.

A few extracts from his letters will tell the story of the adventures of this Atlanta boy far better than anything I might write.

Under the date of April 27, 1913, from the Northern Pacific ocean, came the first word from him after joining the Tahoma.

The opening lines of his letter serve to give an idea of how far he is from gay civilized world to which you and I are accustomed:

"Dearest Folks: By the time that this reaches you all the news it contains will be ancient history, for our coaling station at Unalaska is the only point we touch which has any pretext of communication with civilization. It is a desolate God-forsaken volcanic island, only known to the world because it is near the largest and safest pass through the chain of Aleutian islands which the ships bound for the Behring sea, Nome and the Arctic ocean can use. The Arctic ice pack extends almost to the pass and is now just opening up as it drifts north into the Arctic. Our station for May will be patrolling these passes."

Here is a touch of life in the northern seas:

"Arrived at Unalaska, April 30, after ten days at sea from Port Townsend, on Puget sound. Had the usual rough weather, with only a couple of fine days during the entire trip. Just out of Cape Flattery, we passed out at midnight, the 20th, struck the heavy north Pacific seas, and by morning the ship was a mess, as we were loaded down with stores and junk, and had quite a number of green men and boys. Nearly all the hands were beastly seasick. We plunged and bucked into head seas, with green seas coming over bows and deck. The captain, executive officer and navigator were all three suffering from malademer, and the ward room boys were all too sick to serve a meal. Scammell and I were about the only officers on our feet.

"Coming out each day, we went northward, climbing up the latitude by degrees, and the temperature kept getting lower. We struck snow-storms and rough seas, and when we arrived at the islands here found the great volcanic peaks, cliffs and rocks a dazzling snow white."

Most comforting to his mother must have been this line:

"I have put on my flannel underwear."

Lieutenant Yeandle did not say in his letters whether or not the turkey trot was in vogue among the icebergs, but this one sort of dance they have up there that has not yet reached Atlanta:

"On the night of our arrival the bluejackets gave a 'squaw dance' to the village celebrities, the men from the ship contributing decorations, refreshments, and an orchestra composed of sailors. The marshal gave the hall, and later in the evening the officers came up—it was a sight! How or whence came the 'ladies' was wonderful, but there were some forty, the missionary school having taught them English, and somehow, by natural grace, they could dance very well—all Indians, Russians and half-breeds. I can remember only a few names—Misses Sheinikoff, Pavloffsky and others, but it was funny to see our sailors dancing waltzes, schottishes and quadrilles with them. They were neatly and civilizedly dressed, except the chaperons, who clung to blankets and beads. You would have laughed at me dancing with some of the rather pretty but shy Russian belles. They are very good dancers, however."

Here is a sample of the startling rapidity with which mail is delivered in the northern seas:

"The mail will go out in a week on the Dora, which is the small steamer which is famous in this country, as it is the only ship touching at any of the islands, and it comes over from Seward, Alaska, on the mainland once a month if the weather is propitious. She is over thirty years old and has been wrecked, but saved and repaired, time and again. She can make only six knots an hour, and in stormy weather can hardly make any headway at all, so our mail is slow and uncertain."

But a bit of adventure was promised. Here it is:

"As we lay in the harbor, called Traders' Cove, we received an 'S. O. S.' call by radio. A steamer had attempted to go through the pass after a 500-mile run through or down from Nome. She came through Unimak pass without being able to see land, then, being in error in their position by reckoning she piled up on the nasty reefs off Point Petrof, Sannak island, with a crash, going high up on the rocks and pounding to pieces in the breakers. She was the S. S. Yukon, a passenger liner from Nome to Seattle, and had some sixty people on board.

"We came out through Isanotski straits at full speed against a six-knot current, which boiled and surged through the gorge. We put on forced draft and dashed out at a 14-knot speed. Clearing the straits, we ran into the fog at Cape Pankof, and, as the coasts are uncharted with reefs and rocks and currents, we slowed up and all night searched the shore of Unimak island for the wreck.

"Her wireless grew fainter as she pounded on the rocks till her instruments broke.

"They gave us their position as on Lazaref reef, but in the fog they could not tell where they were, being in reality thirty miles away on Sammak. All night we groped about in the fog. At daylight, arriving at Lazaref, we lowered all boats to search among the reefs.

"The Yukon finally got her wireless repaired and ascertained their true position and sent it to us.

"Everyone had taken to the boats when she struck, as she threatened to break up under them.

"The wireless man remained on her to keep his instruments going to keep in touch with us, as there was no other ship in thousands of miles up in these desolate seas.

"At last the fog lifted and we found her high on the reef. Her six boats were picked up by us, her occupants having been in them for seventeen hours.

"She struck at 6:45 p. m. We received the 'S. O. S.' at 7 p. m. and reached her at 11 the next morning. Even a fox terrier and two kittens were saved, and we have them now as mascots.

"I went aboard the wreck to get provisions, and you can't imagine the sight. Hundreds of thousands of dollars given up to salt water! With axes we cut into the refrigerating plant. There were long rows of frozen steers, mutton, hogs, crates of turkeys, chickens, geese and every kind of flesh and fowl. Frozen strawberries, ice cream, champagne, liquors, caviar, sweetbreads, grape fruit, oranges, pineapples, all frozen and preserved for the fine cabin passengers. I dumped cases of Scotch and rye overboard to keep them from the seamen. I caught one bluejacket knocking the head off a quart of Mumm's and swigging it.

"In the store rooms were bales of linen tablecloths, napkins, sheets and blankets, boxes of silverware, crockery, glassware—all going to Davy Jones' locker when the first blow breaks her up.

"The passengers saved their valuables and rich furs from the Yukon. One man with his wife and two babies had them wrapped in wolverine skins in the lifeboats. The rich upholstering, pianos, mirrors, paintings in the saloons all go down.

"We filled several boats with stores and put off, as we wanted to get into deep water before darkness shut in.

"We brought the sixty people over to Unalaska, opened a vacant house or hall, set up stoves, and their steward, purser and cooks soon had a hotel running to keep them till a steamer can come and take them to the states."

Here is a touch of northern desolation and spectacular landscape:

Scotch Gap Lighthouse.

"I landed with the surgeon to inspect. Only two men were there, as it is impossible to keep keepers on this station, as it is so desolate and lonely. The only ships that pass are in the summer, and these are very infrequent. None stop and there is no mail, wireless station or news. The light is on the great wild island of Unimak. This island is the one I have mentioned before. It seems to be weird and uncanny. It is very large, and has the largest volcanoes in this region. There is not a tree or bush on it. In the summer there is green grazing tundra for the caribou, but all the rest is rocks, cliffs, swift streams, cascades and snow. Shishaldin, the largest volcano, is always smoking and rumbling, and at night its white crest is lighted by the red glare from the molten lava in the crater.

"I wrote you about the man we took off this island who had spent three years seeking gold, living like a wild man in caves and huts. He spent a year trying to get a ship to leave on.

"Here is an interesting item bearing on the present situation between the United States and Japan. According to Lieutenant Yeandle, Japan would not seem over-anxious to break her treaty with the United States. Says he:

"The present treaty has kept the sealing vessels out, and after two weeks' cruising in northern and western parts of the Behring sea we have not sighted a vessel of any description. Up to last year the cutters captured and seized several each season, and at Unalaska there are now half a dozen confiscated sealing schooners all Japs, but it seems to be effectually stopped now."

An echo from the glories of yesterday comes in Lieutenant Yeandle's mention of the Thetis and her present unique mission of hauling the United States court of Alaska from place to place.

"The Tahoma and the Thetis are alongside at Dutch harbor, three miles from Unalaska. Dutch harbor is the abandoned plant, wharves, coal pile and stores of the American Commercial company. It was built and boomed for the Klondike gold rush, but is now deserted. We have had a very pleasant few days alongside the Thesis. She came from Honolulu and the South Sea islands to Frisco, then to Valdez and picked up the United States court of Alaska and is going up into the isolated places, the court trying all cases having arisen during the last year. Corcoran is in command. He graduated from Annapolis with Casey Morgan, of Savannah. Maker, Parker, Derby, Odenhal are on her.

"The Thetis is a comfortable, large old barque. Admiral Schley first became famous in command of her when he rescued Greeley from the Arctic."

Rising to a Point of Personal Privilege to "Roast" Newspaper Men Enjoyable Prerogative to Legislator

This is how the members of the house of representatives' press table looked when Representatives McMichael, Wohlwender and Hardeman got through with them. From right to left they are Jim Ashury, of The Georgian; Estes Doremus, of The Journal; Ned McIntosh, of The Constitution, and Johnnie Reese, of The Macon Telegraph.

Never before in the history of the Georgia general assembly has it been such a high honor to be "personal privileged" that is, to be verbally snatched bald-headed—as at the session just adjourned. And no session probably ever produced so large and efficient a crop of personal privileges.

Personages of all rank got theirs, from the president of the senate to "Men and Religion Forward Movement, including the representatives of the press.

Needless to say, the scribes of the things that happen, or, according to the allegations of some of the personal privilegers, did not happen, bore the brunt of the fire.

Be it understood at this point that the scribes are in nowise peeved. Though it be but to read his title clear in the choicest of language, no newspaper man is ever deeply grieved toward a person who will talk. But verily is a reporter up the creek without a paddle when a man saith unto him, "Soothly, I have nothing to say!"

Every reporter at the house press table succeeded before the end of the session in bringing down upon his pate the ire of some member of the house.

Well, in the forefront of the session Estes Doremus, otherwise known as "King Dodo," of The Journal; Jim Asbury, of The Georgian, and Ned McIntosh and Tom Conner of The Constitution, had "got theirs," but Johnnie Reese, the wise old owl of The Macon Telegraph, walked scot free. Naturally, the Macon correspondent felt somewhat elated, but, being a retiring sort of man withal, he made no mention of the fact more than a modest half column in The Telegraph.

Truly doth pride escore a man to a fall.

The last day of the session slipped up, and still J. Reese did not "get his." But on that day Mr. McMichael, of Marion county, "riz to a p'int" and stayed "riz" until that "p'int" was fully explained. Thus fell the mighty Johnnie!

But when the legislature was over all was well with the goose hangin' high. Both the privileged and the privilegers agreed upon a peace conference on the house portico and the hatchet was buried until next session.

Permanent Playground For Negro Children Is Needed in Atlanta

By Isma Dooly.

The closing exercises of the playground for negro children took place Thursday afternoon, Alice Carey, the director, in charge. There were a hundred and two children present, these playing games and engaging in athletic sports.

Mrs. Charles J. Haden, Mrs. Lyman Amsden and Mrs. Lott Warren representing the City Federation of Women's Organizations were present, and commended the good work of the playground.

The fact that during the vacation months the court had fewer petty offenders among the negro children than at any time for many months, is directly traceable to their directed recreation in the playground, and suggests the need in Atlanta of a permanent park or playground for negro women and children.

"It would save the city in the cost of the probation court, and take from the street many a troublesome little boy and girl, if there was a permanent place where they could play, and be under protection," said Alice Carey, when asked about the matter.

"I think such a site might be provided near the congested districts of the fourth ward, and prove the best remedy for many evils which confront the child whose crowded, uncomfortable home forces him into the street, or who has no one in his home to care for him during the day. To industrious working mothers, the playground for the child would be a great help, and during her recreation hours she could go there. I would not bar men the privileges of such a park, but think it should be restricted to men who would go with their children and help in the recreative pleasures for the little ones.

"Two-thirds of the negro children in Atlanta under school age are left at home alone all day, their fathers and mothers employed out of the home, and it is these children who naturally become the little criminals of the street. If, however, they had a designated place where they could play, and where they could be looked after, the result would prove beneficial to both the child and the community-at-large.

"The city could provide a small site at comparatively little expense, and I believe this is going to be one of the cases where 'we will ask and receive.'"

This country has imported $16,000,000 worth of gems since the first of the present year. Somebody must be trying to square himself wit his wife.

ATLANTA PREPARING FOR SEASON OPENING

Theater Will Be in the Best of Shape for the First Show Wednesday Week.

Final preparations for the opening of the theatrical season will be made this week when the Atlanta will be thoroughly cleaned, retouched with paint brushes and otherwise made ready for regular usage. The opening will follow the cleaning and on Wednesday night of next week the first performance of 1913-14 will be given.

For the opening of the house, Klaw & Erlanger have secured a bright little musical comedy bearing the title of "Mary's Lamb." It is full of laughter and song hits and will be played by an excellent company, with Den McGrath in the leading comedy role. McGrath is a comedian who has won his spurs and he is certain to please the Atlanta public.

After the first week the attractions come thick and fast. Some of the greatest stars in America and Europe are booked at the playhouse, and during the season Atlanta will be offered more big shows than in any past season. More legitimate stars will appear than ever before, while a number of new and pleasing shows without stars will be offered.

During the week, in addition to cleaning the house and surroundings thoroughly, the management will test all the fire apparatus and test out the precautionary methods in vogue to prevent fires and disasters. The fans and cooling arrangements will also be given attention.

The management announces that arrangements have been made to protect the feet of women patrons when cold weather comes through the laying of carpets over the entire lower floor. The one complaint registered against the house in the past has been this drawback. Now that it is remedied the Atlanta will prove the most delightful as well as popular playhouse in the south.

You can generally get around people you can see through.—Chicago News.

JEWELRY IS RECOVERED BY ATLANTA DETECTIVES

The efficiency of the detective force was demonstrated Saturday when City Detective Coker, assisted by representatives of the Burns Detective agency, succeeded in running to earth the burglars who on last Sunday night entered the home of J. W. Russell, 3 LaFayette drive, in Ansley Park, and made away with diamonds and other jewelry valued at considerably more than $500.

Acting on a tip given them Wednesday, Detective Coker and the Burns men have kept a close watch over Preston Fleming, a negro who, with his wife, was formerly employed by Mr. Russell as a house servant, and Friday the man and his wife, Callie Fleming, entered a local pawn shop and disposed of one of the smaller articles taken from the Russell home. Going to the home of the couple early Saturday morning, in the rear of 292 Juniper street, a thorough search of the entire house and contents was made by the officers, but no trace of the stolen jewelry could be found. As they were about to leave the house, Detective Coker made the suggestion that the mattress of the bed be cut open, and when this plan was carried out, all of the missing pieces, with the exception of the one pawned, were found. The jewelry taken from Mr. Russell's home included several valuable diamonds and one handsome watch, besides a lot of smaller pieces which were valued chiefly as heirlooms.

DR. DUBOSE TO DISCUSS PROTESTANT TRIUMPHS

At his evening service tonight, Dr. H. M. DuBose, pastor of the First Methodist church, will speak on "The Triumphs of Protestantism."

At a recent meeting of the Catholic societies of this country it was declared that "Protestantism is a demonstrated failure."

The discourse of Dr. DuBose proposes to show the contrary of this utterance. The service begins at 8 o'clock Sunday evening.

BRENAU COLLEGE-CONSERVATORY

PANORAMIC VIEW OF PART OF BRENAU'S WONDERFUL EQUIPMENT

COMBINING an "A-1" college of literary note, with a wonderful conservatory of music and a foremost school of oratory, it at once becomes the South's most progressive college for women and earns its title of a national educational institution

Special Announcement

The course of study of Brenau has recently been revised in accordance with standards of foremost American universities and colleges. Hereafter the degree of A. B. will be the only degree granted. The requirements for admission to Freshman class are fourteen units.

Two-Year Courses

For the benefit of many girls who can remain in college only two years, courses are arranged so that diploma may be received and the title of Associate in Arts conferred at the end of two years after the high school. This is similar to the practice of the University of Chicago.

Preparatory Courses

Courses equivalent to the work of a first-class high school are offered and provision is made to receive pupils as young as fourteen years of age.

Music, Oratory, Art, Domestic Science

These subjects are especially suited to the needs of the average woman, and may be offered at Brenau as electives for the A. B. degree. Diplomas in each of these subjects are also offered.

Brenau has no competitors in the South in these special courses, and the demand for teachers who are graduates of Brenau is far greater than can be supplied.

The next term begins September 11. Only a few places are still open.

New Book Ready

A beautiful new book, entitled "Brenau Girl," has just been published. It is sent free upon request.

"BULL" YOUNG DIES FROM KNOCKOUT

His Opponent, Jess Willard, the Promoters and Seconds Are Arrested, Charged With Manslaughter.

Los Angeles, Cal., August 23.—John W. "Bull" Young, a cowboy heavyweight pugilist, died in a hospital here today of injuries received at Vernon arena last night when he was knocked out by Jess Willard. Immediately after his death warrants charging manslaughter were issued against Willard and eleven others connected with the fight, while leading citizens, men and club women revived the demand for an anti-prize fight bill in California.

The operation on Young's skull to relieve the cerebral hemorrhage which followed a terrific knock-out in the seventeenth round of the scheduled twenty-round fight with Willard, failed to save the man's life, but rapidly proved otherwise. The pugilist remained in a state of coma from the time he received Willard's right uppercut to the jaw until he died this morning, when the physicians gave up their attempt to conclusion of the bout.

Warrants Issued.

When Young's death was made known Sheriff W. A. Hammel, who had charge of the arena, issued orders for the arrest of Willard and all others connected with the fight, and bail warrants for them were issued by Judge Graham in the superior court. The warrants charged the following with manslaughter: Jess Willard, the opponent; Thomas McCarey and Al Greenwald, promoters of the fight; Harry Hammond, manager of Young; Tom Jones, manager of Willard; Charles F. Gotthelf, referee; Jack Marshall, colored, and James B. Cameron, colored, seconds of Willard; Charles Bauer, John Bueva and Harry Monahan, seconds.

Through arrangements with the attorney for the Pacific Athletic club, under whose auspices the fight was staged, the men named were promptly surrendered to the authorities. Cameron Webster and Ansilmer Sevetson for Willard, it was promised by the attorney, would appear in court Monday.

Jeffries on Bonds.

The nine who surrendered were arraigned before Justice Austin of the Peace Summerfield this afternoon and their preliminary examination and fixed Willard's bail at $5,000 and those of the others at $1,000 each. The bonds were provided by James J. Jeffries, former heavyweight champion of the world, and Tom Rilk, a cabaret proprietor. The accused were released.

It was said the defense of the men would be based on a ruling of Superior Judge Frank H. Willis that contests limited to municipalities were legal. His decision was rendered several years ago in the cases of George Melsing and Al Wolgast who were arrested for prize fighting.

Referee Lyons declared the only "hard blow struck in the fight was the knock-out punch and that was the finish no damage was done." He said there had been no occasion for stopping the fight.

Sentiment against prize fights grew rapidly as the day among many classes of citizens.

Antis Now Rave.

State Senator W. E. Brown, father of the anti-prize fight bill killed by two votes in the last legislature, promised that an appeal to the citizens of California and a fund of an initiative million would result in a big boxing prize fight bill.

Arrangements for the funeral were in charge of his brother, Noah Young. It was said the body probably would be taken to the father's home at Gordon, W. Va., for burial.

Because of the death of Young, Arthur Pelkey's climatic to the fifth of boat-race entertainments was called off his scheduled match at Vernon September 5 with Billy Miller.

Pelkey who was knocked out by Luther McCarty in the first round of the latter's Atlantic City debut, remained here several months and was a warm friend of Young's. He said today that he could not realize that the man whose Young was fatally injured with an entire but sorrow in his heart.

No expression of opinion was obtainable today from officials of the Pacific Athletic club as to how Young's death would affect the scheduled fight Labor day between Leach Cross and Frankie Burns, or the contest September 9 between Joe Rivers and the winner of the cross-Dundee match.

Atlanta leads the southern league teams in sacrifice hits up to and including the games played Tuesday, August 19, with 293. The others follow in this order: Birmingham 284, Nashville 278, Mobile 270, Memphis 154, Montgomery 145, Chattanooga 144, New Orleans 128.

MARIST BOYS READY FOR FIELD SERVICE

When Capt. W. T. Winston of the United States army, a graduate of West Point, took up in Europe on detailed work, to drill the boys there, he reaches Atlanta next month he will find Marist college cadets equipped with magazine rifles of the 1903 model and a complete field equipment as well as field service.

One hundred and fifty rifles of the '98 model reached Atlanta a day or two ago consigned to the Marist college and were receipted for by Major Eugene Schmidt, for more than ten years commandant of the cadets.

DR. C. W. DANIEL RETURNS FROM SUMMER OUTING

Dr. Chas. W. Daniel, pastor of the First Baptist church, has returned from his outing in the mountains and will fill his pulpit today, morning and evening. Visitors are invited to come early to be sure of a good seat.

She Had Money.

(From The Chicago Record-Herald.)

"And why," she asked, "do you think the world is better now than it was twenty-five years ago?"

"Because you were not in it then," he replied.

"Ah, I'm afraid you wish to flatter me. I am nearly 28."

"Is it possible? Well, in a way I'm glad of it."

"Why?"

"You see, I'm 37, and I don't believe any man ought to be more than eight or nine years older than his wife."

"Oh Horace! How romantic you are! I wonder if any other man ever adopted such a lovely way to let a girl know that he cared for her."

Field Day Next Wednesday At Ponce De Leon Park

There will be a field day at Ponce de Leon park next Wednesday, with the players of the Crackers and the Turtles contesting for prizes that will be offered by local merchants.

Here are the list of events and the prizes offered:

100-Yard Dash—Winner to receive a hat, donated by Law Brothers.

50-Yard Sack Race—Winner to receive $5.

Circling the Bases—Winner to receive a pair of shoes, donated by Byck Brothers.

Fungoe Hitting—Winner to receive two silk shirts, donated by Parks-Chambers-Hardwick company.

Long Distance Throwing—Winner to receive a silk umbrella, donated by George Muse Clothing company.

These events will precede the game between the Thrtles and the Crackers that afternoon.

A baseball field day is always an interesting event, and a good crowd is sure to be on hand to witness the sports.

MARATHON CO. GIVES NOTICE OF CHANGE

Herff-Brooks Corporation of Indianapolis Takes Over General Sales Agency.

The Marathon Motor Works, of Nashville, Tenn., who are the builders of the popular Marathon cars, have announced a change in their sales organization that is one of the important features of the automobile season.

In order to devote themselves exclusively to the building of their cars and relieve themselves of the heavy expense attached to the maintainance of a large sales organization, they have entered into an arrangement with the Herff-Brooks corporation of Indianapolis, whereby all Marathon cars will hereafter be marketed by this well known firm.

The Herff-Brooks corporation is incorporated under the laws of Indiana with a cash capital of $100,000 paid in. The officers are: Jacob Herff, president; Otto Brooks, vice president; George Herff, treasurer; H. H. Brooks, secretary and general manager.

The Messrs. Herff are prominent Indiana financiers and for a lifetime have controlled the Marathon sales in the state of Indiana. They are therefore thoroughly acquainted with knowledge of the car, and of the excellent sales points that have place it one of the large factories of the country.

Mr. Brooks has been connected with the Marathon Motor Works since its organization and has contributed to its position as General sales manager, of the factory, brings to this corporation a rare knowledge of the car itself as well as an established reputation for salesmanship that puts him in the front ranks of the big automobile men of the country.

The Marathon output this year will be five thousand cars, it is the new sales agency only regret that they will not have a larger number to place.

The location and low operating cost of the factory in Nashville and the facilities enjoyed by the new corporation will enable them to put a price on the Marathon cars that will make their demand practically unlimited.

CRACKERS LEADING IN DOUBLE PLAYS

Atlanta leads the Southern league teams in double plays up to and including the games played Tuesday, August 19, with 86. The others follow in this order: Montgomery 85, Nashville 81, Chattanooga 77, Birmingham 76, New Orleans 63, Memphis 60, Mobile 59.

USEFUL BOOKLET IS BEING PREPARED BY ATLANTA CHAMBER

A distinct surprise is in store for all members of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and others who will receive the first copy of the booklet now being prepared by the industrial and statistical bureau, of which W. H. Leahy is head.

Proofs on the book are about completed, and is now in the hands of the printer. Besides containing a complete copy of the "blue-sky law" recently passed by the legislature, there will be a column devoted to notes of the chamber of commerce, complete convention news, and the activities of the convention bureau, of which Fred Houser is secretary. Information on the new manufacturers' exhibit and other interesting data.

This booklet will be issued from time to time, and mailed to all chamber members and others interested in the civic and commercial work of Atlanta, and the state at large.

A Challenge.

Meers and Andlow, the winners of the water sports day at Lakewood last Wednesday, issue a challenge to any and all swimmers in Georgia.

A Kick on the Head.

The angry citizen puffed into the office. "Didn't you," asked the editor.

"See here, sir," he yelled, "what do you mean by publishing my resignation from my political office in this way?"

"You gave the story out yourself, didn't you?" asks dthe editor.

"Of course I did!" replied the angry citizen. "But your fool paper prints it under the head of 'Public Improvements.'"

TIRE EXPERT ON FUTURE OF THE MOTOR TRUCK

With First Class Highways, Motor Truck Will Come Into Competition With Trains.

"The future will no doubt see the motor truck, when operated on first-class highways, a means of solving the railroad situation," says C. W. Martin, Jr., manager of the motor truck tire department of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, Akron, Ohio.

"The building of railroads made possible a wide distribution of the population and an expansion in agricultural production. The rise in manufacturing tended to hold great populations within narrow confines of cities and towns, which attract to them increases from the rrual districts.

"Railroads, too, were the means of bringing from distant points the materials for manufacturing and also food for the workers in manufacturing.

"Now we have the population of the country living in town and cities, the demands upon the railroads for distribution of materials of agricultural and mineral production are increasing every year.

"The motor truck has demonstrated its economy and utility and has suggested a more comprehensive application to the needs of the country. Instead of household goods can now be moved from one town to another with only two handling instead of four.

"There has been comparatively little effort towards the organization of motor truck service as a definite and important part of the transportation system. However, with the country equipped with the right kind of improved highways organization of this kind will be effected generally and profitably.

"The various truck tires that are built for special service will be given a big boost. The detachable rear tire built for speed, the side flange tire for medium weight trucks, and the solid demountable and block tires for extra heavy haulage, will all have greater opportunity of displaying their qualities to advantage.

"The motor truck, as a ready means of conveyance from city and country, may be expected, under the improved highways movement, to check the migration of population from farm to town. In turn, it will make farm lands more valuable, farm life more profitable.

"Secondarily, it will tend to drive from the town life thousands which before have shunned the country because of its comparative isolation. Organization of motor truck service should naturally bring about the creation of new centers of industry and trade."

IN STEALING BASES GULLS ARE LEADING

Mobile leads the Southern league teams in stolen bases up to and including the games played Tuesday, August 19, with 243. The others follow in this order: Birmingham 241, Montgomery 176, New Orleans 175, Atlanta 147, Memphis 139, Nashville 116, Chattanooga 83.

"Worse Than Football," Say Atlanta Boys Who See Indian Polo Game

With incomprehensible tales about the Indian war dances and polo games they encountered on their cross-country tramp to the Great Smoky mountains of Virginia, three Atlanta boys returned to the city Friday. In ten days they walked 230 miles, carrying their outfit along on a mule and camping in the woods at night.

The tramp carried them through the Cherokee Indian reservation in the "great smokies," where they declare on their word of honor they saw the Indians dance around their fires all night long in preparation for a polo game on the following day, and that the game itself was "worse than football."

They got about 18 on each side, every man with two little sticks in his hand with which he had to pick up the ball and fighting, running and kicking they scrambled for several hours without making goal until they all fell out for dead or exhausted except one man, whose side then won the game.

The three Atlanta boys were Tillou H. Forbes, of the Northwestern Life Insurance company; Elliott Cheatham, an attorney, and C. J. King, of the Associated Press. The fourth man in the party was Will Fort, of Mount Airy, Ga.

WALTER DUBARD SWIMS LIKE FISH

Wins All-Around Honors at East Lake Saturday—Miss Nora Stirling Wins Ladies' Prize.

By Hal Reynolds.

The aquatic sports promoted at East Lake yesterday afternoon by the Atlanta Athletic club were a huge success.

One of the largest crowds ever assembled at the club turned out to witness the contests. They were treated to a fast and exciting card of events. The crowd was estimated to be over the 500 mark.

Dubard Gets Cup.

Walter Dubard was the winner of the beautiful silver cup for the best all-round waterman, donated by Frederick Hoyt, with a total of 11 points.

Miss Nora Sterling won the silver vase donated by Al Bowman, for the winner of the ladies' events with 15 points to her credit.

The silver medals for the second best in men's and ladies' events were won by William Lamar and Miss Ida Nash with 9 and 7 points respectively.

Walter Looks won the bronze medal for third in the winner of the consolation race for men.

The time made in the 440-yard race, in which Leads was the winner, was very fast—8 minutes and 31 4-5 seconds.

Canoe Race.

The race which proved the most exciting to the spectators was the canoe race for men. Seven men in this event, whenever the referee fired his pistol, the entries had to jump out of their canoes, right the thing in again.

Dubard and Logan would undoubtedly have won this race had not Logan lost his paddle the first time he jumped. From then on Dubard paddled against two men in each of the other canoes. Coles and Locke came from behind in the last 25 yards, winning by only 2 minutes and 35 seconds.

Captain B. H. Schlomberg and Frank Greene, of the United States V. L. S. corps, gave an exhibition of fancy diving, which was greatly enjoyed.

The summaries:

First Event.

440-Yard Race for Ladies—Miss Alexa Sterling, Miss Ida Nash. Time of winner, 12 minutes and 35 seconds.

Second Event.

50-Yard Dash for Junior Members—Evans, Adair, Upshaw. Time, 1 minute, 54 seconds.

Fourth Event.

440-Yard Race for Men—Logan, Dubard. Time, 6 minutes, 31 4-5 seconds.

Fifth Event.

50-Yard Dash for Ladies—Miss Nora Sterling, Miss Ida Nash, Miss Regina Rambo. Time, 1 minute, 49 seconds.

Sixth Event.

100-Yard Consolation Race for Men—Locke, Hall. Time, 2 minutes, 24 4-5 seconds.

Seventh Event.

Swimming and Canoe Race for Men—Coles and Locke, Dubard and Logan, Crane and Crawford.

Eighth Event.

Tug of War in Water—Team captained by Dubard defeated the team led by Hale.

Ninth Event.

Fancy Diving for Ladies and Gentlemen—Miss Alexa Sterling, Miss Regina Rambo, Miss Ida Nash, Miss Ruth Richards. In mens event Osborne first, Dubard second.

The Keynote of Modern Business Is "Service"

The Permanent Exhibit Pushing on to Success

Atlanta Manufacturers Are Subscribing For Space In "Atlanta Made" Exhibit Which Assures City Standing Monument to Her Greatest Achievements.

The way in which the Atlanta Manufacturers are subscribing for space in the permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods, which is to be established in the top four flors of the new chamber of Commerce building, is acting as an eye-opener to the layman who didn't previously realize what a number and diversity of articles are made here. Over half of the space is already taken and it is expected that when the full reports come in early next week that every inch will be spoken for. It behooves every man who is desirous of coming in on this splendid advertisement for the city and or each individual plant here, to make his reservation at once, if he doesn't wish to be left out in the cold.

There are over 600 manufacturing plants in Fulton county, and, while it is impossible to care for everyone of these in the space provided, nevertheless it is evident from the list of exhibitors that the whole display will be a representative one of the best class of manufacturers here.

The list of those who have signed for space is given here. This does not include those who have stated that they would take space, but who have not yet signed the contract.

WILDER GROWS COTTON.

Well-Known Syrup Man Believes in Crop Diversity.

We are in receipt of a letter from the D. R. Wilder Manufacturing company, the well-known syrup refiners, which announces the fact that they are practicing crop diversity with reverse English, as it were. The outcry of the diversified crop protaganists has been less cotton and more of other crops, in order that this section of the country should not be so dependent on one-crop farming. The Wilder company have a large plantation at Cairo, Ga., where they grow a great deal of sugarcane and make a great deal of syrup. This year they decided to diversify their crops, and so planted some cotton. On Friday, the 8th instant, they ginned and sold the first bale of cotton in Grady county for the season of 1913. In other words, the first bale of new cotton.

We are glad to have received this announcement for these columns, as we most certainly do appreciate evidence of progress and hustle from any source.

Bill Gaston, with Fain & Stamps, states that The Constitution Firing Line is certainly read by the folks at home. He says he has heard from everyone of them about the refreshments taken on a certain fishing trip, mention of which was made here.

Ben F. Dodson is the name of a new addition to the force of the J. K. Orr Shoe company. He will cover the territory in the middle and northeast portions of Texas.

BIG BARBECUE HELD YESTERDAY

City Salesmen's Association Holds Annual Barbecue at Cold Springs—Over Five Hundred Present.

The City Salesmen's association held their annual barbecue at Cold Springs our grounds yesterday afternoon. There were over 500 people present and everyone showed that they regarded the time they had as one of the best ever. These annual barbecues have been given by the association for many years past, and it is the general opinion that, while the first one was good, each has gone better than its predecessor.

A number of excellent speeches were made yesterday and the eating, music, dancing and entertainment were all at least 22 karat.

Incidentally, President Simmons, of the association, was heard to remark that they numbered more members now than ever before in their history and that the things for which the association stands are in more prosperous condition than at any time in their history.

Which makes the whole thing satisfactory from every viewpoint.

News of the U. C. T. Atlanta Council 18

By E. M. Luncefordi, Secretary.

We are glad to report that reinstatement of Brother E. S. Vickery.

Brother W. J. Elliott, executive committeeman of Atlanta 18, is at Borden Wheeler Springs recuperating for a few days and getting in trim for the 1914 Southern Merchants' convention.

We have missed the "Aves" from our meetings for several weeks. Where is he?

Brother R. E. O'Kelley is in Orange, N. J., for a few days getting his line in readiness and at the same time giving the No Name Hat Manufacturing company a treat by his genial personality.

Wonder where Brother H. D. Shackelford is spending his vacation? Nobody seems to know, but we hope to hear from him through these columns.

On account of the hot weather we will have no more meetings until the fourth Saturday night in September, when we will open up with a good meeting and several applicants to be initiated. Let's have a record attendance.

Do you know that Atlanta council 18 meets every second and fourth Saturday of the month in the K. of P. hall in the Kiser building at 8 o'clock? If you haven't been attending, think of some excuse to get there.

Have you received a letter from Grand Counselor Weir with reference to membership? If you haven't, ask about it.

The report of our representative to the supreme council, T. B. Lewis, was heard at our last meeting. There were a number of things he heard and saw that you should know. When you see him, ask him.

News of the U. C. T. Fulton Council 505

By P. S. Brownlee, Secretary.

Brother W. A. Baughn, who hits the road in the high places, was in town last week for the first time in several weeks.

Brother Theo A. Brown, who has been farming this summer near Decatur, is now back on the road and left for his territory in South Carolina.

Brother W. H. Higginbottom, made a special trip to Fitzgerald for his firm last week and reports business excellent.

Brother George E. Maddox, the hardware man, spent quite a while in Senoia last week. Why?

Brother A. R. Tucker, the Armour man, is back on the road after his vacation looking like the "morning after"

Brother T. E. Mathews, with the Pittsburg Plate Glass company, is back from his vacation and out on the Firing Line again.

Brother J. M. Wingfield, who has been at home sick for some little time, is reported better, we are glad to say.

One of our new members, Brother John H. Collier, has returned from a New York trip and is now in his south Georgia territory.

The following list of new members were initiated at our last meeting: D. A. Collings, J. W. Cooper, C. P. Owens, C. Schneider, O. K. Parker, H. B. Mashburn, Dennis Fleming, H. C. Cox and G. B. Williams.

HARRIS WRITES LETTER.

Some Erroneous Ideas on Relative Values of Cities.

Percy W. Harris, the well-known and deservedly popular salesman for the A. M. Robinson company, is back in his South Carolina territory, sending in those big orders after being rejuvenated with some of the Atlanta spirit during the convention. Mr. Harris left last Wednesday, and before going penned a little epistle to the editor of this department. He expresses some views about the value of Spartanburg as a city which may be all right as far as the actual rim of places go, but when he places the Carolina town ahead even of Atlanta it is like stating that Shady Dale, Ga., is a bigger theatrical center than New York city. However, we are quite willing to accede that Spartanburg is a nice little town and is growing right along in a most precocious manner. Also we would like to indorse the sentiment in reference to Secretary John Wood, of that town. We have had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Wood and nothing that can be said about him is too good.

Mr. Harris' letter is given in full:

"Ralph T. Jones, Editor Constitution Firing Line—Dear Sir: I know, as all men know, that the 13th is unlucky, yet some of the big things have occurred on that date. So I am starting out on this trip on the 13th of August, 1913. Before I leave I beg to hand you this small letter and if you can find anything suitable you have my consent to publish what you wish.

"Come to my city, Spartanburg, some time. I'll be glad to see you and do all I can to make your stay pleasant. You will find Spartanburg the best town in the world. Greenville is mighty near as good as Spartanburg and is close to us in location. I would say that Spartanburg is the best town in the world and Atlanta is the best town in the south. Spartanburg is the 'City of Success' and if you don't believe it, write John Wood, secretary of the chamber of commerce, there. And John Wood is the best of all. Come to see me. Very truly,

"PERCY W. HARRIS.

"P. S.—Inclose a few paragraphs which you may like."

STEALING THE REPUTATION OF
"ATLANTA MADE" GOODS

The FIRST MONCRIEF FURNACE ever made was made in Atlanta in 1898. It is the only furnace manufactured in the South and was originated by Mr. S. P. MONCRIEF. Hundreds of these furnaces have been placed in Atlanta homes, and the owners have all been pleased, not only because they are buying "Made in Atlanta" furnaces, but because they are as good value as can be found anywhere in the trade.

This business has grown until there are now more than 125 people in Atlanta dependent for their support on the manufacture of these furnaces.

NOW comes the T. E. Henry Furnace Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, and establishes a branch in Atlanta, on Walton Street.

We welcome honest competition as do all Atlanta manufacturers, BUT these people are trying to STEAL the name "MONCRIEF" as well as the business which has been built up. They are represented by R. A. JONES, who is stating that he is with the original Moncrief Co., and that the firm is no longer on South Pryor Street, but is now on Walton Street.

IT IS NOTHING BUT A PLAIN STEAL. REMEMBER THAT THE ORIGINAL FIRM, MANUFACTURING THESE FURNACES IN ATLANTA, is the Only 5½ Days More of August Furniture Sale

Then the red tags which mark 10 to 50% reductions will be removed and prices will return to normal.

We regret the termination of this sale. Six months' careful planning and advantageous buying have made this August sale an unprecedented event.

Monday marks the beginning of the last week of the red tags. Saturday noon the doors shut on the 10 to 50 per cent reductions on all furniture.

Despite the low prices we are willing to concede the following:

Selections of furniture may be made now and delivered at any time up to October 15.

If more than the usual 30 days' credit is desired, terms can be arranged through our office.

PHYSICIAN'S BILLS AND AUTO UPKEEP

Two Things Average Man Dodges as Long as Possible to Damage of Health and Ruin of His Automobile.

For some unexplainable reason the average American citizen balks at paying physicians' bills and upkeep expense for his automobile. The physician must live and is worthy of his hire, although this is disputed by new thought devotees and notables like Fra Elbertus Hubbard.

The owner of an automobile must necessarily spend a certain amount for upkeep each season. One of the important items of expense is the tire, and tire makers have never been able to build a tire that would last as long as the automobile, so replacements must be expected.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars are spent each year for tire upkeep alone and the motorist is constantly confronted with the problem: "What tire is the easiest riding and will give me the most mileage for my money?"

The selection of a tire is important. Upon it depends the peace of mind and comfort of the user, as well as the amount of money spent for tire upkeep.

Mr. Price, local manager of Diamond tires, when approached on this subject, stated: "All leading tire builders have labored incessantly to produce an automobile tire that would give the user the best service for the least money. They knew the day would come when the motorist would demand 'More Mileage.'

"Speaking of our own company, we realize that this more mileage tire must come as a result of co-operation between our chemists and engineers. So ever since we built the first pneumatic tire in America, fifteen years ago, our company has searched and brought together at the Diamond Tire factories at Akron, Ohio, the brightest minds, the best brains and experience money could procure—men recognized in the rubber industry as leaders of their profession.

"The result was that at the opening of the automobile season we were able to announce the discovery of Vitalized rubber. These tires have stood the test and have delivered the mileage the motorist pays for and has a right to expect. As the months have gone by Diamond Vitalized rubber tires have grown in popularity till our factories were literally swamped with orders. In order to meet the increasing demand our factories have been running da yand night. We have increased our force of tires builders, put up new buildings and installed new machinery.

"Motorists everywhere quickly adopted the Vitalized rubber tire, and for the past three months we have not been able to fill all orders promptly. With our greatly increased production we are now filling all dealers' orders promptly. This will be good news to the thousands of motorists who have been unable to get their Vitalized rubber tires as quickly as wanted, as well as to those who are interested in reducing their tire expense.

"We are building enough tires now to supply the demand, so no one need be disappointed again by delayed deliveries."

In reply to a question, Mr. Price said that one of the most common tire abuses in city motoring was the sudden stopping of the car. "As a rule," said Mr. Price, "the motorist instead of stopping slowly will keep on full speed and then clap on his brakes. The brakes should be inspected as regularly and as carefully as any other part of the automobile. They often get out of line, and an uneven brake pressure is very expensive.

"When the brakes are uneven it often happens that one wheel gets all the pressure and leaves the other wheel free. The result is that the thread on the tire that is compelled to stand the entire pressure from the brake grinds off, peels and is naturally short lived. A little extra care on the part of the owner of the car to see that his brakes are properly set will often result in a big saving in tire expense."

FINE INDICATION OF GENERAL PROSPERITY

Makers of Automobile Tires Are Running Overtime to Supply the Demand.

Akron, Ohio, August 23.—One of the indications of a healthful business condition and general prosperity has been the fact that the makers of the automobile tires have been running their factories overtime to keep up with the demand.

In an interview today Mr. W. O. Rutherford, of the great B. F. Goodrich company, operating the largest rubber factories in the world, made the following statement:

"Yes, it is true that as soon as the automobiling season was on our dealers were crowded with orders for Goodrich tires.

"Owing to the unprecedented demand for this popular make of tires we have been unable to fill all of our orders within a reasonable time. As a consequence, in some cities motorists have been subjected to annoying delays, which we very much regret."

Continuing Mr. Rutherford said: "When we have had any changes in prices to announce in the past and wanted quick action, we have invariably used the advertising columns of the daily newspapers. In the very near future we will announce to motorists through the newspapers that we are now filling promptly all orders received from our dealers.

"It has been an uphill fight to attempt to bring up our production so that we could ship all orders promptly. But we are pleased to say that by installing new machinery and adding to our force of expert tire builders, we can, for the first time this season, meet the ever-increasing demand for Goodrich Lait Molded tires. This news, we are sure, will be welcomed by motordom, especially those who have insisted on having our particular brands and been compelled to wait till our production could be increased sufficiently to meet the record-breaking demand we have experienced this season."

Easily Explained.

How the senate can spend so much time in session and make so little progress with the work of tariff revision would seem inexplicable if it were not public business.

1914 Overland $950

35 horsepower Electric lights 114-inch wheelbase

Again the price comes down—

—again the value goes up!

—again we prove the power and possibilities of large production.

Last year we built 40,000 cars. This was not enough for the demand by nearly 10,000 cars. This year we will manufacture 50,000 cars (twice as many as we did two years ago), cover the car with additional value and, what will strike you as most remarkable, MAKE THE PRICE LOWER THAN EVER. Such is the net economical result of manufacturing one type of automobile on an enormous scale.

You who have followed our success from season to season have watched our annual models grow in value and decline in price. And as our prices came down our production went up. We have always and unfailingly given the public more automobile for less money than any other manufacturer in the industry.

Here are the big 1914 facts!

The motor has been enlarged. The bore is 4⅛ inch—stroke 4½ inch. It is conservatively rated at 35 horsepower and will develop 50 miles an hour. It has a five-bearing crankshaft and three bearings on the camshaft.

The wheelbase has been lengthened to 114 inches. This, as you know, is the average wheelbase of $1200 cars. And a long wheelbase eliminates road jars and rut jolts.

The tires are larger—33 x 4-inch Q. D. Large tires insure less upkeep expense, smoother operation and add to the appearance of the car.

The body design is symmetrical and graceful. It will appeal to those who admire the beauty of simplicity. It has a European cowl dash and full U doors (fore and rear) with disappearing hinges. The body is richly finished in dark Brewster green, edged with lighter green stripings and trimmed in heavy polished nickel and aluminum.

The upholstery is Turkish—soft, luxurious and comfortable. The rear back-cushion is 18¼ inches deep.

$950 Completely Equipped

Specifications and Equipment

With Gray & Davis Electric Starter and Generator—$1075 f. o. b. Toledo

Electric head, side and tail lights	Brewster green body with light green striping, nickel and aluminum trimmings
Storage battery and ammeter	Cowl dash
35 horsepower motor	Turkish upholstery
114-inch wheelbase	Mohair top and boot
Timken bearings	Clear-vision windshield
Splitdorf magneto	Stewart speedometer
Model R Schebler carburetor	Electric horn
Three-quarter floating rear axle	Flush U doors with disappearing hinges
33x4 Q. D. tires

Brakes are very large. Respond gradually, positively and smoothly without jumping or jerking. Either brake will keep the car under perfect control at any speed with a full load.

Rear axle is three-quarter floating, fitted with the famous Hyatt bearings. Front axle is I-beam section drop-forged in one heat without welding. Timken bearings on front wheels.

The equipment is the pick of the market—and is complete. It includes such high-priced features as one of the finest electric lighting systems with storage battery. Head, side and tail lights are electric. Dash light is also electric. All light and control buttons are located on the dash under the cowl. Set flush with the dash is a $40 Stewart speedometer—the most practical speed indicator in the world. Timken bearings, Splitdorf magneto, Model R Schebler carburetor, Electric horn, 18-inch Steering Wheel, Mohair top and boot, and a clear-vision windshield are a few of the many other finishing touches that go to make it the car complete.

The foregoing is but a short digest of the newest Overland, yet it concisely itemizes and sums up the greater Overland value. When you fully realize what an exceptional and economical buy the 1914 Overland is—after the great value facts have become firmly lodged in your commercial and calculating brain, remember this—THAT IN THE VERY FACE OF THIS INCREASED VALUE THE PRICE HAS AGAIN COME DOWN.

Price reduction is a condition that is controlled and regulated by factory facilities—the larger the manufacturer the lower he can market his merchandise. As we are producing more cars of this type than any other manufacturer in the world we can effect industrial economies which make it possible for us to market a car that will, on the average, cost you 30 per cent less than any other similar model.

Now—see this car.

Deliveries will be made according to the action you take. Prompt action means prompt delivery.

Demonstrations now going on all over the world. Make your appointment immediately.

22 3-4 ACRES ON PEACHTREE ROAD FOR $3,200.

THIS IS a real bargain. It is worth every dollar of the price for farming purposes, and everybody knows the results from acreage tracts along Peachtree Road. This, like others, will soon sell by the front foot, and it has about 900 of them. It also has a tenant house on it. It is not located within the city limits. It is just about as far out, figuratively speaking, as Buckhead was a few years ago. It is a beautiful site for a country home, and no property has a better future as an investment.

PRYOR STREET OPTION.

88 PRYOR STREET, next to Mitchell, between Thrower building and the new Dougherty-Little-Redwine Company building. We hold an option on this lot, and it will expire soon. THIS IS NOT SPECULATIVE PROPERTY—it's ripe for a tenant now. Two of the best jobbers in town are considering it as tenants, but we must act at once. We will guarantee to deliver this far cheaper than anything in the block, and we think it is $50 a foot better than anything in the block. See us.

FOR SALE BY FOSTER & ROBSON 11 EDGEWOOD AVE.

WE HAVE a real home of eight rooms with every modern convenience on one of the best north side streets, near West Peachtree and Peachtree, for $7,000. This is a sacrifice, as owner is moving away from the city. It will pay you to investigate this. See Mr. Frederick or Mr. Radford.

IN THE EAST LAKE section, convenient to both Decatur and East Lake cars, a 6-room house, built of good material, but not modern. Two-room servants' house. On a dandy corner lot, 100x200 feet. $2,100 will buy it. The lot alone is worth $1,500. Modernize this place and you will have a splendid home or place that will bring you good profit. See Mr. Bradshaw.

40-ACRE farm convenient to Stone Mountain car line. Poor improvements, but good land. Plenty of woods. Cheap for $75 per acre. Also on Redan Road, 14 miles from Atlanta, 40 acres. Some upland. Some bottom land and some beautifully wooded land. No improvements. Cheap for $40 per acre. See Mr. Hook.

IN THE thriving little town of Smyrna, Ga., the coming suburb of Atlanta, on Marietta car line, and W. & A. R. R., situated on large shady lots, near depot, we have two nice 5-room cottages, with plenty of porch room. We recommend these for either homes or investment. See Mr. Eve.

IF YOU ARE looking for a beautiful lot to build a home on we have one in Ansley Park at a bargain. See Mr. Cohen.

YOU ARE requested to inspect Nos. 184, 190 and 194 Stewart avenue. These are 5 and 6-room cottages, on elevated, shaded lots, fronting the car line. Must be sold quickly. Low prices and easy terms. We will submit any offer. See Mr. White.

INVESTMENT

WITHIN the half-mile circle we have two houses on a lot with 98 feet frontage that we recommend as a good investment. The rental is $1,310 a year. With a good cash payment we will give terms of eight years on balance. It will be hard to duplicate this buy. Telephone us.

We Have Sold in

ANSLEY PARK, within the past month, five homes aggregating $39,785 in price. That isn't a bad record, is it? Bear in mind that there were a number of sales made in the same time through other firms.

IF YOU HAVE been thinking of buying in this beautiful park, don't you think it is time to get busy? Just eight years ago the grading teams were busy laying out Peachtree Circle, Fifteenth street and other Ansley Park streets.

THAT'S HARD TO REALIZE, isn't it? Well, eight years from now there will be even harder things to realize. If you are interested in an Ansley Park home or lot, it will pay you to see us.

GET IT WHILE IT'S HOT

J. W. O'Donnell, with Dobbs & Wey, leaves Wednesday with his samples for the fall and Christmas trade. He will go direct to Albany from here, where he will show his usual holiday display. The remainder of the sales force will leave a week from tomorrow.

C. A. Smith, with the A. M. Robinson company, reports a mighty good week's business. He has sold about $4,000. The company also reports fine house trade and good business from all the men, making one of the best weeks of the year.

W. B. Reacham, the J. K. Orr shoe man, from Athens, Ga., returned last week from Chicago, and was seen in the house Saturday.

W. J. Thebaut, with the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company, made a mighty fine record of sales last week.

J. E. Ivey, special gas engine man with the John Deere Plow company, has been in the city all week on special work.

Mack Hirshberg, with the Hirshberg company, is now in Key West. He is busy taking plenty of big orders, and will probably be back in about two weeks. W. C. Tennant and Max Samuels were both in for the week-end.

P. G. Stanley, with the Lamar & Rankin Drug company, who has succeeded R. M. Sloan in his territory, is doing extra good business just at present.

The Gramling-Spalding company report that their men are getting some unusually big business, and that prospects are excellent.

Allen Edwards, out-of-town shipping clerk with Fain & Stamps, will spend his vacation next week at the home of his parents in Cobb county, near Marietta. His brother, Cliff Edwards, states that he will have his youthful days recalled by being sent out in the country. Mr. Stamps is looking forward to acting in the absent one's capacity for the week.

L. A. Redwine, vice president of the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company, leaves Wednesday for New York, buying notions and gents' furnishing goods for the spring trade.

The ins this week with the Brown-Perryman & Greene Co. are J. O. Chambers, J. F. Tate, C. D. Dickinson and J. H. Martin. William Hughes is vacationing at Newnan.

Thos. E. L. Adams company reports prospects as the best for years and that they are enjoying some of the best business they have seen for some time past, with a most optimistic outlook.

L. B. Robinson, with the A. M. Robinson company, was out Saturday for the first time last week. He has been sick at his home, but is recovering surely and rapidly, fortunately.

President E. G. Thomas, of the Rice & Hutchins Atlanta company, returned Friday last from a three days' visit to Cincinnati, where he attended a conference of the different Rice & Hutchins men. This week he goes for a short vacation into the Nacoochee valley, and then will start his traveling men out with their spring models, which are now being lined up for them.

H. P. Lovelace, who has long been with the Consolidated Paper company, in the capacity of shipping clerk, took his first trip on the road last week, going up the Seaboard Air Line as far as Athens. He did excellent business, and will probably be out the greater part of his time in the future.

The Dixie Pickle and Preserving company report that they will bring all their salesmen in this week for a big local advertising campaign.

The John Deere Plow company, of Atlanta, report that their general office manager, R. C. Hipp, is away on his vacation at Manchester, Ohio. William Shoemaker, their south Georgia salesman, who has been sick for the past three weeks, left for his territory again last Thursday.

The Hirshberg Co., were found this week hard at work on school goods. They are supplying a large quantity of the Alabama school and college theme tablet. This is a wonderfully good tablet, and is used exclusively in the schools and colleges of Alabama.

C. M. McLaughlin is a new road man with the Lamar & Rankin Drug Co. He has now been out for about two weeks and has sent in some mighty nice business. At present he is in middle Georgia. Previously, Mr. McLaughlin was a member of the house force.

Both Messrs. Malone and Carlton were found last Friday up to their eyes in work. They just had time to say "Howdy!" and remark that C. C. Phillips was cleaning up in great style in south Georgia, before it was "Good-bye."

W. F. Spalding, of the Gramling-Spalding Co., returns from Lebanon, Ky., tomorrow, where he has spent a week visiting his mother. President T. A. Gramling returned last week from a month's vacation in Tennessee and Indiana, stating that there was no state like Georgia and no place like Atlanta.

James Rainbow Thornton, with the S. P. Richards Co., who has been in for the past three weeks, will go out the latter part of this week. The company reports that the mail orders are still rolling in, and that their catalogue has been a splendid investment.

The M. C. Kiser Co., report that their men are all out and that the whole crowd, Messrs. Benson, Diehl, Kenimer, Addy et al. are sending in plenty of good business.

Yesterday was Sport Ramseu's birthday. He is an important member of the Fain & Stamps house force, but refused to divulge his age.

E. E. Shyer, with the Consolidated Paper company, came in yesterday from Rome, Ga. J. C. Mason is laid up with a swollen foot at his home in Cuthbert.

The ins this week with Fain & Stamps are W. T. Bailey and J. C. Owens. Bill Quarles, city salesman, was sent back on the job Saturday, after a vacation at his summer home near Smyrna.

The ins this week with the Dougherty-Little-Redwine Co., are W. F. Seay and J. O. Castleberry. A. S. Wilkins will spend Sunday at Sharon, Ga., and A. M. Wilkins will be at Comer, Ga.

Dave Perryman, a member of the firm of Perryman Bros., Heflin, Ala., and a brother of the well known Perryman of the Brown, Perryman & Greene Co., was a visitor at their place yesterday. He will remain in the city for about ten days.

SOME DOINGS OF THE BOYS IN ATHENS

By Sam Woods.

L. R. Martin, salesman for the Flint Tobacco company, came in Thursday to be here several days, meeting the trade.

W. A. Bell, salesman for the National Biscuit company, reports good business.

J. A. Cook, salesman for the Dinkins-Davison Hardware company, was here Wednesday.

Leo Gotthelmer, salesman for the National Pencil company, was here this week. Leo is an old Athens boy and claimed the Classic City as home until a few years ago.

"Bill" Smith is again with us and still pushing "Red Jay" tobacco.

Will Hudson, salesman for the Lamar & Rankin Drug Co., was here this week.

George McGuire, salesman for the Knoxville Flour mills, was in the Classic City this week.

F. M. Hailey, with the N. O. Nelson Manufacturing company, reports conditions good in the territory he covers.

D. L. Barnwell, salesman for the Remington Typewriter company, was here Thursday.

Tillman Funk, salesman for the Forty-Four Cigar, is just in from a trip through eight states.

Claud Henley, the hardware salesman, who has been sick for quite awhile, is not improving fast, but continues to grow weaker. The cooler weather lately has been in his favor though.

SALESMANSHIP.

The convention just closed has been of value in many ways. But one way in which it has proven profitable is in the better salesmen who will go out from Atlanta as a result. This is a point in connection with these occasions which is commonly overlooked and one which is of big importance.

The opportunity to mingle with their fellow salesmen, the merchants and the house men, together with the chance to listen to the vital problems of business discussed by practical speakers, is one which no salesman who is alive to every chance to increase his own selling power will overlook. The mere mingling in social intercourse with these men will add to the strength of personality of each and every salesman, and it is always a case is salesmanship that the stronger a personality a man has, the better salesman he is, provided he expresses that personality in a selling manner. It is in the intercourse with our fellows that we receive the most and the best education, and this convention intercourse is like a post graduate course to any man whose business demands the force of a sales argument every time he wants to increase his value to his firm. The more a man knows of human nature the better is he equipped for his business which takes him amongst that human nature, and the only way to learn men is to mix with them and get to really know them and let them know you.

ANNUAL CONVENTION.

C. J. Van Houten & Zoon Hold Convention in New York.

A letter from A. J. Edmondston, the genial Rona Cocoa salesman for this territory, tells of the annual convention of the salesmen of C. J. Van Houten & Zoon, recently held in New York. William Cruser Cushman, manager, was in the chair, and a very progressive meeting was held.

Mr. Edmondston states that he left for Savannah last Tuesday to make a 7,000-mile trip through his southern territory. He will be in Atlanta to work the trade about October 20, but will be here visiting for a week-end or so before then.

OFF ON VACATION.

Secretary Takes Rest and Goes to Wrightsville Beach.

Secretary Harry T. Moore, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association, is now away at Wrightsville beach enjoying some well-earned relaxation. Probably the busiest man in the city throughout the recent Southern Merchants' convention, the association showed their appreciation of his untiring efforts by telling him to go and rest up just as long as was necessary. So Mr. Moore left last Thursday for the coast to inhale the ozone and disport himself in the roaring surf, etc.

MAKES CHANGE.

Well-Known Dry Goods Salesman Goes to New Connection.

Lewis Parker, one of the best known dry goods and notion salesmen traveling out of Atlanta, has recently made a change of connection and will henceforth send his expense accounts to another Atlanta firm. He will be with the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company from now on, and both he and his new firm are to be congratulated on the acquisition.

SPEEDY MITCHELL KILLS PRAIRIE DOGS

Pilot Car in Reliability Run in North Dakota to Quick for the Little Pests of the Prairies.

Some incidents of annual national reliability tours held under the auspices of the American Automobile association stand out prominently and keep alive traditions that the veterans of these runs like to discuss. Perhaps none in the nine annual events approaches in interest incident of the 1912 tour that marked the trip from Minot, N. D., to Williston, at the western edge of the same state. A unique, novel and entirely unparalleled record was made at this time by the Mitchell "Mouse" pilot car—a record that the grain farmers still are talking about, and which, in all probability, will be discussed as long as automobiles traverse the trails.

First of the cars to get away early in the morning on its confetti-spreading task, the Mitchell "Mouse" generally hit up a speed of 55 miles an hour. Thousands of little prairie dogs were abroad in the highways and at the edges of the grain farms, evidently keen for an installment meal. These rodents were accustomed to ponies and slow-moving four-wheeled vehicles, but their little brains had not been developed to give warnings at the approach of speeding automobiles. Being averse to getting out of wheel ruts until they came to the paths that led to their warrens or underground nests, the plump little fellows waddled along seeking the line of least resistance.

Pilot Frank Zieloz, who also had acted as pathfinder for the tour, is not bloodthirsty, but he has small use for gophers and prairie dogs as nuisances. Frequently he has seen fifty dead prairie dogs lying along the trail, ever as a warning from an exasperated farmer to the denizens of the dog villages.

A few more carcasses along the highways for the boys to gather for bounties," said the driver of the Mitchell "Mouse" as his machine sped along and crushed the victims.

It is no exaggeration to say that on the day that the national tour took the motorcade from Velva, the "Magic City"—to Williston, the pilot car alone destroyed nearly two hundred prairie dogs. The machines that followed got their proportion of the killings, but the first car away generally found the prey for the tires more plentiful.

"Just like spreading a new kind of confetti that dazzles the way a driver of a contesting car put it. There was no danger to the trail after that Moose had gone by. As a matter of fact, perhaps, the pilot car contributed considerable addition to the wheat crop by doing such pronounced work in killing the pesky dogs. At any rate, no automobile driver ever made such a record as a juggernaut—no other machine ever got out so early or made such a fast run."

WILKES-LINCOLN FAIR IN PERMANENT HOME

Washington, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—Permanent buildings are being erected for the joint county fair which is to be held in this city in October by the progressive farmers of Wilkes and Lincoln counties. After the signal success of last year's fair enterprise, the Wilkes-Lincoln Fair association was organized several months ago with a capital stock of $6,000. A splendid site has been purchased, large and commodious buildings are now being erected and the prospects of another successful year grow more promising as the date of the opening draws nearer.

Interest in the agricultural resources of northeast Georgia and the wonderful fertility and reasonableness of the soil in this section has been wonderfully enhanced through this agency. The boys' corn clubs of the two counties have taken a prominent part in the preparation for this year's exhibition. Agricultural experts declare that for the first time in the history of these two counties, a sufficient quantity of corn will be raised this year to more than meet the demands of home consumption and leave a balance to be shipped to less enterprising communities.

WINS $10,000 SUIT FOR LOSS OF LEG

Cordele, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—One of the most important civil cases on trial at the present term of the superior court of Crisp county was concluded late yesterday afternoon when W. B. McMichael, of Jacksonville, Ga., was awarded a verdict of $10,000 in a suit against the Seaboard railway. McMichael, who is a nephew of the late Judge John I. Hall, of Macon, had been a freight conductor on this road, running between Atlanta and Birmingham, and, in an accident near Birmingham, he lost his left leg. The amount sued for was $25,000, and the case was tried under the federal employees' liability act of 1908.

AUSTELL MAN CHARGED WITH SNATCHING PURSE

Charged with snatching a pocketbook from the hand of Mrs. A. W. Williams as she walked on a downtown street on Friday afternoon, Herbert Cloud, a white man, 25 years of age, claiming to be a merchant of Austell, Ga., was arrested Saturday afternoon and taken to the station house.

The pocketbook, which contained $3, was taken by a man fitting Cloud's description who, after snatching it from Mrs. Williams' hand, darted around the corner and disappeared in the crowd of afternoon shoppers. Cloud stoutly denied his guilt when taken to police headquarters, and states that he came to Atlanta late Friday evening, and therefore could not be the man wanted.

Mrs. Appleyard Recovers.

Washington, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—Mrs. T. J. Appleyard, of Tallahassee, Fla., wife of Florida's state printer, who was stricken with paralysis on her right side two weeks ago just as she entered a railway coach to return to her Florida home, is sufficiently improved to return to Florida today with her husband and two daughters who have been with her since her serious attack.

MUNICIPAL CAMPAIGN OPENS UP IN MACON

A. L. Dasher and Wallace Miller Fighting Bridges Smith, Administration Candidate.

Macon, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—Macon is now in the midst of what gives promise of being one of the bitterest municipal campaigns this city has ever seen. It is to be a fight against the present city administration which the organization is determined to preserve, though to do so it will have to resist a cross fire, there being three mayoralty candidate in the race, two of whom are planning to center their fire on the administration.

Several months ago, in fact, shortly after he was elected to council on the administration ticket, Alderman A. L. Dasher began attacking the administration. This began with his attack against the street railway, closely followed by the fight against the police department in the Chapman-Bernstein affair, and has since been followed by any number of anti-administration moves. Shortly after Alderman Dasher was defeated in his effort to discredit the administration through his fight against Chief Chapman, he announced his candidacy for mayor and since that time has been plugging steadfastly away, proving himself a nimble fighter, but apparently outclassed by his heavy opponent—the administration.

For months it was known that Bridges Smith, the former mayor and present chief executive, would be a candidate for the administration, but it was only a couple of weeks ago that he made his announcement.

Miller Announces.

For a few days it looked as though the race was going to be between Smith and Dasher, but a week ago a new figure loomed up on the political horizon in the person of Wallace Miller, member of the legislature from Macon's young lawyers. Young Miller is a son of A. L. Miller, himself a former mayor of Macon.

Young Miller, like his father, is a close personal and political friend of Senator Hoke Smith and this fact will inject a touch of the Joe Brown-Hoke Smith bitterness into the fight. With these lines so closely drawn, there is some speculation as to just where Mr. Bridges Smith will stand. The people he is banking heavily on the laboring class for support, though just where his claim lies is not clear to the casual observer.

Bridges Smith is a union man and holds a card in the Typographical union. He is a member of the printers—in the days when the type setting was done by hand. Heretofore he has always had the bulk of the union support and his friends see no reason why he should not have it again.

Born on the Hill.

Though admitting that Wallace Miller is a formidable candidate, the smith adherents declare they do not fear the young lawyer, but are pulling for down as the "silk stocking" candidate, probably because of the fact that he was born and reared "on the hill." Behind his candidacy they see the hand of W. J. Massee, president of the Georgia Public Service corporation, who, when defeated from the presidency of the Macon Railway and Light company, and other Leach properties a couple of years ago, started a power company of his own and has since been waging an unrelenting warfare against the company with which he was formerly connected, with no little degree of success. Mr. Massee's brother was one the five committeemen who selected Miller's aldermanic ticket.

Dasher Runs Alone.

It is not generally believed that Mr. Dasher will have an aldermanic ticket, but will make the race for mayor by himself. He has declared that only death can remove him from the race.

Headquarters were opened today by both the Smith and Miller campaign committees and it will be seen which one was formerly connected, with no little degree of success. Mr. Massee's brother was one the five committeemen who selected Miller's aldermanic ticket.

Dasher Runs Alone.

It is not generally believed that Mr. Dasher will have an aldermanic ticket, but will make the race for mayor by himself. He has declared that only death can remove him from the race.

Headquarters were opened today by both the Smith and Miller campaign committees and it will be seen which one has already secured support. Mr. Dasher has been conducting an active campaign for several months.

The opening gun of the Miller forces will be fired at a mass meeting to be held in a few days and it is stated that a series of meetings will be held during the campaign, which will give those unalterically inclined a chance to show their prowess.

Bridges Smith, while he will not do any campaign speaking himself, will nevertheless have plenty of men who know how to defend him on the platform, if necessary. Mr. Smith knows practically every man, woman and child in Macon and he intends to make his move of a personal, man to man, sort of campaign.

As for campaign managers, Howell Jemigan, assisted by T. J. Simmons, Jr., will manage the Miller campaign, while Bridges Smith and A. L. Dasher will head a joint campaign. Smith will lead a strong campaign committee, though up to date Dasher is fighting single-handed.

The primary will probably be held early in October.

REWARD OFFERED FOR MERIWETHER NEGRO

The last thing which Governor Slaton did before his departure for the west was to offer a reward of $150 for the apprehension of Walter, alias "Buddy" Dasher, a negro of Meriwether county, who is wanted for the murder of L. C. Marchman.

Mr. Marchman was a well-to-do white farmer living near Greenville. He had caught the negro in the act of committing a crime, arrested him and was carrying him to Greenville to turn him over to the authorities, when the negro is said to have excused himself to go into a cabin for his coat. Instead of getting the water, he went in, procured a shotgun and shot Mr. Marchman dead. He made his escape and is still at large.

There is much public feeling over the case in the community where the crime occurred.

REJECTED BY A GIRL, HUBNER KILLS HIMSELF

Sterling, Ill., August 23.—Charles Hubner, of Tampa, Fla., committed suicide in a local hotel today. He left a note stating that he took his life because Miss Anna Kulogowski refused to marry him following his trial for murder in Tampa.

Tampa, Fla., August 23.—Charles Hubner, who suicided in a hotel at Sterling, Ill., today, shot and killed Henry Felts, a well-known truck grower at Plant City, several months ago. He was acquitted after a plea of self-defense. Following the acquittal Hubner was taken to a hospital in delirium. He created a sensation on the witness stand by antics which led many to believe he was insane.

MANY CONVERSIONS AT GRACE CHURCH REVIVAL

The first week of the evangelistic campaign at Grace Methodist church has ended, and the second week be-

REV. J. M. BASS,

Who preaches three times at Grace church today.

gins today with full revival services, commencing with the Sunday services.

Mr. Bass will preach three times, a 11, 3:30 and 8 o'clock. The afternoon sermon will be to men only on the theme of "Manhood." Mr. Stapleton will render several solos and the large senior and junior choirs will lead the great congregations in sacred songs.

A number of persons have professed conversion and applied for admission into the church. Dr. Jones and his official members are pleased with the meeting so far, and expect large developments during the second week. Mr. Bass will preach daily at 10 and 8 o'clock, and will conduct special services for women and children.

WILD MAN IS CAUGHT NEAR SAN FRANCISCO

San Francisco, August 23.—A wild man was caught today in Marin county, across the bay from San Francisco, by Sheriff Keating and a deputy, and will be held pending an inquiry to determine whether he is sane.

Efforts to converse with him have been unsuccessful.

For nearly two years complaints have been made by residents of Camp Taylor of a wild man that frightened women and children and pilfered articles of food. Until yesterday Sheriff Keating had been unable to track him to his lair. The officers stumbled upon his camp by accident, and had no difficulty in arresting him.

His few clothes, which were of American make, were fashioned into the semblance of a Turkish costume. His general appearance and swarthy skin strengthened the sheriff's belief that the man was an Oriental.

The camp revealed a curious combination of primitiveness and civilized equipment. It was built around three big hollow trees, one of which was used for sleeping quarters. The floor was carpeted with the skins of animals. In another tree the wild man had rigged up a kitchen. The third tree was the storehouse, and contained quantities of nuts and dried berries. Nearby was a potato patch, carefully cultivated.

NEXT PEACE CONGRESS TO BE HELD IN VIENNA

The Hague, Netherlands, August 23.—The twentieth universal peace congress had its closing sitting today. The delegates voted to held the next congress at Vienna in 1914.

The peace congress finished its labors after recording a further series of good intentions and its appreciation of President Wilson's attitude towards peace. The thanks of the congress were telegraphed to President Wilson.

The question of the fortification of the Panama canal was resurrected today by Professor Slayden, of Washington, and Professor Slocum, of Colorado, who secured the passage of a resolution asking the United States not to fortify the canal.

In another resolution delegates expressed their satisfaction at President Wilson's proposal for the submission of disputes which could not be settled diplomatically to investigation by an international committee.

WOMAN TAKES A SHOT AT HOSPITAL DOCTOR

New York, August 23.—Shot at by a woman who stood at arms length from him in Sixth avenue yesterday, Dr. Howard C. Taylor, a visiting physician at Roosevelt hospital, escaped the bullet and, believing that he had aimed at another person went to his home, ignorant that he was the intended victim.

A few hours later Dr. Taylor was informed of the facts, among them that his assailant had been identified as Hedwig Turozer, 29 years old, a servant, whom the physician had operated upon for appendicitis.

Arrested on a charge of assault, the woman said she had regarded Dr. Taylor responsible for illness that followed the operation, according to the police, and had decided to kill him. A girl companion of Miss Turozer at the time of the shooting was also arrested.

AERIAL NEWS SERVICE FOR THE U. S. WARSHIPS

Washington, August 22.—Uncle Sam's aerial "news service" whereby the officers and men of the United States warships far out at sea are kept informed each night of the baseball scores and other items of interest, has proved a great success.

Reports to the navy department from one battleship Illinois, which has just returned to home waters with a big party of midshipmen, declare that the reports were picked up readily by the vessel when it was 2,173 nautical miles out at sea from the navy's powerful station at Arlington, Va., and 2,610 miles distant from the station at Key West.

The battleship also reported intercepting wireless messages from European stations.

Spooner's Weekly Auto Gossip Gathered From Many Sources

When their contract expires with the Ford Motor Company, Dodge Brothers Manufacturing company will put a new automobile on the market to compete with the Ford. This will be July first of next year. Work will be started at once upon an addition which will be fully as large as the present Dodge brothers plant, and which will furnish employment for at least 4,000 men at the outset. The Dodge brothers, John and Horace E., have made the major portion of the parts for the Ford automobiles since the mammoth business was started ten years ago. The division of the two companies will necessitate the construction by the Ford company of an immense plant, the size of the Dodge plant today to make the parts which have been manufactured by the Dodge brothers. These changes will add two factories to the manufacturing plants to Detroit, employing from eight to ten thousand men and will mean an increase in the population of fully 40,000 people.

The new car will be known as the Dodge car and it will probably sell at a little over $1,000. The Ford people completed the combined Dodge brothers plant will be fully as large as the Ford. The new structure will be 2,100 feet in length and the first unit, which will be 900 feet in length and contain 1,800,000 square feet of space, will be completed immediately. In speaking of the great move, Mr. John Dodge said that the business of Dodge brothers had grown to such enormous proportion that it was too large to depend upon one maker. He said that last year the company manufactured 180,000 sets of parts for the Ford company and there are now going through the factory 10,000 sets. He then in the automobile business, the Dodge brothers will manufacture every part of their car. Mr. Dodge will resign as vice president of the Ford company, but the Dodge brothers will not withdraw as stockholders in that company. They own one-tenth of the stock and drew $1,000,000 in dividends last year, and recently drew another million and consider their one-tenth interest as worth $20,000,000. It was stated some time ago that the Ford company had purchased this one-tenth interest for $20,000,000, which was denied. General report has it that material for 25,000 cars is being purchased by the Dodge brothers.

Operations have been started by the Tiffany Electric company, purchasers of the Flanders Manufacturing company plant at Puntiac and orders are on hand for over 100 cars. Shipments will be started in thirty days according to E. Le Roy Pelletier.

It is seldom that an organization either in the automobile field or any other field has a club membership amounting to ten per cent of the total number of members. The Wolverine Automobile Club is noteworthy as the registration book in which all members and their guests register daily upon entering the club shows that fully ten per cent of the club are really daily users of the club rooms and the privileges that go to members.

Charles F. Redden, general sales manager of the Maxwell Motor company and his personal representative, C. M. Striebly are in Minneapolis for a convention of the dealers of the entire northwest given by C. R. Newby, district sales manager, at the Maxwell Motor company show rooms in Minneapolis and both Mr. Redden and Striebly will be the main speakers at the luncheon.

As proving conclusively the statement that the Ford Motor company would use wire wheels made by Henry Ford himself in the Indianapolis 500-mile race, it now becomes known that the Ford Motor company has started the plant 1,000 feet in length and 80 feet in width to manufacture wheels for the company, the step having been taken when it was found none of the wire wheel makers could supply wheels to meet the demands of the company.

Morgan and Wright Tire company has just started the removal of machinery to new buildings recently completed. This will add 400,000 square feet of floor space to the factory. A like addition of 400,000 square feet will be ready April 1 when the Fisk tire plant, a member of the United States Tire company, will be the largest in the world. The power plant of the company has been doubled by additions. The management denies that it has purchased additional land for buildings and states that no property has been added during the last two years to the company buildings.

Albert F. Mais and Ben Marks have incorporated the Internal Gear Drive company to manufacture the light delivery motor car invented by Mr. Mais. Mais has been at work upon for several months. The announced capital stock of the new company is $6,600. The new wagon will have a load capacity, it is reported, of 750 pounds and will weigh 750 pounds and be constructed for the particular use of the small merchant with a list price of about $750.

B. F. Everitt, of the former Everitt Motor Car company, now merged in the Maxwell Motor company, is quietly at work designing a car which he will place upon the market.

R. C. Hupp, of the Monarch Motor Car company, has secured factory space in the former Chalmers Motor Car company factory out Jefferson avenue and work has been started on the first cars of the company.

Sterling Motor works, of which William C. Little is the head, has taken over a portion of the factory formerly occupied by the Chevrolet Motor company and will manufacture motors for cycle cars, particulars of the style of which are not now obtainable. Heretofore the Sterling Motor works has been located at Flint and has manufactured motors for the Chevrolet and Little cars but Mr. Durant and Mr. Little are reported a few days ago to have divided their interests.

Robert R. Adams, former purchasing agent of the Interstate Automobile company, Muncie, Indiana, has become temporary assistant purchasing agent of the American Cyclecar company.

New and modern machinery of the very latest pattern is being installed by the Regal Motor Car company in a large factory building 7½ acres in extent and tool equipment is also being added to the factory, the entire order for machinery having been one of the largest ever placed in Detroit. Several innovations in the way of automobile making machinery are among the lot.

L. R. Acton has given up his position as factory manager of the Maxwell Motor company plants, the former Brush and Alden Sampson plants of the United States Motor company, to assume the management of the Tiffany Electric Car company at Pontiac, the company recent, formed and of which E. Le Roy Pelletier is president.

Mr. C. A. Forster, who has been acting commercial manager of the Maxwell Motor company, incorporated, since the organization of the company, has tendered his resignation to take effect as soon as he can arrange to turn over to the other department heads of the Maxwell company the numerous duties of the commercial department. Mr. Forster was formerly sales manager and later assistant general manager of the Ford company. Adding Machine company and it is understood that the excellent record he made in the organization of the Maxwell company has brought him a very flattering offer which he will take up in the near future. Mr. Forster has built up an extensive acquaintance in the automobile field since his connection with the Maxwell company and leaves the company with the good will and best wishes of his associates.

W. W. Austin has been made superintendent of the new plant of the Studebaker corporation, known as Plant 15 and formerly the Garford Gear Works plant, a part of the Flanders Manufacturing group at Pontiac. The Studebaker corporation has taken on this plant for the manufacturing of replacement parts.

The recent resignation of A. A. Lehr as purchasing agent of the Cartercar company terminated two years of service with the General Motors company interests. When the General Motors company offices were removed from New York to Detroit, Mr. Lehr was selected as assistant director of purchases and was later transferred to the Cartercar company plant. Mr. Lehr first became identified with the industry in the early days and was with the Pope Motor Car company at Toledo. He came to Detroit as one of the organizers of the De Luxe Motor Car company and later became identified with the E-M-F company at its inception. He was with this company until it became the Studebaker corporation and after becoming identified with the General Motors company, and with the Cartercar company, continued to reside in Detroit, where he intends to remain, forming a connection after his return from a trip taken for a much needed rest which in reality forced him to give up work for the time being.

BROUGHTON TO CONDUCT BIG REVIVAL IN MACON

Former Atlanta Pastor Will Lead Two Weeks' Meeting to Begin on September 7.

Macon, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—Macon church people are looking forward with interest to the coming revival meeting to be conducted here by Dr. Len G. Broughton, former pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist church in Atlanta. The meeting will begin on September 7 and continue for two weeks, the services being held at the city auditorium under the auspices of the Macon Baptist churches, though it is anticipated that other churches will participate.

Dr. Broughton is at present in Northfield, Mass., where he is taking part in the Northfield conference program.

Practically all of the Baptist ministers are out of the city at present and nothing has been done aside from the securing of the auditorium and the acceptance of Dr. Broughton. By next week, however, each of the churches will have organized forces of personal workers to assist in the revival.

The meeting coming, just at the time it does, during a hot municipal campaign, may develop some interesting features, especially in view of the fact that a law enforcement league was recently organized here by the ministers of the city and a campaign is being waged to put the saloons and bunker clubs out of business.

MORE MONEY FOR OPERATORS ON THE G. S. & F. RAILROAD

Macon, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—The Georgia, Southern and Florida railroad has signed a new contract with the operators and agents employed by the road under which they are given an increase of ten per cent in wages, effective from the first of August, at which time the old contract expired.

The negotiations had been pending between a committee from the telegraphers and the officials of the road for several weeks. The agreement means a total of about $12,000 increase to the 100 or more operators and agents affected. The contract is a duplicate of the one recently signed by the Central of Georgia railway with its operators and agents.

ALDERMAN DASHER TO HAVE THE WAGE EARNERS' TICKET

Macon, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—Alderman A. L. Dasher, who is a candidate for mayor, is to have an aldermanic ticket after all. It will be known as "the Wage Earners' Ticket." Eight of the candidates for aldermen have already been selected, the various labor unions of the city having the matter in charge through a committee of forty-seven union men.

Those who are said to have already been decided on are: Mose Michael, vice president of the State Federation of Labor; L. S. McConnell, a merchant; George S. Bolton, foreman of the pattern making department of the Central of Georgia shops; A. J. Brooks, chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; A. F. Holt, Sr., music dealer and president of the Musicians' Union; Wilton Hardeman, a merchant; Leo P. Donnelly, merchant, and George Black, president of the Boilermakers' union.

WHITES USE DYNAMITE ON NEGRO VILLAGE

Crowd in Mitchell Blows Up Store and Fires a House While Rifles Bark.

Moultrie, Ga., August 23.—(Special.) From Mitchell county come tidings of the destruction with dynamite of the negro village of Greenough by a crowd of infuriated white men.

Trouble first occurred between Bradley brothers, the negro proprietors of the leading store of Greenough, and John Davis and another, two young white men of the community, and grew out of the failure of one of the Bradleys to return some money that had been advanced him.

John Davis was assaulted by one of the Bradleys and knocked senseless with a piece of scantling. The white boys returned home and the trouble lasted late in the village.

At night a mob of white men assembled in the community and armed with dynamite and rifles and artillery as was available visited the negro village, planted the dynamite under the Bradleys' store and blew it into atoms, set fire to the stores, fired into the negro residence sections and received return fire from armed negroes for a time.

The shooting seems to have been ineffective, as no deaths are reported. Fear of a further outbreak has been felt by the non-combatants of the community, but the officers now appear to have the matter in hand. The Bradleys are still at large.

MASONS WILL ENJOY BARBECUE WEDNESDAY

Panthersville Masonic lodge will hold a convention and barbecue Wednesday, August 27, at Panthersville, in DeKalb county.

Several well-known Masons will attend the meeting and assist in the degree work. Refreshments on the road will be admitted to the hall and short talks will be made by prominent Masons. Dr. Horace Grant, of Atlanta, will make the principal address and in the evening confer the master's degree.

Shows Fine Corn.

Thomasville, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—J. P. Cay, living near Coolidge, had on exhibition here this week some corn grown by him which was an example of what Thomas county can do in that line. One ear of this corn weighed two pounds and nine ounces and when shelled the grains filled a quart measure. The ear measured just twelve inches in length. Mr. Cay has a half dozen ears of corn which he will exhibit at the fair here this fall.

We Paid $50,000 To Prevent Tread Separation On No-Rim-Cut Tires

Another Exclusive Feature

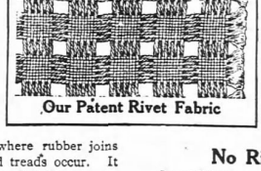
Here is another vital feature found in Goodyear tires alone.

This fabric — called "rivet" fabric — is patented. We bought the rights for $50,000.

In every well-made tire, at the base of the tread, runs a breaker strip. It is usually a solid weave.

It is near this strip, where rubber joins with fabric, that loosened treads occur. It has cost tire users millions of dollars.

The "rivet" fabric is our breaker strip. Note the openings in it. We force the tread rubber down through these openings, so hundreds of large rubber rivets are formed to prevent tread separation. Then the whole tire is vulcanized en masse. This is one of the biggest of Goodyear economies, and no other maker can use it.



Our Patent Rivet Fabric

corrects this buckling. The rubber and fabric adjust themselves to actual road conditions. Every part of the fabric bears its part of the strain.

This process—used by no one else—adds to our cost $1,500 daily, just to minimize blow-out cost.

No Rim-Cutting

In addition we save you, in No Rim-Cut tires, all the ruin of rim-cutting.

With clincher tires—the hooked-base tires—rim-cutting ruins almost one tire in three. This is proved by statistics gathered for us by certified public accountants. No-Rim-Cut tires are guaranteed against this costly damage.

We control the only known way to make a satisfactory tire of this type.

Saving Blow-Outs At a Cost of $1,500 Daily

Here is another exclusive feature.

No-Rim-Cut tires get the "On-Air Cure." That is they are finalcured on air bags shaped like inner tubes. They are cured, as you use them, on elastic air.

Other tires are cured on iron cores alone. The fearful compression often buckles the fabric. And there, where some of the fabric bears no part of the strain, thousands of blow-outs occur.

Our "On-Air Cure"

Three Savings

So we save you on rim-cutting—

Save you on blow-outs—

Save you on tread separation.

Yet no standard tire of any type costs less than No-Rim-Cut tires. That is due to our mammoth output. No-Rim-Cut tires, when we made less of them, cost one-fifth more than clinchers.

Note what you get which others can't give. You will then see why Goodyears far outsell any other tire that's made.

REVIEWS OF THE WEEK IN AMERICAN MARKETS

Cotton.

New Orleans, August 23.—The net results of the week's trading in cotton were an advance of 15 to 32 points. The high prices were made on Saturday and the low prices on Monday. At the highest the trading months were 1st to 32 points over last week's close; at the lowest they were 30 to 37 points under. The range was 67 to 73 points.
The advancing tendency of the market was precipitated by continued dry weather in Texas and Oklahoma. Forward to the effect of the official reports of deterioration through heat in the South came in and was more than offset by influence of the enormous movement that fell the two states. The situation in the week is complicated by the fact that while a promising crop has been tossed, such a rain would do great injury to the many thousands of acres of open cotton in Texas. Shorts covered immediately the week and many commission houses bought on the rise, as is appearance, which led to the belief by the bear side that the market was becoming overbought.
Little interest was displayed in anything but the near months, which continued to move in a record-breaking temperature, and the market stabilized and continued there until late in the week, when it broke sharply on the heavy selling of Saturday and an increase this week in the ginning.
In the spot department, the demand was chiefly confining 12 1-16 against 12 1-16 last week and 11 11-16 the week last year. Receipts, 1,000 bales against 1,000 bales last week and 548 this week last year; sales to arrive amounted to 254 bales.

Cotton Goods.

New York, August 23.—Cotton goods markets were active in the gray goods division during the week and sales were in excess of the output. Many contracts being made to run to the end of the year. There was also some improvement in the demand for cloths that are goods. Brown sheetings held unchanged while steady for early delivery. Jobbers have been operating in a small way in a more general way in consequence of the recent rains.
Prints are quiet. Indications are in moderate demand. The silks generally continue to show a steady business with interior grades and fancy types selling the best.
Woolen dress goods keeps well running activity. The wool situation is generally unchanged. There is no change in the price of wool. Buyers have been operating in a small way in a hand to mouth manner. Prices are unchanged.

Iron and Steel.

New York, August 23.—Pig iron quality was the most active feature last week, lower grades being in good demand, while the better grades ruled firm.
Structural material continued rough. Steel rails were quiet and firm. United States Steel corporation unfilled tonnage decreased 4,000 tons. Independent steel mills have been operating steadily for many months past, and the output is now being absorbed as fast as it is produced. Buying has been in small lots, and specifications are coming in large quantities. Bars and shapes are in good demand. The International Harvester company placed a few large contracts, but business has developed on average price under $1.20 basis, but the open market was strengthened by the large business placed. Plates were in small demand at 1.10 to $1.40 for the better grades.
Sheet iron, after being at 2.25 for smaller mills and 2.10 for larger ones, declined $25 a mill for fourth quarter delivery, and 2.10 was shaded for prompt sheets at $2.20 for black and $3.20 for galvanized.
Tin plate and terne plate have not been active.

WORK OF CLUB WOMEN FOR HOME FOR GIRLS

Georgia Branch of College Women Fought Long and Hard for the Measure.

The Georgia branch of the Southern Association of College Women has been devoting itself to a program of study of the social problems of the state investigating particularly the juvenile court and the prison reform work. Their experience soon convinced them that the most vital social need of Georgia was a home for wayward girls—some place of shelter and succor—where the young and defenseless girl wrongly environed, could be snatched as a brand from the burning.

This, then, became the one work upon which they concentrated their efforts.

Being club women and recognizing the value of organized work they began a brilliant campaign for the accomplishment of their great design. They wrote letters, they circularized the state, sent literature, convincing and appealing, followed by more letters, until the "wayward girls' home bill" became an object dear to the club women of Georgia. The college women were also seconded in their enthusiastic work by the Prison Reform association.

Not a friend of the cause lost no opportunity to push their powerful influence in behalf of the bill.

Indorsed by Mrs. Fitzpatrick.

Early in the campaign the bill received the hearty indorsement of the state president of the federation of clubs, Mrs. Fitzpatrick. Mr. Phillip Weltner addressed the district conventions of the federated clubs and aroused great enthusiasm. The college women brought Mrs. Martha Falconer from Pittsburgh, a social worker of national reputation, who addressed a mass meeting of interested workers. Mrs. Falconer is the head of a settlement with a successful institution of this kind and could bear valuable testimony to the great need and beneficent results of the work. When the legislature convened, the legislative committee and their friends began their work. It found that the club women had pledged practically all of the legislature to the bill. Nevertheless the difficulties to overcome were great. The unanimous indorsement and demand for it by Georgia women carried great influence, but the financial distress of the state made its passage at this session a triumph for the friends of social legislation, and placed Georgia in a much more favorable light before the friends of progress everywhere.

Signed by Governor.

But the governor's signature was yet lacking and a rumor spread over the state that owing to scarcity of funds he would not sign the bill.

On Tuesday morning a regular storm of telegram overwhelmed the governor and he could not refuse to do what the women of Georgia so much desired done. So the signature was appended to this famous bill and $20,000 appropriated to the "wayward girls" and home for wayward girls.

All honor to Miss Rhoda Kaufman, the indefatigable president of college women's association, all honor to the Prison Reform association and the Men and Religion committee! All honor to the club women of Georgia, and to the legislature and all honor to the newspapers of the state.

Together these co-workers have accomplished a great thing for the future of the girlhood and womanhood of Georgia.

Following the great strike of garment workers in New York city this year four manufacturers have arranged with the board of education to place fifteen girls in a public school, so that educators may make them more efficient. They are to spend about half their working hours in the factory and the other half in school and receive their regular wages. The schooling will begin with elementary training, and may go to the extent of real vocational training.—General Federation Magazine.

Dairy Instruction Train Commended by Mrs. Johnson

There come to the Woman's Department of The Constitution every day letters which indicate that the organized women of the state do not read the newspapers carefully; do not read the departments which are given over to the publication of their own news.

In this day and hour, when the activity of woman is claiming the interest and attention of the civilized world, it is certainly backward of any woman who has any interest in life and civilization to fail to read the newspapers. There may be the misguided few who think it argues a superiority not to read newspapers, but it does not. Books and magazines can not supply the daily routine of the world's work as the newspapers can, and to carry on her part of the work of civilization woman must keep up with the daily life of the moment.

If the women of organized work in Georgia could see the demand there is for information from the outside, about the work of women here, there would be a more patriotic interest in the publicity of it. Daily communications come from the outside requesting copies of the woman's edition, published in June, and the comments from everywhere are enthusiastic.

Read the advertisements devoted to the interests of women, that you may be the more intelligent co-worker, and help out yourselves in making these pages live and interesting.

ISMA DOOLY.

Mrs. J. Lindsay Johnson, of Rome, one of the leading spirits in the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, and one of the successful women farmers in the state, visited Atlanta this week, the guest of Mrs. J. K. Ottley, at Joyease.

Mrs. Johnson came to attend the lectures in the dairy instruction car of the Southern railroad and was one of a group of well known women in the audience Friday. She is enthusiastic over the message she believes the dairy train brings not only to the farmers, but to the state's specialist, but to the women of the state.

"The information so clearly presented in the car will, in one year, on the dairy instruction train is just the practical kind all home-seekers should have. Whether they live on the farm and direct the development of the dairy products, or whether they live in the city and are dependent upon the dairyman for all the milk they consume, every woman should know plain facts about milk as a product," said Mrs. Johnson, when interviewed. "They should know something of its chemical qualities; they should know how to keep it pure, and how to direct if they live in town, the dairyman as to the care of the cow. They should be equipped to superintend the milking if necessary.

"I would like to see an interest in dairying developed among the women of Georgia, as a paying industry has been developed, and I believe that such an industry can be developed.

"The lectures given on the train were highly interesting. The literature distributed is proving most useful, and the exhibit of articles necessary for the equipment of the up-to-date dairy, large or small, completed a most creditable school."

:: :: THE ESSAY CONTEST :: ::

Grasp the opportunity of the "Essay Contest," which the State Federation of Woman's clubs is offering to win a set of "The Library of Southern Literature."

The subject chosen is "The Soul and Mind of the Southern People as Expressed in their Literature."

Another month of hard work urged on the district vice president will enforce the contest greatly.

Enter now, young people of Georgia; it may be you who will add this set of valuable literature to your library—something you will always be proud of. Write your district vice president for full particulars and join in this great contest.

FERRELL'S GARDEN ONE OF GEORGIA'S PICTURE PLACES

By Fannie B. Callaway.

Ferrell's Garden is located just 1 mile from the center of LaGrange, which city is known as the city of Elms and Roses; a name most appropriately bestowed upon it by one of its gifted sons.

Judge and Mrs. Blount Ferrell purchased and moved to this property in 1835, just after their marriage. The place consists of one hundred acres, a magnificent grove of oaks, hickories, poplars and pine trees covering many acres, leads up to the garden proper which they planned and planted. Here for over a half century Mrs. Ferrell was the presiding genius, as she was in his ministering angel to all the poor and afflicted, the sad and sorrowing of the entire vicinity.

Ferrell's Garden with its wonderful hedges, borders and terraces, as shown by illustrations, containing trees, shrubs and flowers of every known variety, has always proved a state wide reputation. Whenever LaGrange is mentioned, some inquiry is made in regard to it.

This ideally beautiful spot, with its lovely bowers, sequestered nooks and shaded walks, has always been open to the public, and many a care-burdened couple have in its cooly tenderly recall hours spent there when Cupid reigned supreme, for the Ferrell's Garden has been the trysting place for lovers for several generations.

The Woman's club of LaGrange treasures as one of its most cherished memories, the first meeting of the district clubs of the State Federation which was held in this garden. At that time the idea was suggested that the LaGrange Woman's club should urge the city to purchase this property from the Ferrell estate and convert it into a park for the whole community to enjoy. An effort was made to this effect, but proved unsuccessful.

Several years ago this property was purchased by Mr. Fuller E. Callaway, who has already made wonderful improvements in the way of restoration, preservation and enlargement.

The beautiful formality of this garden, one of the rarely beautiful kind still left in the south, will be retained in all its charming attractiveness.

Mr. Callaway will build in the near future, and the garden will continue to be the pride and one of the chief attractions of LaGrange.

PROMINENT WOMEN TO BE HEARD AT CUTHBERT

Among the prominent women who are to speak during the various sessions of the forthcoming state convention of Federated Clubs in Cuthbert are:

Mrs. Percy Pennypacker, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. A. J. McCoy and Mrs. J. W. Malcom, of Cuthbert; Mrs. Robert Daniel, of Griffin; Mrs. John M. Slaton, of Atlanta; Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, Dr. Carolyn Geisel, Mich.; Mrs. M. A. Lipscomb, Athens; Hon. W. S. West, Miss Mary Cresswell, Mrs. J. Lindsey Johnson, Rome.

M. & O. ENTERS MEMPHIS BY HELP OF SOUTHERN

The Mobile and Ohio railroad, beginning with August 1, has opened a line into Memphis, Tenn., by arrangements with the Southern railway, for the use of its facilities between Corinth, Miss., and Memphis. This makes the M. & O. an initial line at Memphis.

The M. & O. local freight agent has established offices in the Exchange floor of the Southern railway at that point, and freight to or from Memphis is handled through the Southern railway terminals there.

Freight from, to or through Memphis, is routed via the Mobile & Ohio main line at Corinth, Miss., and freight schedules between Memphis and Corinth, Miss., have been so adjusted as to make proper connection with the M. & O. local schedules north and south of Corinth and from points on or reached by the rails of the M. & O. and its connections.

Mass meetings of women have been held in Chicago during the past month, urging the legislature to provide a separate state reformatory for women. Governor Dunne will also be considered. Among the Illinois club women active in this work are noted: Mrs. Adlai Stevenson, Dr. Julia Holmes Smith, Mrs. Joanna Downs, Miss Elsa Des Jardien, Mrs. George Vosbrink and Mrs. Winona S. Jones.

"Women conservationists" is some better, and it merely gets back to the original, "women conversationists."

DAUGHTERS OF AMERICAN REVOLUTION IN GEORGIA

(By Mrs. John M. Graham.

"Meadow Garden," at Augusta, the home of George Walton, signer of the Declaration of Independence at which Washington and LaFayette were guests, was purchased by the National society in 1899, through efforts of Georgia daughters, and chiefly of Mrs. Harriet Gould Jefferies, of the Augusta chapter, now an honorary state regent. The sum appropriated by the National society for this purpose was supplemented by a considerable sum raised by the Augusta chapter for repairing and furnishing the house. It is now a museum of revolutionary relics, of which the Augusta chapter is custodian. Contributions of money, relics and books for its library are from time to time made to it by chapters and members in other parts of the state. Mrs. Jefferies is chairman of the meadow garden committee.

The site of the revolutionary battle of Kettle Creek, near Washington, Ga., was marked by the Kettle Creek chapter, and efforts are being made to obtain from congress an appropriation to mark the spot with a monument.

The site of the home of Nancy Hart and the scene of her exploits is the joint property of the Nancy Hart chapter of Elberton, and the Nancy Hart chapter, of Milledgeville.

The Oglethorpe Monument.

The Georgia Daughters of American Revolution took an active part with other patriotic societies in raising funds for the erection of the Oglethorpe monument at Savannah, which was finally completed with money appropriated by the state. A large fund was raised by a state committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. S. B. C. Morgan.

A monument to Oglethorpe was erected in Brunswick in 1895 with funds raised by the Brunswick chapter, and about the same time, the Oglethorpe chapter, of Columbus, placed a marble memorial at Kennard's ford or ferry on the Chattahoochee. The Oglethorpe chapter, of Macon, in 1737 to treat for peace with the five Indian tribes.

A stone marker was erected by the Xavier chapter, of Rome, on the battlefield near that city where John Sevier defeated the Indians. The chapter name is an old form of the family name of the Seviers, from whom members of the chapter were descended.

The battle ground of the remains of Major General Nathaniel Greene at Savannah was commemorated by a marble tablet placed by the Savannah chapter on his monument in 1902, and in the same year the Lachlan McIntosh chapter, of Savannah, placed a marble fountain at Jasper Spring to commemorate the exploit of Sergeant Jasper at that spot. The Savannah, Ogeechee and Augusta canal, a memorial to the revolutionary soldiers buried in Colonial cemetery.

A monument to General Elijah Clarke was erected at Athens in 1904 with funds raised by the Elijah Clarke chapter.

The Indian treaty stone at Indian Spring was marked by a bronze tablet in 1911 by the Piedmont Continental chapter, of Atlanta. Afterwards the site of the Indian treaty at Coleraine was marked with a boulder by the Lyman Hall chapter, of Wayeross. The site of the historic Indian village of Chehaw, in Lee county, was marked by a granite boulder by the Council of Safety chapter in America in 1911. The Stone Castle chapter, of Dawson, marked with a boulder the site of an Indian battlefield near that city.

Revolutionary Soldiers' Graves.

In recent years there has been increasing interest in the marking of the graves of revolutionary soldiers in Georgia. In 1910 a standing committee on this subject, with Mrs. S. W. Foster, of Atlanta, as chairman, was created by the state regent, who had long been collecting data as to such graves, with a view to more extended work on this line. Circulars and queries in the D. A. R. department of The Constitution had brought numerous letters to the writer from all classes of people who had information on the subject. The first interment of the remains of a revolutionary soldier in the National cemetery of Marietta was made under the auspices of the D. A. R. in 1911.

The anniversary of the evacuation of Savannah by the British, July 11, was set apart by the state conference of 1910 on the motion of Miss Ray, the state editor, and a memorial day for the decoration of graves of revolutionary soldiers.

Relics at Jamestown Exposition.

During the administration of Miss Benning as state regent in 1907, and chiefly through her efforts, a splendid collection of revolutionary and colonial relics was gathered from among the Georgia chapters and placed on exhibition at the Jamestown exposition, where Miss Benning gave them her personal supervision for several months and until after their return to their owners.

LANNAHASSEE CHAPTER FORMED AT BUENA VISTA

On February 21, 1913, a chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution was organized at the home of Mrs. Hornady, Buena Vista, Ga., assisted in organizing by Mrs. Lewis, of Columbus, Ga.

This new chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution has fifteen enthusiastic members, and bears the name of Lannahassee, deriving its name from a lovely stream which has its source within the city limits of Buena Vista, Ga. The Indians made their homes here, hunted game and fished in the streams, gave charming Indian names to the creeks about the city.

The officers of the Lannahassee chapter are:

Regent—Mrs. Lucile Clements.
Vice Regent—Mrs. Berta Durham.
Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. E. B. Hornady.
Treasurer—Mrs. Ella Wooten.
Registrar—Mrs. August Stokes.
Historian—Mrs. Anna Munro.

The Lannahassee chapter has held interesting meetings every month since its organization at the homes of Mrs. Hornady, Mrs. Clements, Mrs. Dunham, Mrs. Munro and Mrs. Stokes.

The Lannahassee chapter sends greetings to all the sister chapters in the state. Two of the charter members of this chapter was from the Americus chapter, and two charter members were from the Columbus chapter.

What Clubs Are Doing.

Under "What Clubs Are Doing," The American Club, of Woman says:

"Home Builders" is the attractive title of an association of club women of Baton Rouge, La. They form classes of little girls, to whom they teach home cooking and all the arts of domestic science. A system of honor marks is given for such tasks as cooking a whole meal every day for a week, or making good coffee, or dry toast. The little pupils must pledge themselves to cheerfulness and neatness in the performance of all home work.

A tea room, conducted by each club acting in turn as hostess in Greensboro, N. C., provides a civic and social center that is much appreciated. The proceeds of the sales go to the milk and ice fund for the poor and for civic improvements.

Doing things for effect is seldom effective.

Most of us admire a fol es long as he has money.

Notice.

In my earnest effort to place before you for your convenience as a matter of reference, I have, dear daughters, twice before directed your attention to the summary of fact published in this department concerning the organization and development of "The Daughters of the American Revolution in Georgia," compiled by your former state regent, Mrs. John M. Graham, of Marietta.

I have advised that you place on file the several editions of The Sunday Atlanta Constitution, beginning July 27, 1913, so as to obtain the continued article in its entirety.

The same matter has also appeared under the headings, "History of Georgia D. A. R. Work," and "History of Georgia D. A. R."

This account of the beginning and growth of our organization in Georgia was prepared by Mrs. Graham for the Woman's Edition of The Atlanta Constitution. Owing to the length of the article it could not be published in that edition, and we are enabled to give the same to our readers through the D. A. R. columns. In continuation, the article will appear under the heading "The Daughters of the American Revolution in Georgia," by Mrs. John M. Graham, Marietta.

GENEALOGICAL

Conducted by Mrs. Walter Scott Wilson, No. 117 West Jones Street, Savannah, Ga.

Correspondents will please: 1. Write plainly, especially names. 2. Give dates or approximate dates, location, etc., relative to the state in which ancestors lived. 3. Write queries on separate slip from letter, on paper, and inclose stamp for each query. 4. Give full name and address, which will not be published unless so desired.

Spier-Hardee-Warren.

Elizabeth Joseph and Edward Warren were brothers and sister. Elizabeth Warren married John Spier, who died in 1773, in Granville county, North Carolina. Elizabeth died in Pitt county in 1773. They had a daughter, Clear, who married John Hardee; a daughter, Patience, who married a Mr. Jeffreys; a daughter, Apple, who married a Mr. Holland.

John Spier was the son of James Spier and Ann, who had probably been previously a Mrs. Stallings, with two daughters, Sarah and Patience, John and Ann had a daughter, Mourning.

In Effingham county is found the will of Moore Spear (1802), wife of Milly, children James, Willis, William, Nersel, Fittman, Sarah and Patience, who married Temple Tullis, in 1809, ex-brother Willis Spear (captain in Revolution in N. C. Regiment).

Atkinson.

If any of ex-Governor Atkinson's relatives are living, will they please communicate with Mrs. T. W. Mullins, 605 Hickory street, Texarkana, Ark.?

Leverett.

Wanted—Information concerning parentage of Stephen Leverett, born in Lunenburg county, Virginia, in 1765. Address Mrs. F. W. Mullins, 605 Hickory street, Texarkana, Ark.

Women of Charleston, S. C., investigated and found that they paid twofifths of all the city taxes. On the basis of this real interest in city administration they secured the appointment of women on the hospital board; they had three women added to the city market commission. Now they are asking for matrons at the police stations. Club women started the whole reform movement.

Miss Rutherford's Address

Do you know, that in the books your children are studying and reading the institution of slavery is said to have weakened the patriotic qualities of the men and women of the south, making them lazy and inert? But history, unjustly as it has been written, will, by the lives of these men, disprove that very statement.

Not only were we the first permanent colony that gave slaves freedom, but more than that—for it is stated upon good authority that one of our Jamestown colony was instrumental in inducing the Pilgrim fathers to come to Plymouth Rock.

Do you know that most of the men who took part—a prominent part—in the building of the nation were the slaveholders that have been so maligned? When they were looking for a president of the first continental congress why did they go to Peyton Randolph, of Virginia, a slave-holder, to be at the head of that body? And why, when a resolution had to be drawn that these colonies must be free and independent, did Richard Henry Lee, another slaveholder, have to write it? Why was it, when they were seeking for some one to write the Declaration of Independence, they chose Thomas Jefferson, a slaveholder? The British Encyclopaedia, which is acknowledged to be the best, says it was because he was a ready writer. Compliment No. 1 that this encyclopaedia found in the southern library, has paid to the south.

Did not our George Mason, of Virginia, give the first declaration of rights ever passed on this continent? Then when they were looking for a commander-in-chief of the army, did they not choose another slaveholder, George Washington? And when they were looking for a commander-in-chief of the navy, was it not our James Nicholson, of Virginia? And was it not John Marshall's pen that welded the states into union? And when they were looking for men to write a paper stronger than the articles of the confederation, was it not they first chose our James Madison to write it—that is our constitution before amended since the war? And when they needed the first secretary of the government, did not our Marshall, of Virginia, and Taney, of Maryland, for over sixty years hold the office?

And wasn't it a southern man that was made the first president of the United States? Was it not Thomas Jefferson that added the Louisiana purchase—millions of miles of territory—to the United States; and was it not Fred Smith, of Tennessee, that added the Pacific slope? Did not Virginia give to the United States, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and a part of Minnesota? There were fifteen presidents before 1860 and eleven of them were southern men. Five of these were reelected and every one from the south. It cannot be denied that southern men were foremost in the War of 1812, and you know it took a southern man, Francis Scott Key, of Maryland, to write our national anthem—The Star Spangled Banner.

Southern Men Conquered Mexico.

Did it not take two southern men, Taylor and Scott, to win Mexico and were not the men most prominent in that campaign from the south—Jefferson Davis, of Mississippi, Robert E. Lee, Thomas J. Jackson, our Stonewall, Jos. E. Johnston and A. P. Hill, of Virginia; Henry R. Jackson and Joseph Thalmadge, of Georgia. Bradford, of Louisiana; Braxton Bragg, of North Carolina; Butler and May, of Maryland, the latter so numerous to mention? Was it not James Monroe who bought Florida for the United States, and if it has been in the power of mortal to avenge the wrongs of a state, have not the Texans and was it not Andrew Lewis, of Virginia, and Georgia Rogers Clarke, of Kentucky, who opened the Indian lands and the great west?

No, we do not begin to know what part the south had in the building of the nation—not only in one direction, but in many.

Let us turn to the inventors. Was it not our Eli Whitney, of Connecticut, of Virginia, that invented the reaping machine which revolutionized harvesting? Was it not our James Gatling, of North Carolina, the inventor of the Gatling gun? Was it not our Francis Goulding, of Georgia, that invented the celebrated Goulding cotton planter? don't tell you so. It says Howe and Thirmonier did it. Was it not our William Longstreet, of Georgia, that first suggested the application of steam as a motive power? History will not tell you that either, but will say that Fulton did it. Was it not Eli Watkins, of Georgia, who invented the cotton gin? You never heard of him before, did you? History says that Eli Whitney invented the cotton gin. The first passenger railroad in the world was in South Carolina, and the first steamboat that ever crossed the Atlantic ocean went from Savannah, Ga. You don't find that in northern histories. Did you ever hear of Sidney Lanier, the greatest chess player in the world?

And wasn't Sidney Lanier the finest flute player known? Cyrus Field could not have made his cable a possibility without our Matthew Maury, to devise the plans. There never was an ornithologist like our Audubon, of Louisiana. And I do not believe they could have tunnelled under the Hudson without our William McAdon, of Marietta, Ga. Then, again, when they wanted a leader of the union forces in 1861 why did they go to our Robert E. Lee? And when he refused, did they not choose Winfield Scott, another southern man?

In Other Fields.

Then when we come to science and medicine, what physician has done more to alleviate the sufferings of the world than our Dr. Crawford W. Long, of Georgia? He was without doubt the discoverer of anesthesia, and I don't believe you know all that means to you, or you would have applauded louder, and you would not allow others to try to take the honor from him, and you would have erected a monument to him long ago. Was it not our Sims, of South Carolina, who first suggested surgery in hospital service?

Then let us come to the question of education. If there is a thing that the south has smarted under in the fals- way that history has been written, it is in regard to illiteracy in the south, and I want to open your eyes a little bit along this line and you of the south need an opening of the eyes as well as the people of the north. We do not ourselves know all that the south may claim.

The First University.

Do you know that William and Mary college, at Williamsburg, Va., was the first university in the United States? Now, mind you, I did not say college, for I have no desire to take from Harvard her glory. And did you know that William and Mary was the first to receive a charter from the crown; the first to have a school of modern languages; the first to have a school of history; the first to use the honor system? And do you know that the Georgia university, Athens, Ga., was the first state university in the United States? Besides this, do you know that the Wesleyan college at Macon, Ga., was the first chartered college for women in the world, and that it was a Georgia woman who received the first diploma ever issued?

Offers to Pay for Her Jam Which He Ate During War

Cleveland, Ga., August 23. (Special.) Among the many interesting incidents in connection with the recent reunion of the blue and the gray at Gettysburg is one described by Capt. Cantrell, an old confederate veteran, who relates how he met the woman whose jam and bread he ate during the war and of how he offered to pay her for his meal after the long lapse of years.

"Thirty-five thousand soldiers in fifty years around the battlefield, but many places were familiar," says Mr. Cantrell in speaking of the battlefield. "I visited Devil's Den and it was well-named. I also climbed Big Round Top, that is where I was in the hardest fight and I called on an old lady who was living near by when the battle was fought. I remembered a house where some other soldiers and myself had gone looking for something to eat. The family had vacated temporarily, but we found a quantity of lightbread and blackberry jam in the cellar, and—well, we were hungry and you can guess what happened. The other day I found that house and knocked at the door. An elderly lady opened the door and told me to 'Come in.'

"'Madam,' said I, 'Were you living here when the battle was fought? She answered yes, and said she had just gone to housekeeping when the community was invaded by soldiers.

"'Well,' said Captain Cantrell, 'I called on you at that time, but you were not at home. However, I partook of some of your good bread and blackberry jam and now I want to pay you for that meal with interest.

"She laughed heartily and said: 'Oh, no, indeed, you are welcome to what you got, and to show you we bear no grudge we want you to come to dinner with us. And it was that way all the time we were in camp. Everybody was nice to us and we couldn't complain of the treatment from the beginning to the end of the trip.'

Mrs. S. S. Crockett, Chairman Health Department, General Federation—A consummation devoutly to be wished is that clubdom shall work for the coming year to further the "rights" of children. Their right to be well born; their right to be protected from conditions that threaten their welfare at home—at school—at work. COCHRAN SETS FORTH PLATFORM FOR SENATE

Candidate to Succeed Hoke Smith Bars Mud-Slinging, Demagogy and Political Trickery.

Clayton, Ga., August 23.—(Special.) Ralph O. Cochran, of Atlanta, candidate to succeed Senator Hoke Smith to the United States senate in 1914, spoke here this afternoon, setting forth the platform upon which he intends to make his race. A good sized crowd turned out to hear him.

Mr. Cochran stated that he proposes to run on a business platform and declared that if elected he would so represent the people. A freedom from smuggling, demagogy and resorting to political trickery, he declared, would mark his campaign. He stated that he is a plain business sense business man, without prejudices and without political debts to settle.

Mr. Cochran promised fairness to all in his campaign and future dealings if elected. "I am against class legislation," he said, "further than that set down as the fundamental of all law, which is that of the greatest good for the greatest number."

He stated that if elected he proposed to become a watchful guard of the treasury. He expressed the opinion that taxes have been raised too much against an indiscriminate expenditure of the people's money. He declared that there had been too great a draft on the government bounties, and pointed out that it is the business of the government to protect industry, but that it did not include supporting the people as it appeared some evidently think.

Mr. Cochran said: "There are entirely too many laws are being passed in the state and nation, and anticipated the danger of becoming a law-bound people. He is against a state of complicity of laws.

He promised, if elected, to do all he could for the betterment of the public roads of Georgia and for the upbuilding of her educational institutions.

"If I am elected to the United States senate," he said, "I shall always do the best in my faculties to get increased appropriations for the educational interests of the various states in the Union where agricultural training is taught."

Mr. Cochran's speech is carried in full elsewhere in this issue of The Constitution.

ARMOR PLATE BOUGHT AT REDUCED PRICE

Washington, August 23.—A contract for 3,900 tons of armor plate for the newest American dreadnaught now under construction was awarded by the navy department to the Carbon Steel company, of Pittsburg, at $187.50 per ton, a reduction of $96.98, or 26 per cent under the last accepted bid for this material. The Carbon company, which never before has stood a large government armor contract, and the Carnegie Steel company were the only bidders.

Secretary Daniels attributes the saving of $375,000 to the government on this contract to the nation in favor of establishing a third armor plate factory. In the past it has been the custom to divide contracts between all bidders on the ground of promptness and efficiency, but this year have put the steel mills into line.

Real competition developed today for the first time in years. The navy, however, will not interfere with Secretary Daniels' determination to press upon congress the government-owned plant plan.

ONE DEPUTY IS KILLED, ANOTHER SHOT AT FAIR

Nashville, Tenn., August 23.—Charles Jones, aged 21, shot and killed Deputy Sheriff John Bowman, aged 42, and seriously wounded Deputy Sheriff Hardie Jones, aged 40, at Lafalette, Tenn., according to a telephone message received from there tonight. The tragedy occurred at the county fair, and it is stated that Sam Jones, aged 19, brother of Charles Jones, was creating a disturbance when officers attempted to arrest him. Charles Jones fired at the officers, it is said. Bowman receiving shots in the breast and side, and Hardie Jones being shot in the side and arm.

After Bowman had been killed, Charles Jones fired a third shot into his head. The only other shot fired was by Deputy Hardie Jones, and it struck Sam Jones in the arm. Sam Jones was arrested by Sheriff Hayes on a charge of murder and will be given a hearing Monday morning.

SLEPT IN WOODEN BOX TO AVOID A DRAUGHT

Portsmouth, N. H., August 23.—Robert O. Treadwell, who, according to his friends, slept at night in a wooden box in order to avoid the possibility of a draught, died at his home here today, aged 99 years. He was once an instructor in languages at Harvard university. On one occasion Dr. Treadwell's eccentricities were the subject of legal proceedings, but the court before whom he was summoned declared him sane.

BRYAN'S ACT DISMAYS MONEY "INSURGENTS"

But Opposition to the Currency Measure Is Not Entirely Routed.

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington, August 23.—(Special.)—William J. Bryan's timely support of the administration bill yesterday and the opposition to Representative Robert L. Henry's amendment, which, defining interlocking directorates, has temporarily dismayed the opposition, but not routed it completely.

Mr. Henry now claims he will secure for his amendment on agricultural currency more than the 60 votes given yesterday for the other amendment.

Tribble's Amendment.

Representative Tribble, of Georgia, introduced today a compromise amendment which it is understood both Representative Underwood, the democratic leader, and Representative Carter Glass, chairman of the banking and currency committee, have agreed to. It provides:

"That on the indorsement of a member bank of the Federal Reserve Bank any discount notes and bills of exchange arising out of agricultural, industrial or commercial transactions, of the grade or class have been used or are to be used in the production of such transactions, and which the Federal Reserve Board shall have the right to determine or define may be rediscounted by any such Federal Reserve Bank at not less than one per cent above the highest rate established by the Federal Reserve Board for discounting bills of exchange drawn against actually existing values and now actually owned by the party or parties negotiating or trading in stocks, bonds or other investment securities. Notes and bills admitted to discount under the terms of this paragraph must have a maturity of not more than sixty days."

The bills progressed so rapidly today with the administration currency bill that action will probably be completed until Monday. It was taken seventeen of the fifty-five pages that have been issued of any one bill. Three-fifths of the senate's time today was consumed in speeches, other than those directly relating to the bill under consideration, the principal one being that of Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska, democrat, who defended the administration currency bill.

Senator Hitchcock declared that when the bill was taken up on Monday it would be found that many of the objections which have been urged against it have been removed. He said that the bill was not a perfect measure, but that it was the best that could be framed at present.

Senator Hitchcock declared that the bill would not increase the volume of currency, but would simply make it more elastic. He said that the bill would not increase the volume of currency, but would simply make it more elastic. He said that the bill would not increase the volume of currency, but would simply make it more elastic.

COTTON ADVANCED 20 TO 23 POINTS

Bull Support and Indications of a Better Trade Demand Main Factors in Advance. Spot Cotton Closed Steady.

New York, August 23.—The cotton market more than recovered yesterday's loss during today's trading, with October contracts making new high ground for the movement, on less favorable weather news from the southwest and bullish crop accounts. Business was very active for a half session at this time of the year, and in addition to renewed covering, there was bull support as well as indications of rather a better trade demand. Closing prices were very steady, and within a point or two of the best, at a net gain of from 20 to 23 points for the day.

Early weather advices included private reports indicating good rains at a few points in Texas and Oklahoma, but there was nothing on the official map to suggest anything like good general rains in the drouthy sections, while the forecast was for clear weather in the western belt today and tomorrow.

Liverpool reported a quiet week-end market, but was probably influenced to some extent by the disappointing weather advices, as prices there were a shade better than due, and the local progress was 10 to 18 points higher.

Realizing by earlier week buyers caused some little irregularity right after the call, but the general tendency of prices was higher and active months sold 21 to 24 points above the closing figures of last night in the late trading.

A report from a traveling expert, claiming that Texas no longer had a chance of a big crop, and that the possibility of a fair crop was diminishing with each day of continued dry weather, doubtless helped the advance, while there was also a bullish weekly review from Memphis, reporting deterioration in all states except the Carolinas.

Weekly reports from the dry goods trade continued to indicate a good demand with comparatively small available supplies.

New Orleans Cotton.

New Orleans, August 23.—The cotton market took on a strong tone today, and during the market going at the highest prices of the week and the greatest gain of the week, the October and December and the December months closed at about 12.30 cents for the advance was due to unfavorable weather in Texas and Oklahoma and the reports of crops deteriorated.

On the opening the market was steady, were 8 to 10 points up in the face of continued fair weather reports and a few scattered rains in Texas but they were not taken into consideration. Shortly after the call, however, the weather bureau came out with a report of general rains in Texas and Oklahoma and the reports of crops deteriorated.

At this level, longs were heavy sellers to realize profits on the market and there was considerable selling. These set-backs happened several times during the morning, but on all of the declines the buying was in excess of the selling.

The market was dulled with telegrams from the west around the middle of the morning and the effect of the information was bullish, showing that the damage already sustained by the crops of the west was considerable and no one knows what kind of weather should be experienced from now on. Reports showed the opening of the new crop movement in the south and many more before the time for frost. This started some buying on a large scale and the market went up to 12 points over yesterday's last quotations. The close was steady at a net gain of 15 to 18 points.

WESTERN FARMERS TURNING TO SOUTH

Prince Webster Says That the Farmers, Discouraged by Drouth, Have Eyes on This Section.

That the farmers of the middle west, greatly discouraged over the fearful drouth conditions which have prevailed out there this summer, have their eyes set on the south, is the report brought back by J. Prince Webster, rate expert of the railroad commission, who has just returned from a business trip through Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan.

Mr. Webster "reports that in the states which he visited there had not been rain for six weeks and more, and that the corn crop was literally burned up in many places and a total failure.

"Everywhere I went," said Mr. Webster, "I found that the farmers had their faces turned towards the south. They are thoroughly discouraged over the situation in their own states and showed the keenest interest in southern people and southern conditions.

"I feel sure that one of the results of the crop failure this year in the middle western states will be a wholesale immigration of western farmers to our section. They seem particularly interested in Georgia, and I have no doubt that this state will profit greatly by the tide of immigration which is sure to turn in our direction.

"The conditions in the west this year are really tragic. I passed through counties in which the corn was twisted up and dried brown and where the farmers can hardly expect to realize a cent from their year's labor.

"I found the people everywhere making inquiries about farming conditions in the southern states and large numbers of the farmers throughout the middle west are ready to move south if they receive the proper encouragement. There is little doubt that the enterprising western farmers, once they have their eyes turned in this direction, will do great things for the development of both Georgia and the other southern states."

Mr. Webster was very much impressed with the efficiency of the railroad commissions in the states which he visited, particularly with that in Wisconsin.

"The Wisconsin commission," said Mr. Webster, "after five years' labor, has accurately figured out the exact cost of freight transportation for any article of freight that may be shipped. Their investigations have been closely followed by the interstate commerce commission and the national commission is following the policy laid out by the Wisconsin commission in many particulars.

"I found that in Minnesota, the railroad commission does much of the work which is done in Georgia by the department of agriculture. They inspect grain, having 300 inspectors for that purpose, and also look after weights and measures. They have a room, popularly called 'Chamber of Horrors,' in which are kept for public inspection the false weights and measures confiscated by the commission. The exhibition of these false weights and measures at the state fair each year is said to have very wholesome effect on the merchants who are inclined to be dishonest."

OVER THREE MILLIONS LOPPED BY VETOES

Austin, Texas, August 23.—Governor O. B. Colquitt, today in a series of sweeping vetoes, cut nearly three and one-half millions dollars out of the appropriation bills passed by the special session of the legislature which ended Tuesday. As cut the appropriations for the next two years totalled one hundred millions, $11,000,000.

The governor vetoed the Warren-Wilkes bill putting the penitentiary system on a profit-sharing system.

CONVENTION DOINGS ARE BEING MAILED OUT

There are being mailed out today by Secretary A. A. Fierson, of the Cotton Seed Crushers' association of Georgia the annual proceedings of the convention recently held. In addition to the addresses delivered before this association, the proceedings contain the rules under which these members operate.

The cotton oil mills which are contributing so much to the industrial wealth of this state have already began their fall crush, and the fresh by-products of the cotton seed are already entering the market.

NO GOVERNMENT LOAN FOR AUGUSTA BANKS

Augusta, Ga., August 23.—(Special.) August banks will not participate in the $50,000,000 loan offered by the United States. This decision was reached at a meeting of the Clearing House association of Augusta at a meeting when the report of the three Augusta bankers who attended the conference between secretary of Treasury McAdoo was submitted. The statement was issued following the meeting that the banks of this city were in good condition, had sufficient money in their vaults and at their command to meet all the requirements of the crop moving season.

In September a number of Atlanta veterans will attend this encampment and a strong effort will be made to bring a goodly number of the 15,000 old soldier boys to the Gate City.

The W. A. Weatherby party of 100 from Boston have already informed Mr. Houser that they will visit the city immediately after the encampment and it is expected that several thousand more will come with them.

The office of the convention bureau was moved from its former location, 817 Empire building, to the chamber rooms on the fifth floor of the Empire Friday

CLAIM AGENTS TO MEET AT MACON SEPTEMBER 16

Macon, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—The annual conference of the railroad claim agents of the southeastern territory will be held in Macon September 16 and 17 at the Hotel Dempsey, this announcement being made today by George Graves, of Cincinnati, chairman of the organization and general claim agent for the Queen and Crescent system. It is expected that representatives of forty railroads in the southeastern territory will be in attendance of about 100 delegates, in all.

ATLANTA'S AUTO SHOW SLATED FOR NOVEMBER

Committee on Arrangements Is Making Plans for Biggest Exhibit in City's History.

Atlanta's auto show for this year has been set for November 8 to 15.

The committee on arrangements decided that point last week and have already begun to set things in order for the big event.

From the present outlook, the association will have for the show-goers this year many pleasant surprises.

One of the big features of the show will be Sousa's band.

Although the musicians of the March King have not yet been signed up, negotiations are on to bring them here in November to do the music making for the show. These negotiations are favorably advanced and the hopes of the automobile men are that they will be able to get this famous band for the week.

Elaborate plans are being made for the decorations of the auditorium. The color scheme this fall will be blue and white.

Local dealers are communicating with their factories and making arrangements to have the biggest and best exhibits here this fall that the factories of the country can produce. The 1914 models of every make represented in Atlanta, and then some, may be expected. Accessory men are getting ready for a display of goods unexcelled by any show in the country.

The arrangements committee will be the busiest set of men in Atlanta for the next few months. They will meet one day this week, when something more definite may be known at this early date.

If you've got an idea take it to 'em.

The committee consists of R. N. Reed, of the Reed Oil company, chairman; J. K. Gewinner, of the Johnson-Gewinner Co.; Johnny Tole, of the S. B. Stearns company; George R. Hanson, of the Oakland company; George McCutcheon, of the Buick company; H. A. Price, of the B. H. Goodrich company; K. T. McKinley, of the Ohio Electric company, and Willie West, of the Firestone Tire company.

HUSBAND IS ARRESTED FOR ATTACK ON WIFE

At an early hour Saturday morning the police were called to 84 Lindsay street to quell a disturbance that had aroused the neighbors, and upon arriving, were told that Mrs. H. Kent, aged collector in the employ of Jones & Kennedy, 91 South Forsyth street, had been unmercifully beating his wife, striking her with his fist until she fell unconscious to the floor, sustaining a broken arm and other injuries from the fall.

Mrs. Kent was taken to Grady hospital, where her injuries were given attention, but on account of her age her injuries will not permit her to appear in court to testify against her husband for some days. She is 66 years old, and her husband is 55. They have been married eleven years, coming to Atlanta some years ago from Marlow, Ga.

Kent was arrested by Call Officer Anderson. He made bond in the sum of $100, and upon his release started for the hospital to see his wife. An interne carried a message to Mrs. Kent stating that her husband wanted to see her and straighten matters out, whereupon she broke into fresh sobs, and declared that she never wanted to see him again. Mrs. Kent avers that her husband struck her without provocation.

Kent contends that his wife was to blame for the trouble, in that she refused to turn over to him certain tools with which he did gardening work about the house, and that becoming exasperated at her refusal he struck her with the flat of his hand.

WASHINGTON, GA., WANTS BETTER TRAIN SCHEDULE

Washington, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—For better schedules on the Washington branch of the Georgia railroad, which will affect materially the business operation between this city and Atlanta, Augusta and Athens, the Washington Chamber of Commerce has named a strong committee to appear before the officials of the railroad within the next few days.

The proposed change is being heartily backed and approved by the citizens and business interests between Washington and Union Point, particularly. The proposed change which is being sought by Washington is for the train which now runs between Athens and Union Point every day be continued on to Washington instead of stopping at Union Point over night. By this arrangement, passengers coming from Atlanta and intermediate points to any town on the local branch in the afternoon will be picked up by the train out of Athens, which would reach Washington about 6:30 in the afternoon. In this way the tedious delay of nearly three hours at Barnett would be eliminated.

BELL ADDS NEW PHASE TO EXTRADITION LAW

Olney McCormick, of Philadelphia, arrested as he was leaving the federal prison last Thursday where he served two years on a charge of using the mails to defraud, was released from custody on a writ of habeas corpus by Judge George L. Bell Saturday.

In liberating the prisoner, Judge Bell established a new extradition phase, holding that under the constitution of the United States, McCormick did not flee from Pennsylvania to Georgia, but was brought here by the federal authorities to serve sentence.

McCormick was convicted of operating a fake lumber scheme and defrauding people by use of the mails.

OFFICER PAT OF MACON GROWS CELERY-LETTUCE

Macon, Ga., August 23.—(Special.)—The fame of Patrolman aPt Pierce as a gardener is spreading. His latest accomplishment is the growing of a "cellery-lettuce" plant, known to the scientists as "lucullus." This plant, according to Patrolman Pierce, can be used instead of lettuce, asparagus, spinach, beets, cabbage and several other varieties of vegetables. The plant comes from the Orient, where, according to Patrolman Pierce, they raise opium and harems.

GOOD ROADS CONGRESS TO MEET IN AUGUSTA

Augusta, Ga., August 23.—(Special.) The program committee in charge of preparations for the good roads congress to be held in Augusta in connection with the Georgia-Carolina fair in November, composed of Judge William F. Eve, of Augusta, president of the Georgia Federation of Good Roads Authorities, Hon. J. D. Price, Georgia commissioner of agriculture; Hon. e. J. Watson, South Carolina commissioner of agriculture, and others will forward invitations to Governor Slaton, Senators Bacon and Smith, of Georgia, the South Carolina senators, chairmen of the pots roads committees of both houses of congress and numerous others to attend, and deliver addresses during the convention here.

That Governor Slaton has expressed his desire to attend this assembly here, which the promoters propose to make the largest of its kind ever held in this state, is intimated by officials of the movement here. Plans are on foot now to secure exhibits of good roads constructing machinery from the manufacturers, and it is stated several roads experts from the national public service department will have charge of the numerous demonstrations of good roads building during the week.

Hydro-Aeroplane Record.

Chicago, August 23.—Glenn L. Martin, of Los Angeles, established a new passenger-carrying record for hydro-aeroplanes yesterday, when he flew for 16 minutes and 10 seconds with three women aboard his air craft. The total weight of the four was 515 pounds. The former record held by Tony Jannus was 3 minutes.

PLAN TO RAISE $60,000 TO ADVERTISE AUGUSTA

Augusta, Ga., Augusta 23.—(Special.)—Arrangements have been completed for the inauguration of a civic revival to raise $60,000 to place Augusta on the map securely and to advertise her trade interests and manufacturing possibilities. With a great hydro-electric development at Augusta, capable of furnishing power for many new manufactories, almost completed, and the city on the verge of one of its most prosperous trade seasons, the commercial bodies have determined to take quick active steps to place before the world its numerous advantages.

The work of raising this sum will le in the hands of A. W. McKeand, specialist in this work.

Chaplain for West Point.

West Point, N. Y., August 23.—Rev. Percy Silver, an Episcopalian, formerly chaplain at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., has been appointed by President Wilson chaplain of the West Point military academy.

TAMMANY BACKS M'CALL FOR MAYOR

Gaynor to Run for Gaynor League and Fusionists Will Support Mitchell—A Lively Campaign Seems Assured.

New York, August 23.—Edward E. McCall, chairman of the public service commission, tonight was designated as mayoralty candidate for the democratic city committee.

Mr. McCall's selection by the 630 delegates as leader of the Tammany forces was unanimous, as has been forecast since it appeared from yesterday's announcements that the Tammany leaders had decided not to renominate Mayor Gaynor and that he would be nominated by the "Gaynor league" with a complete independent city ticket of its own.

Herman A. Metz was unanimously designated for comptroller. Mr. Metz held this office during Mayor McClellan's second term. Congressman Joseph A. Goulden was unanimously selected for president of the board of aldermen.

Planks of the Platform.

The main planks of the platform are:

A declaration for rapid economy in municipal administration; indorsement of the present subway policy of extension; home rule, as against "interference by the state legislature;" equal tax assessments to relieve burdens of small owners and rent-payers; to remove from police supervision "the suppression of gambling, disorderly houses and kindred vices."

The part of the platform regarding the police situation was generally taken as an indorsement of District Attorney Whitman's work and talk that Tammany would indorse him was revived.

Mayor Gaynor's determination to run for re-election as an independent guarantees one of the liveliest municipal campaigns New York has seen in several years. There will be three tickets in the field—democratic, fusion and Gaynor.

Gaynor to Have Full Ticket.

The fusionists, who include republicans, progressives, independent leaguers and some independent democrats, have selected John Purroy Mitchell, Mayor Gaynor's run as the candidate of the "Gaynor league" with a full Gaynor ticket behind him.

The mayor will make his appeal to anti-Tammany sentiment in all parties, but his chief backers now are anti-Tammany democrats. The organization democrats maintained that he would not touch the Tammany vote, but would take from the fusion ticket many independent democrats who would not vote for anyone as a Tammany candidate, but would support him as an independent.

Neither the Tammany men nor the fusionists would admit today that the nomination of Gaynor would weaken their strength. Republicans and fusion leaders said they expected Mayor Gaynor would draw from the regular democratic ticket many voters who sided with Governor Sulzer in his fight against Tammany.

John Purroy Mitchell, fusion candidate for mayor, tonight was likewise designated for that office by the Independence league party. An attempt to indorse the rest of the fusion ticket was blocked by adjournment until next Tuesday evening.

The First Tomatoes.

(From The Indianapolis News.)

Ten years ago the late United States Senator David Turple published a little book "Sketches of My Own Times," which contained many interesting items concerning Indiana in its earlier days. Looking through this book the other day, the following account of the introduction of the tomato along the Wabash in the early thirties appeared:

"The flat boatmen brought home (from New Orleans) as curiosities, their natural specimens of southern products, dry twigs and leaves of the evergreen oak, Spanish moss, joints of the sugar cane and stalks of the cotton plant, with the boll and blossom. One of the river sailors had brought home with him some seeds of the tomato. He gave a few of them to his acquaintances in the settlement. They were planted and grew thriftily. We had only one or two plants in the garden. The fruit was beautiful to look at, but it was used only for ornament. No one thought of eating or cooking them. This old flat boatsman planted a large bed of the tomatoes the next year. Yet they ripened, cooked and at them. In fact, he was very fond of them. He told us the almost incredible tale that the negroes in the south-west set them raw and seemed to thrive on them; that the white folk cooked them as he did.

"Despite this example the prejudice against the tomato continued, and it was not until many years after this that it came into general use or was found in the market. The custom of using this now favorite vegetable as food doubtless came to us very slowly up the river from the south. It is the only tropical plant which we have successfully cultivated, and it preserves, even in our climate, one distinct feature of its southern origin, since it may frequently be seen during the season of its growth bearing like the orange, blossoms, green fruit and ripe at the same time."

The Way of the World.

(From the Chicago Record-Herald.)

Some day the world may care—
Say in a hundred years from now—
For the man with the bushy hair
And the pallid and lofty brow;
People may gaze at the rusty pen
With which he aimed at the hearts of men,
And the praise he craved may be given then,
And his name in a temple of fame may glow,
For that is the way of the world, you know.

In a dark and dismal nook
Where gladness never finds its way,
Some man with a hungry look
May labor for little pay;
And when he is dead and has ceased to care,
The relic hunters may gather there,
And pay to sit in his cheap old chair;
Thus they will settle the debt we owe,
For that is the way of the world, you know.

Excuse of the Future.

(From The Washington Herald.)

"John, where have you been so long?"

"As I was coming home in my monoplane, dear, I got caught in an air-hole, and couldn't get out for the longest time."

Atlanta Resident 40 Years Ago Finds City Greatly Changed Now

In 1872, forty years ago, a young man came to Atlanta, hunting for something to do by which he could make a living. He was strong and willing to work, and within a short time had attracted the attention of Atlantans who showed a disposition to help him along. So it was that Fred Massa, now a well-to-do business man of Ogden, Utah, opened the first wholesale ice cream parlors in Atlanta.

He equipped the basement of the Healey building, Marietta and Peachtree streets, most attractively, and when the winter months came on he converted his ice cream rendezvous into an oyster palace. But when Atlanta went dry, in 1887, Mr. Massa closed up and went west, where he has been since.

"I have heard and read much of Atlanta," said he, talking to old-time friends, "but I hadn't the slightest idea the town had grown so much. Atlanta's growth has certainly been marvelous."

INSURANCE MEN ENJOY SIXTH ANNUAL BANQUET

Wilmer Moore Lauded by Speakers at Closing Event of Anniversary Club Gathering.

With a brilliant assemblage of "hundred point" insurance representatives and a number of the leading Atlanta citizens the sixth annual banquet of the Anniversary club of the Southern States Life Insurance company was held in the banquet hall of the Hotel Ansley under the most auspicious circumstances last night.

The flag of the Southern States Life Insurance company, two red bars crossed upon a field of white, was hung behind the speakers' table between the stars and Stripes and the Stars and Bars.

The occasion not only marked the success of the Southern Life, but was a tribute to unbounded industry and enterprise as expressed in the person of Wilmer L. Moore, president of the company.

Moore Introduces Walden.

Mr. Moore presided in his happiest vein and when cigars and demitasse were the order introduced the first speaker of the evening, J. C. Walden, Sr., of Alabama, president of the Anniversary club through virtue of having written the most paid-for insurance for the firm than any other representative during the past year, as "a doer of things, a man who has succeeded through the industry and his business." Mr. Walden in a few chosen words expressed his pleasure at being in Atlanta under such circumstances.

In introducing Clark Howell, editor of The Constitution, Mr. Moore paid a high tribute to the press at large. "The press is the greatest educational factor in the country," he said. "It is the leader of the people and molder of public opinion. It amplifies the citizenship and guards the safety of the nation. And among the papers of the country The Constitution stands out pre such. It is a paper known throughout the country as a grand supporter of the democratic party. And the name of Howell one of the leaders of thought in the southland, is inseparably connected with it."

Mr. Howell expressed his pleasure at being present and said, "If every man in the city had done his civic duty as your president, Mr. Moore, has done, Atlanta would today be capital of 1,000,000 inhabitants, instead of the present number. It is mainly due to Moore that your company has risen as it has. He is a man of confidence, with pluck and backbone and honesty which has not only made this great company grow, but the city a better member of commerce as well." Mr. Howell also paid a high tribute to other Atlanta men.

W. S. Witham made the hit of the evening from the standpoint of humor, throwing his audience into peals of laughter with his satires on the French.

Asa Candler Praises Moore.

Asa G. Candler made a speech witty and serious in turn and in concluding said: "It takes men like Moore to make the community which we have. I wish to say that it took nerve to start and keep going a great institution such as the Southern States Life Insurance company in 1906 and the splendid times of the next few years. Yes he has succeeded, which proves the mettle of the man."

The final speaker of the evening was Eugene Black, who with alternate flashes of wit and seriousness, kept the attention of his auditors till the last. He is the Southern States Life Insurance company man who has made Atlanta the greater center of southern insurance which it is," he said.

One of the features of the evening was the splendid cabaret performance given. Miss Grace Duncan, a well-known and popular singer, contributed much to the success of the evening and was encored time and time again, especially her rendering of several rag-time selections.

Goodwin Wins.

New York, August 23.—L. J. Goodwin, of the New York Athletic Club, won the metropolitan A. A. U. championship one-half mile swim in open water off Travers island today in 13:00 3-5, which is 23 2-5 second faster than his time for the same event last year. The outdoor American record for the distance, 12:18 2-5, is held by C. M. Daniels. The high diving championship was won by N. Robrent, City A. C., with 141.2 points.

Peril in Turned Up Trousers.

(From The London Daily News.)

Trousers are to continue more than ever in the peg top vein, and permanent turned up ends will be general. These "P. T. Us," as they are professionally termed, have been most violently condemned in The Medical Officer.

"We shudder to think," says the interesting organ of hygiene, "of these accumulations which must be found in these receptacles, and as we believe it is the custom to have the turn up made as a permanent pocket it is doubtful whether during the period of wear any attempt is made to get rid of the accumulation. We hope that this prevailing fashion will be but a short madness, and that men ere long will be properly clothed and in their right minds."

This country consumes annually about one-third the world's output of lead and of copper.

Middies Are Returning.

Norfolk, Va., August 23.—With midshipmen on board, nearly every ship of the Atlantic fleet at a late hour tonight was approaching the Virginia capes. The fleet is expected to steam up Chesapeake bay to Annapolis tomorrow to put the midshipmen ashore. The fleet will then return to Hampton Roads to prepare for target practice.

HE'D DIVORCE WIVES WHO ARE SUFFRAGISTS

Earl of Antrim Proposes Drastic Law Against Women in Politics.

London, August 23.—Militant suffragists were sadly in need of an active worker and fighter when Lady Sybil Smith offered herself for the post. She is a daughter of Lord and Lady Antrim and the wife of Mr. V. H. Smith, a partner in the big English banking firm of Morgan, Grenfell and company. Since fighting for "the vote" made a wreck of Lady Constance Lytton, sister of Lord Lyston, there was no titled woman to fight the police. It would be hard to find a greater enthusiast than Lady Constance's successor. She is very Irish and daring enough for anything. It now transpires that she has hatched half the cleverest of the militant suffragists' plots and that she is always ready to do that which she devises.

But the poor old Earl of Antrim, one of the old school, with the Irishman's horror of seeing any of his womenkind in the public eye, has been frantic and declares that there ought to be a law by which a man can divorce a wife who is a suffragist. When Lady Sybil was recently arrested in the house of commons with Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, she was more active in her resistance than any other prisoner and with her jewelled rings gave the policeman a mark that will be there for some time. She says that she is prepared to die for "the cause" and would rather give up her family than it.

PIONEER PHOTOGRAPHER DIES IN PENSACOLA, FLA.

A. G. Grant, formerly of this city, who died in Pensacola, Fla., August 1 in his eighty-seventh year, was ranked as the south's oldest photographer.

A. G. GRANT.

He was an Ohioan by birth, but lived in Atlanta for about fifteen years, moving away about three years ago. He was formerly connected with Clark & Motes.

He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. T. G. Hoffman, and two grandchildren. He was grandfather of the Hoffman boys who were drowned at Piedmont park recently.

PRIMARY CALLED FOR SEPTEMBER 30

Fights Over Open Sunday and on Charter May Be Injected in the Coming Political Scraps.

The first primary for the election of nominees to fill vacancies in council and on the aldermanic board is set for September 30.

The call for the primary was issued by the city executive committee, at a meeting held at noon, Saturday. Aside from calling the primary, the committee decided to close the registration lists on September 9, and according to members of the committee, the list of candidates will close also on that date. However, this is a matter which will be decided by the sub-committee composed of T. O. Poole, chairman; R. B. Blackburn, J. E. Belcher, H. F. Garrett, Russell Shirley, Alvin Richards, Fred F. Lester, Robert C. Clarke and J. O. Cochran.

The sub-committee named above was appointed by Committee Chairman John Y. Smith, Saturday morning, and it was instructed to get busy in the matter of assessing the candidates. There are fifteen places to be filled, and up to the present time twenty-one candidates have announced. The candidates are:

For Counsel—First ward, B. F. Byfield; second ward, D. Rogers (for re-election); third ward, Orville H. Hall (for re-election); fourth ward, Lee Haxan, R. E. George and A. W. Partinger; fifth ward, Jesse B. Lee and Dr. H. M. Etheridge; sixth ward, Jesse M. Wood (for re-election); seventh ward, Frank Reynolds and H. M. Patterson; ninth ward, Charles W. Smith (for re-election); tenth ward, Claude C. Mason (for re-election).

For Aldermen—First ward, C. H. Kelley; second ward, James E. Warren (for re-election) and J. C. Harrison; fourth ward, Albert Thomson and W. B. Everett (for re-election); seventh ward, Jesse W. Armistead, eighth ward, W. A. Hancock and John S. Owens.

Zode Smith Unopposed.

The office of general manager of the water department will also be voted on in both primaries. The term of W. Zode Smith expired on the Wednesday after the first Monday in February. Smith has announced that he will again make the race. He has a clear field up to the present time, and it is not expected that he will have any opposition.

It is probable that the subcommittee will impose an entrance fee of $75 on each of the candidates for council and the aldermanic board, and $200 on the candidates for the office of general manager of the waterworks.

Two big issues in the campaign will be charter revision and a liberal Sunday policy for Atlanta. It is said that another effort will be made by the picture show owners to allowed to open on Sunday. Some members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America have already taken an active interest in the approaching campaign.

One of the first candidates approached on the subject of Sunday picture shows was John S. Owens, candidate for alderman in the eighth ward, against W. A. Hancock.

He declared that he was against Sunday pictures. Several other candidates for aldermen have been approached but have declined to commit themselves on their attitude on the subject of Sunday shows.

May Inject Charter Issue.

Advocates of the charter framed by the committee of fifteen and ratified at a mass meeting by more than 3,500 qualified voters and which council refused to submit to the people or the legislature, are going to inject the charter issue into the campaign. Mayor James G. Woodward, leader of the charter reform movement, is expected to enter the campaign in an effort to muster his following to defeat the revamped charter framed by council and adopted by the legislature with only two changes.

In the charter election, the voters will vote on the charter itself, also pass on the question of whether or not the amendments suggested by the legislature be tacked on the document.

The legislative amendments provide for curtailing the powers of the city recorder by limiting the amount of the maximum fine to $200. The present charter gives the recorder the right to impose a maximum fine of $500. The other amendment provides for the initiative, referendum and recall which places within the hands of the people an instrument with which they can remove an officer of the city government for cause.

The other features of the charter, particularly with reference to the unwieldly board system, remain the same.

CITY HALL GOSSIP

Mrs. Woodward at the Hall.

Mrs. James G. Woodward, the wife of the mayor, made her first visit to city hall Thursday. Mrs. Woodward paid a bill at the water office, and then visited the executive office.

Greer For County Board.

Councilman J. J. Greer, of the fifth, is being urged by friends to run for county commissioner at the expiration of his term. Councilman Greer has gained considerable knowledge of the needs of the city and county by reason of his service on council street and other committees. His term in council expires in December and Dr. Etheridge is making the race for the place.

Everett v. Thomson.

Alderman James B. Everett, better known as Alderman "Jim" Everett, is out for re-election as alderman from the fourth. Councilmen Thomson will oppose him. Both members of the fourth ward delegation have strong followings and the race will be exciting.

Delinquent Taxes.

Approximately $2,500,000 worth of property is being levied against because the owners have failed to pay taxes and costs. Tax investigator Sledge Collier has completed a list which he has turned over to Marshal Fuller. Some of the taxes date back as far as 1885, but a majority are for 1910-11 and 12. The amount due the city is about $50,000. In the event the owners do not pay up the property will revert to the city to be used for whatever purpose the grounds committee might designate.

Park Row Over.

"Hello, Dan!" "Howdy, Oscar." That's the way President Cochran and Manager Carey, of the park board, salute each other these days. Doesn't seem like a row between them, although some bodies around the hall insist there is. The fact of the matter is, Manager Carey and President Cochran are both working for the good of the park department.

Harwell May Resign.

Uncle Adam Harwell, alderman from the first ward, is seriously considered resigning, because of his health. Since being inducted into office, Alderman Harwell has not been in the best of health, and was forced to make several trips out of the city in an effort to regain his strength. He says now he needs a long rest, which he can secure only by resigning. Alderman Harwell is a member of the sewer committee and has a number of important committee places. He is Mayor Woodward's warm personal friend.

The Fable of the Brainy Girl.

(From Life.)

There was once a pretty girl who loved brains. She was loved (among others) by three men. Said the first man:

"I cannot possibly live without you. Unless you say 'Yes' I shall start for the west coast of Africa and encourage a fever to carry me off."

Said the second man:

"Life without you is a desert waste. If you say 'No' and I still live, it will be only from force of duty."

Said the third man:

"You cannot refuse me! For I shall spend my life in making you supremely happy."

Now the father of the pretty girl (from whom she had inherited her brains) was a subscriber to the telegraph, and when they had gone he said:

"My dear daughter, I knew you would agree with me that those young men should be spoked into. I will proceed to do so and will let you know the results."

Later he returned and said:

"I find upon careful inquiry and getting a business ratin g that each one of them is well off. They all have plenty of money, good standing, and you cannot possibly make a mistake."

"Thank you very much, papa dear," said the pretty girl (who had brains), "but while you have been looking up these men I have been looking up their characters, and I find that each has married a perfectly worthless fellow, who is reckless, dissipated, and can not even support himself."

Moral—You might just as well not have any brains when it comes to a love affair.

The Failure.

(From the Detroit Free Press.)

It may be I shall fail,
That when I'm called away
And quit this earthly vale,
No one who lives shall say:
"He did this splendid deed,
His money this thing bought."
Yet such I shall not need
If nobly I have fought.

I need not reach my goal,
I need not win the prize,
The merit of the soul
In honest striving lies.
And though I fail and I
A losing fight have fought,
God will not me deny
If nobly I have fought.

Southern Belgium is likely to obtain a fresh water supply from an underground lake which was discovered a short time ago. At present it is dependent on rain water.

HURRAH! HURRAH!

Oh! How I suffered! The many agonizing nights I passed without sleep on account of burning, itching skin and the humiliation of a skin covered with pimples. At last they are a thing of the past. KRESKO accomplished all this. It was a surprise and a delight. Cooling and healing properties made themselves felt immediately, and in a short time a perfect cure was accomplished. Anyone suffering from any skin affliction should use KRESKO and KRESKO Soap.

NEW ORGAN PIECES FOR RECITAL TODAY

The following program is announced by the Atlanta Music Festival association for the free concert at the Audi-

E. SETON BLYTH,

Of Edinburgh, Scotland, who will play at the organ recital this afternoon.

torium this afternoon, at which E. Seton Blythe, the Scotch organist, will be the soloist:

Grand Offertroire—Lefebure Wely.

Andantino, in D-flat—Lemare.

(a) Adoration from "The Holy City," Gaul; (b) "Alpine Pastorale"—Flaxler.

Largo, from "Xerxes"—Handel.

Sonata Da Camera—A. L. Peace.

(a) "Twilight;" Harker; (b) Intermezzo, from "Cavalleria Rusticana"—Mascagni.

Chant Angelique—Grey.

It will be noticed that nearly all the numbers, with the exception of the Intermezzo from "Cavalleria," are new as organ pieces in Atlanta. The concert begins promptly at 4 o'clock, and everybody has been invited to be present.

Mr. Blyth is one of a number of distinguished organists who are being brought here this fall by the Music Festival association in the effort to choose a successor to Dr. Percy J. Starnes.

Killed by His Tenant.

Asheville, N. C., August 23.—R. F. Smathers, 35 years old, a well-known farmer and large land owner at Canton, near here, was shot and instantly killed about 7 o'clock tonight by John Waldroup, a tenant on one of Mr. Smathers' farms. The shooting occurred over some trivial argument Waldroup using a shotgun and blowing off part of Smathers' head. Waldroup escaped and is being hunted through the mountains by a band of armed men.

Mrs. Sarah C. Willingham.

Mrs. Sarah Clifton Willingham, aged 87 years, died Saturday morning at her residence, 223 south avenue. She is survived by one son, W. T. Willingham; one daughter, Miss Alice Willingham, and four grandchildren. Funeral services will be held at the residence this afternoon at 4 o'clock and the body will be taken Monday morning at 7:45 o'clock to Stockbridge, Ga., for interment.

ENNIS TELLS STORY OF TRAIN ROBBERIES

He Says That Barney Lewis Assisted in Both the Hold-Ups.

Hattiesburg, Miss., August 23.—Jerry Ennis, in jail here charged with robbing a Mobile and Ohio train near Corinth, Miss., early last year, and a New Orleans and Northeastern train a few months later, according to the officers, made a full confession of the part he played in the Mobile and Ohio hold-up the robbers got very little according to the confession. He implicates Barney Lewis, who, he said, helped in both robberies.

"After the Mobile and Ohio robbery," according to the officers who quote Ennis, "Lewis came to me and induced me to go with him on another expedition. We boarded the New Orleans and Northwestern train No. 2 at Purvis, Miss., and when a short distance out we covered the engineer and fireman and made them walk back to the express car. After demands were made the door of the car was opened. While I held the engineer and fireman covered, Lewis entered the car and used explosives until his supply was exhausted, after which he used mine. Lewis left the car with an armful of packages. There was no jewelry. The papers were burned and, just before reaching Winona junction we took another train for Alabama. The packages were buried. About September 1, Lewis came to my home in Alabama and gave me $9,000, and told me it was my share of the booty of the New Orleans and Northeastern hold-up."

It was learned on good authority that Engineer John Maher and Fireman Milton Jones identified Lewis and Ennis in the Forrest county jail today as the men who committed the robbery.

Dawn.

The night was darw, though sometimes a fain star
A little while a little space made bright.
The night was long and like an iron bar
Lay heavy on the land; till o'er the sea,
Slowly, within the east, there grew a light
Which, half was starlight, and half seemed day
The herald of a greater. The pale white
Turned slowly to pale rose, and up the hight
Of heaven slowly climbed. The gray sea grew
Rose-colored like the sky. A white gull flew Straight toward the utmost boundary of the east,
Where slowly the rose gathered and increased,
It was on the opening of a door
By one that in his hand a lamp doth hold.
Whose flame is hidden by the garment's fold—
The still air moves, the wide room is less dim —to bright the east became, the ocean turned
Dark and dark, against the brightening sky—
Sharper against the sky the long sea line.
The billows of the breakers on the shore
Were green like leaves whereon no sun doth shine,
Though white the outer branches of the tree,
From rose to red the level heaven grew
Then sudden, as if a sword fell from on high,
A blade of gold flashed on the horizon's rim.
—Richard Watson Gilder.

Ossifer, Do Your Duty.

(From The Cincinnati Inquirer.)

"You are getting stout, aren't you?" asked the Newsy Neighbor.

"Yes," replied the Busy Man, "I ate some green peaches yesterday, and they doubled me and increased my sighs."

Wanted—An Offer on 290 Myrtle Street

When a bargain in real estate is put on the market there are always certain conditions that are brought to bear upon the present owner, making it essential that a disposal be made of the property at once. If these conditions were not of a pressing nature the property would never be offered at anything like the present price.

The persons who always come out ahead on these trades are the ones who size up these conditions for what they are worth and take advantage of them at once.

On one of Atlanta's prettiest streets—Myrtle street—we offer a 10-room home on a corner lot, 60x190 feet, faces east and is elevated. This home is absolutely up to date in all respects.

The owner is in such condition that a disposal must be made of this property. Make us an offer and we will submit it, regardless of what it is.
